EVIDENCE BARES ENGLISH KING AS GUN SALESMAN

Washington, D. C., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—Evidence was presented before the senate munitions committee today that the king of England, American warships, and women of doubtful character were used by armament makers in their mad scramble for the world's business in the construction of war materials.

KING GEORGE V.

It was revealed that King George V. personally intervened in 1932 in an attempt to stop the sale of guns to Poland by an American concern so the order would be thrown to English munitions makers. On the other hand, it was shown that the American concern, the Driggs Ordnance and Engineering company of New York, had the aid of the United States war department in the same deal. No one has yet obtained the contract.

Mention of the king caused a hush to fall upon the spectators in the committee rooms, where the senate group is carrying on its extensive investigation into the profits of war. Committee members and spectators were unusually quiet as a cablegram referring to the British ruler was read into the record.

Message from Poland.

The message was from the Polish representative of the Driggs company in Warsaw. It stated that the king summoned the Polish ambassador in London to intervene. The cablegram read:

"King of Great Britain summoned our ambassador in London and intervened in 3 inch or 75 AA 50 caliber gun on new mobile mount letter Dec. 15, 1928, contract. Chief stands high pressure but great difficulty hold situation. You must hasten summoning commission to America. Anxiously await your telegram promised for today."

"That's the sort of thing that shouldn't be made public," declared Louis L. Driggs, head of the Driggs company, who had repeatedly complained against the exposure of diplomatic matters.

"What do you make of that reference to the king?" asked Senator Pope [Dem., Ida.], who had read the cablegram.

Called Common Royal Gesture.

"It's the same sort of gesture that British royalty has been engaging in lately," answered the witness, a small, somberly dressed man with a gray mustache, whose company has been manufacturing rapid fire naval guns for 40 years.

"For example, sending the prince of Wales to South America and making a glorified salesman out of him," the witness explained. "It's simply that the British royal family is interested in getting orders for British business."

In response to a question on the point, Driggs declared there was no doubt in his mind but that his agent was telling the truth concerning King George's intervention. He pointed out that Vickers, Ltd., the great English munitions house, was his company's chief competitor in Poland.

"Is King George a stockholder in Vickers?" inquired Senator Bone [Dem., Wash.].

"I have no way of knowing," the witness replied, shortly.

Defends Drive for Business.

"What a situation," exclaimed Senator Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.]. "We find the United States government encouraging the private sale of arms to foreign countries and the British king doing the same thing. Doesn't it make a paradox in efforts toward disarmament?"

Driggs replied that he did not think so, adding that only six countries produce munitions, while there are about 26 who want to buy them. He said that since the foreign countries were going to buy munitions some place he thought America should get its share of the business.

Several letters were produced showing that the United States war department was not only willing but anxious for Driggs to sell his guns abroad even though it disclosed to foreign governments the latest developments of this country's anti-aircraft weapons.

Driggs disclosed that the war department was willing for his concern to use some of the department's de-

BUT THE SHADOW STILL REMAINS—

His desire that his wife have a new mink coat is believed by relatives of Joseph H. McGregor, 40 years old, 6958 South Green street, to have been responsible in part for his committing suicide yesterday by leaping from the Falls View bridge at Niagara into the gorge 200 feet below.

The body has not been recovered, according to dispatches from Niagara Falls, but the man who leaped left his coat on the bridge, and in the coat a letter.

Leaves Identification in Coat.

"This will identify the writer as Joseph H. McGregor," said the letter. "I am a world war veteran. My war record is on file at the British pension ministry in Ottawa. Please notify my wife. Also see that the inclosed $2 is forwarded to the Hotel Ford, Toronto, and send my wife the keys and watch."

McGregor, a service manager for the Singer Sewing Machine company, and his wife, Mrs. Elenore Smith McGregor, resided with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Smith. Mr. Smith is a supervisor for the Cook county forest preserves.

According to Mrs. McGregor, she saw her husband last at dinner time Saturday. When he failed to return home that night or Sunday a search was started for him. There was no trace of him, however, until yesterday.

Mrs. Smith said that her son-in-law had been ill for about a year and had at times been depressed.

Recalls Pledge on Coat.

"We were all out on a party about two weeks ago," she continued, "and Joseph remembered that Elenore's birthday was Sept. 5. He had been talking about buying her the mink coat. I remember, as we were coming home, he said to her: 'Never mind about that coat. I'll see that you get it. My body ought to be good for it.' We thought it was a joke."

McGregor and his wife were married in Waukegan in 1932. He left her several thousand dollars of insurance, Mrs. Smith said.

Two other men leaped to death in the Niagara falls gorge during the last two days, it was stated in dispatches from the falls. These men were unidentified.

SCIENTIST CLAIMS VITAMIN INJECTIONS CURE DREAD DISEASES

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

ABERDEEN, Scotland, Sept. 7.—Science announced to the world today that by simple injections of vitamin C into the blood it could "clear up" dread diseases that have baffled medical men for hundreds of years.

The announcement was made at the meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science by Prof. A. Szent-Gyorgyi of the University of Szeged, Hungary, who succeeded in identifying and isolating the substance and is now recognized as Europe's foremost authority in the field.

Already medical experiments have produced "very striking and unexpected effects," Prof. Szent-Gyorgyi said. Among cures accomplished he cited cases of purpura, hemorrhages, Addison's disease, pyorrhea, nephritis and certain forms of haemophilia, a mysterious bleeding disease which in its hereditary form afflicted the former royal families of Spain and Russia.

MOUNT KILAUEA ERUPTION CAUSES BIG WINDSTORM

HILO, Hawaii, Sept. 7.—(AP)—A fiery caldron 100 acres in area, with sides nearly one-fifth of a mile high, hissed and roared today as the huge Kilauea volcano continued the tossing of fountains of lava within its pit. There was no sign of cessation of the eruption which began yesterday.

Bright fires burned along the edges of the pit. Seen from the rim 1,000 feet above, they appeared small, but in reality they were giant flames 50 to 100 feet high.

The volcano put on an awesome show, rumbling explosively while it tossed lava toward the sky. The tremendous heat ascending from the pit caused fierce winds. The wild shrieks of the wind as it tore over the plateau mingled with the throaty rumblings of the volcano and made more eerie one of earth's strangest sights.

Two Slayers Shoot Guard, Flee Oklahoma Prison

McAlester, Okla., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Two convicted slayers today shot and kidnaped a state's prison guard and escaped. Hughey Askew, the guard, was shot in the neck and taken in the prison mail truck six miles from the prison where the convicts left him and seized another motorist whose name was not known, driving away in his car. The convicts, Danvil Chastain and Burt Pope, were serving long terms for murder.

Mussolini Calls War Chiefs to Secret Parley

TARANTO, Italy, Sept. 7.—(AP)—After telling the Italian people to "be ready for any eventuality," Premier Mussolini let it be known tonight that he will hurry back to Rome for a conference of generals and divisionary commanders of the entire Italian army.

"Our people must be ready for any eventuality," Il Duce told 50,000 Italians packed into the public square here, "If we should be obliged to take the field I will be at your head."

Following this declaration it was announced that all high officers of the army have been ordered to report to Venezia palace for the conference, the subject of which was not made public, on Tuesday.

Prepare for War in Africa.

A squadron of military planes droned in maneuvers over the heads of the throngs as Mussolini, on a tour of southern Italy, made his speech.

Troops of uniformed Fascist groups met the premier on his arrival at Taranto and enthusiastic throngs waved banners and sang patriotic anthems.

Meanwhile, it was learned in authoritative quarters, troops and munitions are being sent to Italy's African colonies in Somaliland to be sure they are properly defended in event of any major conflagration in Europe.

A qualified spokesman denied rumors that military preparations in the colonies had as their objective armed invasion of Abyssinia. He characterized them as purely defensive measures.

Belgians Train Natives.

He admitted, however, that present militaristic tendencies in the Ethiopian empire were causing Italy a certain amount of preoccupation. A Belgian army mission is known to be in Abyssinia, training natives. The Abyssinians are known as born warriors, and experts here said their capacity was "formidable."

The Italian government is known to consider the European situation anything but settled, and is taking no chances on exposing Italian colonies to attacks by Abyssinians in case a European war should absorb Italy's attention at home.

Mussolini's Milan newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, published an article yesterday believed to have been inspired by Il Duce himself, which called upon "weaklings in the Fascist party either to decide to become militarists in accord with Il Duce's policies, or to relegate themselves to seminaries." It said the Fascist party "has no room in its ranks for vile ballast."

ALL SOLDIERS IN STATE RUSH TO NEW ORLEANS

Dictator Is Overruled

New Orleans, La., Sept. 7.—(AP)—State and federal courts today overruled the dictatorship which Senator Huey P. Long entered at noon today. The Louisiana Supreme court, by vote of four to one, denied writs filed by the Long faction seeking to suspend temporary orders issued yesterday by Judge Michel Provosty, prohibiting the naming of extra election commissioners and special officers by the parish board of election supervisors. Judge Wayne C. Borah in federal District court granted a preliminary injunction restraining Richard J. Gregory, city registrar of voters, who is appointed by Gov. Allen, from scratching any names from the registration list prepared for the election.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

New Orleans, La., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—With 2,200 state militiamen, the entire strength of the National Guard, camped at Jackson Barracks and along the river front, radio waves sizzling with new revelations of police protection and graft in the red-light district and gambling dens, but with business and pleasure going on as usual in the town, New Orleans moved on today toward the primary election of next Tuesday in which the old regulars, led by Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, for years in control of the city, meet at the polls with the candidate of Senator Huey Long.

As things stand, Senator Long, through the governor, O. K. Allen, his legislative investigating committee and soldiers, was in complete control of the situation. New laws which went into effect today, the result of the recent hectic session of the Louisiana legislature dominated by the Kingfish, virtually put an end to home rule in New Orleans and made this city an adjunct of the state administration of which Long is the dictator.

Test Laws at Polls Tuesday.

The unconstitutionality of these laws, the smashing of the Long power, are the real issues to be decided next Tuesday and in court action which is expected to follow.

In the meantime the city remained passive under the knowledge that the troops had taken possession. The troops' movements were quietly made, without any downtown demonstration, and few even saw any more soldiers than those assigned to guard the senator and his committee and the registration office. The majority of the troops are mere boys and regarded the assignment as a lark. They were singing and joking as they went about their camp duties. No extension of martial law, which is restricted to the committee sessions, was ordered by Gov. Allen.

Both sides issued statements today in which they said that there would be no armed men at the polls. This should make a peaceful election, although the mayor has 500 special police somewhere in the background, and there is the mysterious figure of Col. Guy R. Molony, former chief of police, who told the senate committee to "watch us" on election day.

Tells of Armed Men at Polls.

Evidence was brought out at the legislative hearing today that at the last municipal election, in which Walmsley defeated the Long candidate for mayor, Col. Molony had 100 armed men at the polls. This came from Jess McLane, ex-football star of Louisiana university, who testified that he had been hired with 75 others to work at the polls for Walmsley and that they reported to Molony. They were supposed to stop and detain voters for the opposition ticket, he said. They were all armed and furnished with ammunition.

The committee indicated that Col. Molony may be called up again before them at their session tomorrow. A lawyer named O'Keefe told a story about a holdup during the Molony régime on the police force. He said it was a frameup and that a police officer committed suicide rather than expose his chief.

Senator Long said that he had enough evidence to impeach two judges and wondered how soon the mayor would resign. This indicates another special session, which may be called on short notice. Explaining the presence of the troops the senator said:

"The legislative committee and its witnesses are not going to be further

Ships Rush to Aid of Vessel Off New Jersey

BULLETIN.

HAVANA, Sept. 8 (Saturday).—(AP)—The Morro Castle left Havana Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock for New York carrying 318 passengers and a crew of approximately 240 men. All but sixty of the passengers were tourists. The ship's captain is S. M. Wilmot.

New York, Sept. 8 [Saturday].—(AP)—The Ward liner Morro Castle, inbound from Havana and due here at 8 o'clock, was afire at 5 o'clock this morning off Scotland Light, just off Sandy Hook. It was burning so brightly that the blaze was clearly discernible through heavy rain at Asbury Park, on the New Jersey coast. Every coast guard boat on the north Jersey coast put out to the rescue. The ship sent out an S. O. S. at 3:43 a. m., eastern standard time: "Afire 20 miles east of Scotland lightship." The rest of the S. O. S. was lost. Scotland lightship is just outside Sandy Hook.

A short time later it was reported from Asbury Park the flames appeared to be sweeping the ship from "stem to stern," with not a rescue vessel in sight.

250 Persons Aboard.

A crew of more than 100 men was aboard. The number of passengers was not immediately determined, but was said to be at least 150.

Two nearby ships, the City of Savannah and the Andrea F. Luckenbach, were reported going to the aid of the blazing ship. Coast guards could see the flames shooting skyward as they launched their boats. Motor craft and surboats set out to sea. At 5 o'clock the Monarch of Bermuda reported she was 15 miles from the burning ship. It expected to reach the scene in an hour.

The acting captain of the Deal station said boats were out from stations as far north as Sandy Hook, the entrance to New York harbor, to Barnegat, more than half way to Atlantic City.

The Morro Castle left New York Sept. 1 for a seven day cruise to Havana, and was due to dock on the return trip at 8 o'clock this morning. One hundred mefbers of the Concordia Singing society were aboard the liner when it sailed and are presumed to have been aboard on the return trip.

Back from Cruise.

The Morro Castle is a vessel of about 11,520 tons gross. It was launched in August, 1930, and on her first trip from Havana to New York broke the record for that run.

The Radio Corporation of America, reporting the SOS, said that communication was suddenly interrupted and that efforts to contact the ship again failed. There was no way to determine immediately if water had reached the wireless room and put the equipment out of commission.

Heavy rain was falling in the vicinity of Scotland Light, and an east wind of 15 miles was blowing. Warnings of a northeast gale are up for Sandy Hook, a few miles west of Scotland Light.

GREEN ORDERS UNIONS TO BACK TEXTILE STRIKE

Relief for Strikers

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 7.—(AP)—The last Atlanta textile mill holding out against the strikers closed today and another shut down at Rome as the Federal Emergency Relief administration began granting relief to strikers in distress.

Relief headquarters were opened for strikers at cotton mills in Atlanta, with the Atlanta local, No. 2199, of the United Textile Workers of America cooperating to help strikers obtain federal relief.

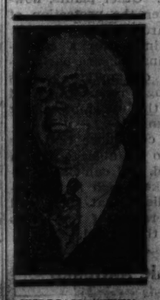
Washington, D. C., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—Organized labor was commanded tonight to put its full strength behind the giant textile strike. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, late today ordered every A. F. of L. union in the country to support the textile tieup.



WILLIAM GREEN

Green's mobilization of union labor immediately raised the specter of a general strike throughout all industry, although Green himself belittled the possibility of such a walkout.

A war council of all A. F. of L. union heads some time next week also was called by Green. At this parley the unions, 108 in number, are expected to plot their support of the textile walkout.

Board Meets Hastily.

The dramatic mobilization order came at the close of a day in which President Roosevelt's special mediation board for the textile strike had launched its initial attempts to restore peace. Meeting hastily here, the board, consisting of Gov. John G. Winant of New Hampshire, Raymond V. Ingersoll, and Marion Smith, today held its first conferences with both strike leaders and representatives of textile mill owners.

In addition to being marked by Green's command and by the inauguration of the mediation board, the day brought forth an appeal from Francis J. Gorman, union strike leader, to President Roosevelt. Gorman asked the President to block the use of the National Guard in southern states for the protection of textile mills and their loyal workers.

Estimate Up to 400,000 Out.

Meanwhile, in the field, comparative quiet settled down around the embattled textile mills, with each side ominously watching the other after yesterday's bloody fighting which ended in ten deaths. Between 350,000 and 400,000 textile workers are estimated to be out on strike.

Green's call for a united labor front behind the textile strike was by far the most startling development of the day. It came late in the day, after a brief conference between the A. F. of L. president and Gorman. Many observers regarded Green's action as a slap at the President's newly formed mediation board, while others believed it merely emphasized labor's refusal to call off the strike while the board negotiates a settlement.

Seek Financial Backing.

"They will give such assistance as they are able to give," was Green's only comment when asked to explain how the unions are to support the United Textile Workers. He insisted that there will not be a nation-wide strike and inferred that financial support for the strike is what he is seeking.

Gorman, on the other hand, is openly seeking a spread of the textile trouble to other industries, beginning with those related to the textile business. He plans to talk strike this week-end with union leaders from the rayon, synthetic yarn, and other industries.

The appeal which Gorman sent tonight to President Roosevelt, asking him to curb military activity in the south, climaxed a drive which the union opened today in an effort to take away from mill owners the protection afforded them by the states.

Message to President.

Gorman's telegram to the President read:

"National Guard in several states, particularly in North and South Carolina, being used simply as strikebreaking organizations. Understand that all arms and ammunition used by guards are federal property and can be legally used only in time of war. Governors bringing discredit to whole organization for national defense by using Guardsmen to club and intimidate workers striking. Mobilization of armed forces this time is provocative and needless. Workers angered by totally needless show of armed force on picket line. As commander in chief of the United States army we urge you to forbid use of war materials in time of strike and discourage use of National Guard for civic police duty."

Gorman presented the same plea to Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins. A radical herself in labor matters, the secretary denounced the mill owners who deputize and arm their loyal workers. She admitted, however, that she had done nothing to extract from Gorman a counterbalancing promise that he would curb the roving bands of strikers who are swooping down on mills and forcing them to close by threats of violence.

Both Secretary Perkins and Green denounced the arming of loyal workers at Honea Path, S. C., where six persons were killed yesterday. Green declared the union would endeavor to hunt down the individuals responsible for these "murders."

Amid this hubbub of union defiance, the Winant board sought to get under way in its mediation work. Gorman was called into conference with the board this afternoon and this evening George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, Inc., laid the employers' side of the case before the board. It met also with Robert W. Brurere, head of the labor board set up under the cotton textile code.

The board's preliminary conversations with Gorman, Sloan, and Brurere were exploratory. They will be continued tomorrow. The board has as yet made no attempt to propose or force a settlement. Winant, Marion Smith, and Ingersoll met here this morning for the first time, conferred with Secretary Perkins and Lloyd Garrison, chairman of the national labor board, and immediately plunged into its mediation work.

Violence Is Reported.

Everywhere throughout the country, despite the comparative calm, the situation was tense. Sabotage of mills and some increased violence were reported from eastern Pennsylvania.

The full National Guard was under arms in South Carolina. A score of mills in North Carolina were operating with militiamen patroling their grounds. Children were ordered to keep off the streets in most southern textile centers.

Roving bands of pickets, which the employers called "terrorist gangs" and the union "flying squadrons," swooped down on several mills both in the south and New England, forcing them to close. Other plants, however, opened under the protection of the National Guard.

Secretary Perkins, after a conference with the Winant board early today, was highly optimistic over its future even though reporters called to her attention the uncompromising position of the union.

"I have every confidence that this board is going to be able to find a way out," she said. "I can't see anything in this strike which is irreconcilable, and I believe that there will be a sane consideration of the issues of the strike by this board."

SEES PUBLIC AROUSED

New York, Sept. 7.—[Special.]—An aroused public opinion is resulting in the reopening of mills which were closed during the first day or two of the strike, it was declared in New York today by both George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, Inc., and Peter Van Horn, president of the National Federation of Textiles, Inc., and chairman of the silk textile code authority.

Whole communities in the south are rallying behind the mill owners for the protection of mills and workers who want to work, Mr. Sloan said.

In certain southern mill communities, workers, business men, professional men, and shopkeepers are forming committees to cope with the "flying squadrons" of union men sponsored by the United Textile Workers of America, Mr. Sloan said.

The situation among the cotton mills of New England is slightly different, he said. Some were shut today for the first time, but this, he said, was another evidence of union intimidation and not of sympathy with the cause.

Tear Gas Bombs Hurled.

Greenville, S. C., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—Militiamen used tear gas to rout strike demonstrators at the Woodside mill here late today. A guardsman's rifle was accidentally discharged, but the bullet went wild.

Seven mills were under guard here, with the situation regarded as menacing at the Woodside plant, where pickets avowed they would remain until the mill was closed.

Fall to Close Mills.

Huntsville, Ala., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Efforts of a "flying squadron" to close mills in the east central Alabama textile region, where 19,000 workers have disregarded the state and general strike calls, apparently had failed today as officers turned them away from mills at Opelika and Lanett.

Rules Against Obstruction.

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Gov. Ibra C. Blackwood issued a proclamation tonight commanding "all persons engaged in or taking part in any unlawful obstruction, combination, or assemblage and resistance to the authority of the government of this state" to disperse and retire to their homes by noon Saturday. This edict is preliminary to what may be a declaration of martial law.

More Mills Closed.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 7.—(AP)—The continued closure of textile mills went steadily forward in New England today, and by nightfall the ranks of the idle stood close to 150,000.

In Massachusetts and in the heavily concentrated Blackstone valley area in Rhode Island factories continued to shut their doors until the strike, which earlier in the week gripped such important centers as Fall River and New Bedford and Manchester and Nashua, N. H.; Burlington, Vt., and Holyoke, Mass., threatened to cause a virtual cessation of activity in the two states.

Report Strike Agreement.

Paterson, N. J., Sept. 7.—(AP)—A plan under which 4,000 of the 13,000 striking silk and rayon workers in the Paterson area would return to work Monday was agreed upon today by manufacturers and representatives of labor.

Under the proposal, which must first be approved by the national textile strike committee in Washington, the 4,000 jacquard workers would return to their looms to work one 40 hour shift a week instead of the present two 40 hour shifts or the two 30 hour shifts demanded by the strikers.

HINT CLEANERS' LOCKOUT AIMS AT PRICE AGREEMENT

Independent Plant Owner Denies Strike Claim.

As the cleaning and dyeing business was brought to a virtual standstill in Chicago's 104 plants yesterday, some reason began to appear in the crazy-quilt pattern of lockouts and picketing by union members which caused the shutdown.

Meanwhile, a number of Chicagoans continued to wear soiled suits, and in some cases waited in vain for the return of their clean clothes. The lockout was started without warning, and an estimated half million dollar's worth of clothing is tied up in the cleaning plants.

Officials of the Chicago Cleaners and Dyers' association, which started the first lockouts Wednesday, asserted that of the four plants which remained open Thursday two had been closed, the employes of a third were on strike and the fourth plant had only half a dozen employes at work. The strike report was denied by George Abarbanell of Abarbanell Brothers, at whose plant in La Grange the walkout was reported.

Mr. Abarbanell said that the plant was being picketed, but was still in operation. The other three independent plants which remained open Thursday were the Sanitary Cleaners, 2659 Sheffield avenue, two of whose employes were beaten Thursday night by rioters; the Peacock Cleaners, 4744 North Racine avenue, and the Eagle Cleaners, 7200 North Clark street.

Background of Situation.

The members of the cleaners' association employ union drivers and inside workers, paying them wages two and three times the minimums set by the NRA code for the industry. They charge that after the NRA abandoned price fixing in the industry they were unable to compete with independent plants using nonunion help at the code minimum wages.

After the original lockout members of the unions which were locked out began to picket the independent plants. Most of these plants then were closed.

Although the NRA abandoned price fixing for the cleaners and dyers several months ago, it still may be restored through the adoption of a fair trade practice agreement under the code. This must be approved by 85 per cent of the industry to become effective, however, and while the association has been working on such a code, with a minimum price of 75 cents for a suit or dress, it was unable before the lockout to obtain the requisite percentage of signatures.

Hint at Price Fixing Aim.

Observers of the situation pointed out yesterday that, with their plants closed through the activities of union pickets, the independent plant owners might be more willing to abandon their cut price schedules and sign up under the fair trade practice agreement, putting it into effect.

Frank Harscher, secretary of the association, denied that such was the intent of the lockout and subsequent picketing. The association has nothing to do, officially, with the picketing, he said. Mr. Harscher said that the association has virtually abandoned hope for the time being of getting 85 per cent of the industry to sign the fair trade practice agreement, fixing prices, and is hopeful of obtaining passage by the legislature this winter of a cleaning and dyeing bill authorizing state price fixing.

The Unity Retail Cleaners and Dyers' association, composed of owners of small tailor shops, voted at a meeting held last night in the Labor lyceum at Ogden and Kedzie avenues to refrain from sending any work to cut-rate cleaning plants until the lockout question is settled. They criticized the plant owners, however, for not notifying them so that they could refuse to accept work, which cannot be performed now, from patrons. Attorney J. I. Sperling, representing the association, declared the trouble was due entirely to the failure of the NRA to enforce a price code.

Car in Which Editor Was Slain

ASSERTS EDITOR KILLED BY REDS IN MINNEAPOLIS

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—Communists hired the assassins who last night killed Howard Guilford, former publisher of Minneapolis scandal newspapers, it was asserted today by Jay M. Near, who was once the slain editor's partner.

Guilford, who was shot down by two gunmen while driving to his home in South Minneapolis, was the central figure in the fight against the Minnesota "gag" law, which later was held unconstitutional by the United States Supreme court. The "gag" law had been used to suppress the Saturday Press, then published by Guilford and Near.

"Howard was undoubtedly killed by hired assassins," said Near, "and I think the killers were hired by communists who, contrary to popular belief, have plenty of money behind them. Why, they've got millions besides the Russian government."

Near revealed that he received a letter threatening him with bodily harm. The author is known to him, he said, but he refused to reveal the man's name. He said however, that the writer is a communist who took part in the Minneapolis truck drivers' strike last May. Near said the man wrote he would be in Minneapolis today to attend a meeting of a local of the communist party.

KOHLER EXPLAINS WHY HE CANNOT OPEN HIS PLANT

Attends Strike Parley in Washington Today.

Sheboygan, Wis., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—Walter J. Kohler, president of the Kohler company and former Wisconsin governor, stressed the necessity for protection of his men, their families, and homes in his reply today to a request by Sheboygan county business men that he reopen his plant on as full a scale as conditions permit.

The letter, written by Mr. Kohler just before he left for Washington to attend a hearing tomorrow concerning the strike at his plant, and received by A. L. Somers, secretary of the group of citizens who had made the request, pointed out that the plant has been kept closed for the purpose of preserving peace.

It further stated that even with the plant closed "there was constant disorder, culminating in the wild riot of July 27 against a closed plant."

On Safety of Men.

Concerning the safety of his men, who live in Sheboygan, Sheboygan Falls, and Kohler, Mr. Kohler commented:

"The company can function as an active employer only under a condition where its workers are protected from violent interference with their legal right to be safe in their homes and in the use of the public thoroughfares.

"The protection of workers on their way to and from the plant and the safeguarding of their families obviously must depend upon the sheriff's department and the police, with the support of public opinion and the cooperation of the citizens. A private corporation has neither the authority nor responsibility for law enforcement and preservation of public order.

Large Stocks on Hand.

"We have recently made a few shipments of goods and in a preliminary way have resumed some production activities. Our stocks of finished goods are so large that there will be for a long time to come, from a sales standpoint, no need of production, except as to some special items. We have a continuing interest, however, in providing as much work as we can for the members of our organization."

The reference to safety in homes involves a series of twelve or more "house paintings" and assaults by vandals since the Kohler riot, which has caused police and law and order organizations to offer large rewards for the capture of the guilty parties.

The hearing at Washington is to determine whether the Kohler Blue Eagle is to be withdrawn and to decide the question of how an election should be held to select the proper collective bargaining committee for Kohler workers.

They had flown 1,750 kilometers [1,050 miles] from Warsaw, Poland. They were followed at intervals by the other flyers. The next lap will shart at 6 a. m. tomorrow.

WISCONSIN BURNS 10 MILLION SCRIP AND SAVES $2.18

Madison, Wis., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—The state burned $10,000,000 worth of bank scrip today and duly recorded a saving of $2.18 in its coal bill.

At the last session of the legislature it was felt there would not be enough money in circulation, so state authorized bank scrip was provided for and more than $10,000,000 of this paper was printed.

Only a little more than $3,000,000 of this paper ever was sent out and all but $7,000 worth has been redeemed. State officials figure the $7,000 as clear profit, believing that virtually all of it is in the hands of souvenir collectors and that it never will be turned in.

CAROL'S SWEETIE URGES HIM TO GO BACK TO EX-WIFE

Mme. Lupescu Reported Ready to Step Aside.

[Copyright: 1934: By the Associated Press.]

VIENNA, Sept. 7.—Rumania's famed "rod headed woman" tonight was reported ready to retire from the spot light.

MME. MAGDA LUPESCU.

Diplomatic quarters here heard that Mme. Magda Lupescu, Titian haired beauty for whom Prince Carol once forswore his throne, was urging Carol to seek reconciliation with Princess Helene, his former wife. Carol's mistress, the report said, recommended the reconciliation as the best way to silence growing criticism of Carol.

[A group of Rumanian army officers recently was convicted of plotting against the lives of Carol, members of his court and Mme. Lupescu.]

All the Jewish junk dealer's daughter asks as the price of her withdrawal, the reports said here, is the right to reside quietly in Rumania as one of Carol's loyal subjects.

The diplomats here understood, too, that Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania was striving to untangle the marital snarls that enveloped Carol and Helene ten years ago when the young crown prince first caught sight of Mme. Lupescu.

Likewise in the background of the reported efforts to renew relations between Carol and Helene, it was said, was the recent engagement of Prince George, son of the king and queen of England, to Princess Marina of Greece.

King George and Queen Mary, it was contended, will be anxious to invite all of Europe's crowned heads to the state ceremony in Westminster abbey this winter that will unite George and Marina.

Brothers Make Peace.

Should Queen Marie, with the help of the British royal family, prevail on Carol and Helene to go back together, it was pointed out, an awkward meeting of the two in London might be avoided.

Both Carol and Helene are related to Great Britain's rulers.

A favorable omen for success of the efforts to reunite the estranged royal couple was seen in the fact that Carol already has made peace with his brother, Prince Nicholas.

The latter had been in the royal disfavor for some time because of his marriage to Mm.. Lucia Deleti, a commoner. The match greatly displeased Carol, but of late the brothers have been seen frequently together at public functions.

Queen Devoted to Helene.

Carol's relations with his youngest sister, Ileana, also have improved. Both Ileana and her husband, Archduke Anton of Austria, are now Carol's special guests at Bucharest. They are expected to remain there for some time.

Queen Marie's rôle in the reconciliation, it was pointed out here, is thoroughly in keeping with her known devotion to Princess Helene.

Responsible for Carol's marriage to Helene, Queen Marie's affection for her son's estranged wife continued even after she had instituted divorce proceedings against Carol.

Rumania's dowager queen, it is known, has been invited to make an early visit to Balmoral castle, in Scotland, and it was believed not unlikely that peace in Rumania's royal household might be discussed in connection with plans for the wedding of George and Marina.

SPEND $30,000 A YEAR ON GIRL OF 13? HERE'S HOW

N. Y. Woman Lists Expenses of Daughter.

New York, Sept. 7.—(AP)—If you had a 13 year old daughter and $30,000 a year to spend on her, for what would the money go?

Mrs. Frederic N. Watriss applied for court permission today to withdraw that amount next year for Diana Duff Frazier, her daughter by a previous marriage to the late Frank Duff Frazier, New York and Palm Beach clubman. She listed the following schedule:

Clothing	$ 3,000
Music	600
School	1,500
Skating and dancing lessons	100
Governess	1,500

Pocket money	104
Total	$19,284

But these are only personal expenses. In addition Diana is to be held responsible for one-fourth of the household expenses incurred by herself, her mother, her stepfather and two stepbrothers—one-fourth because the two boys are away at school or camp most of the year. These were listed as follows:

Servants, including chauffeurs and extra help for parties	$10,180
Maintenance of automobiles, including supplies, insurance and depreciation	4,580
Interest on mortgage	6,600

Surrogate James A. Foley authorized expenditures of $30,000.

The child's income as beneficiary under the will of her father and her grandmother, Mrs. Clara Duff Frazier, was listed in the petition at more than $100,000 for the coming year.

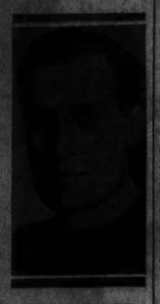
LAYS MARRIAGE LAWS OF TODAY TO MRS. GRUNDY

Dr. F. C. Grant Talks at Congregational Meet.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Tower Hill, Mich., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—Whims and vagaries of Mrs. Grundy were asserted this morning to be almost entirely responsible for present marriage laws by Dean Frederick C. Grant, president of Seabury-Western Theological seminary, Evanston. This Episcopal scholar concluded a series of addresses at the final session of the Congregational Christian annual convocation here. Nearly 200 Congregational pastors attended the three days' meeting.



DR. FREDERICK GRANT.

Dr. Grant asked if commandments and prohibitions of religious ethics were at their base anything more than ecstatic utterances of highly emotional men and women rather than evidences of a scientific understanding of the nature of things. He asserted that neither religious institutions nor the mandates of religious ethics really correspond to the nature of things or reveal the reality of existence.

"Nature Will Triumph."

"Nature," said Dr. Grant, "stands above all creeds and dogmas, all codes and regulations. It is science, not religion, that tells us about nature. Of course, nature will triumph in the end. All things, all gods, all human societies and institutions will ultimately yield to the program of nature. Much of Christian ethics seems little more than whims and vagaries of Mrs. Grundy. The noble experiment of prohibition or the equally unnatural present day marriage legislation are both unscientific. Such standards as result in such legislation come from a day when the patterns of common thought were legal, not biological.

Rests on a Fiction.

"Like all legal documents, the marriage legislation rested upon a fiction, in this case the fiction of an unchanging quantity. No recognition was given in this ancient theory to the biological fact now known to all students that continual change is taking place, not only in disposition and will, but even in nature, both physical and mental."

The fact that marriage legislation takes no account of these changes, Dr. Grant held, is "responsible for disastrous results in maintaining a legal bond in such a situation. Nature has scant respect for our legal fictions."

RELIEF IN SOUTH UP TO HOPKINS, PRESIDENT SAYS

Illinois, New York Nearly Pay Own Way.

BY CHESLY MANLY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt declared today that the question of federal relief for southern states whose legislatures have made no appropriations to carry their share was a matter for his relief administrator, Harry L. Hopkins, to decide.

The President added that he believed the relief problem in certain southern states where the legislatures have not acted was being handled by counties and municipalities.

Louisiana Relies on United States.

A recent report showed that Louisiana, where Huey Long is squandering millions of dollars to further his political dictatorship, Arkansas, and South Carolina have been relying entirely upon the federal government to foot their relief bills. On the contrary, Illinois and New York have been paying their own way to the extent of 51.7 per cent.

The President was asked about this situation at the semi-weekly press conference today, but he offered no definite comment other than to say it was a question for Administrator Hopkins to decide.

Administrator Hopkins only last week made it plain to Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania that unless the state legislature took action to carry its share of the relief burden the FERA could do no more.

Fail to Serve Notice.

No such notice has been served upon the southern states, strongholds of New Deal Democracy and recipients of government largess in the form of cotton rentals and loans in addition to the footing of the relief bills.

It was also pointed out by the department of agriculture in its recent crop report, that the southeast was one of the few sections of the entire country not affected by the great drouth.

DIES ON STREET CORNER.

Frank J. Berry, 59 years old, 2713 South Wood street, a retired cabinet marker, died yesterday while walking at 87th street and Vanderpoel avenue, apparently of a heart attack.

GUARDS POISED TO BLOCK NEW RELIEF RIOTING

Phoenix Quiet; Officials Renew Clash.

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—Apparently for lack of leadership, Phoenix and the Salt river valley's strike among labor agitators and FERA workers appeared waning today, but not so the heated political controversy that followed in its wake.

Nearly one hundred police, sheriffs, deputies, and special officers, backed by two National Guard companies, stood by to curb any recurrence of the rioting. Thirty-two persons, including three women, remained in city and county jails. The clash among officials over the type of charges to be filed, already a major political issue between Arizona's governor and Maricopa county's attorney, was renewed.

Seek to Free Communist.

At a habeas corpus hearing this afternoon Superior Judge G. A. Rodgers refused to free 29 of the prisoners, including Clay Naff, strike leader and and Arizona gubernatorial candidate on a communistic ticket.

Two hours before the hearing Arthur T. Laprade, attorney general, and two assistants succeeded in obtaining a felony complaint charging inciting a riot and naming these 29. But Laprade and his force had to take over the county attorney's office and themselves issue the charge. County Attorney Renz L. Jennings, presented this morning with a letter from Gov. B. B. Moeur demanding that he take action against the rioters and issue a felony charge, kept Laprade and his assistants waiting ninety minutes and then handed them a letter in which he said he would not prepare riot complaints against those arrested.

Defies Gov. Moeur.

This stand was a direct defiance of the governor's orders and followed his statement yesterday that the governor could "go straight to hell."

In contrast with the violence which flared yesterday, when more than a score of officers and agitators were injured in hand to hand fighting, everything was peaceful this morning when truckload after truckload of FERA workers rolled toward valley projects. Sixty officers, backbone of the police department, and a score of special deputies stood guard at FERA headquarters, the scene of the rioting yesterday when agitators attempted to force a strike of relief employés for increased doles.

A dozen blocks from the strike zone a rifle company from the Arizona National Guard stood ready to climb aboard fleet trucks at Gov. Moeur's order and race to any trouble scene.

POLICE SHOOT BURGLAR; SEIZE 2 COMPANIONS

One burglar was severely wounded and two others were captured when two policemen surprised them in a filling station of the ure Oil company at Northwest highway and Route 58, in Des Plaines, early today.

The wounded man, who was taken to the county hospital, is John Gresbner, 26 years old, 803 North Chestnut street, Arlington Heights. He was shot in the abdomen. The bullet which struck Gresbner grazed the abdomen of Herman Lewis, 24, 432 Mitchell street, Arlington Heights, who was captured. The other man seized on the spot is Harry Oslager, 22, 210 West Wing street, Arlington Heights. Louis Bocga, 39 years old, Barrington, was arrested later as a fourth member of the band.

While patroling the suburb, Policemen Drake Drexler and Jack Wigham noticed an automobile parked beside the filling station. Investigating, they found three men inside and ordered them to come out. As they scrambled toward their automobile, Drexler fired.

Bocga denied any part in the attempted robbery, telling police he had driven the other three to the station with no knowledge of their intentions and departed. Lewis and Oslager implicated Bocga, however, and all three were being held and questioned by Chief of Police Howard Becker. Chief Becker said Lewis and Oslager had confessed that the group had robbed two other filling stations, a candy store, and a pool hall last night.

Dogs barked, cats yowled, rabbits ate lettuce, and other pets performed in suitable manner as 250 children paraded them on the south side last evening in a pet parade sponsored by the 55th Street Business Men's association. The procession started at 54th street and Harper avenue and ended at 56th street and University avenue. Despite the strange assortment of animals, their young masters and mistresses kept them in check, and no accidents were reported.

Fruit Dealer Shot When He Resists Five Robbers

Michael Apostolos, 35 years old, a fruit merchant, was shot and seriously wounded late last night when he resisted an attempt of five armed men to rob him near his home at 7935 Saginaw avenue. He was dragged from his car and fired on when he declined to surrender the $200 he carried. A bullet struck his right forearm, severing an artery. The men fled without loot.

Illinois Man Home After 56th Trip to Pike's Peak

Rock Island, Ill., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—Lewis E. West, 80, of Rock Island, returned today from his 56th visit to Pikes Peak in Colorado, since 1878. On his first trip it took him two months to cross the Rocky mountains in a covered wagon.

FEAR 2 BRITISH EXPLORERS LOST IN EAST AFRICA

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Sept. 7.—Two British explorers, Dr. W. Dyson and W. R. N. Martin, are believed to have perished at Lake Rudolf, East Africa. The Royal Geographical society received a cablegram today from V. E. Fuchs, leader of the Lake Roudolf-Rift valley expedition, saying that hope had been abandoned for finding the explorers alive. It is assumed that a boat in which they were paddling from South Island to the mainland sank in a squall about Aug. 5.

Five Noblemen Believed Lost.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Count Leonardo Bonzi and four other young Italian noblemen on a mountain climbing expedition in Greenland were feared tonight to be lost. They started on Aug. 23 from Scoresby sound for a five day adventure. They had food for only 12 days.

Sultan of Morocco's Aid Spends Day's Visit in City

Mohammed Mammeri, director of protocol for the sultan of Morocco, was a visitor in Chicago yesterday. He accompanied a party of 175 French physicians who are on tour in this country. From here the party went to the Mayo clinic at Rochester, Minn. The Moroccan diplomat declined to be interviewed, his interpreter declaring that he was here merely as a visitor in an unofficial capacity. He appeared at the La Salle hotel in his native costume of red robe, matching fez and sandals.

ASKS ARREST OF SON.

Michael Machala, 2633 West 23d place, yesterday asked the Marquette police to arrest his son Edward, 17 years old, a ramit at the Harrison High school. Edward, the father said, had run away from home, taking $70 of the family's funds.

CHARGE 1% TAX LIMITATION IS NOT WORKABLE

The state tax commission yesterday issued a new statement against the proposed 1 per cent limitation on tax levies in the form of the second instalment of its report on that subject. The first instalment, given out Tuesday, pronounced the tax limitation scheme "reckless" from the standpoint of public policy and charged that it could not fail, if adopted, to wreck public school systems and other local governmental facilities.

The second instalment of the report views tax limitation from a purely mathematical and statistical standpoint. The commission concludes, as a result of studies by its staf, that nothing short of a reorganization of all of the local governments of the state, involving the establishment of a new state constitution, could permit 1 per cent limitation to work even if it were desirable.

The commission made a study of 51 downstate counties, representative of the entire state outside Cook county. It found that the average total of their 1933 tax rates was 2.22 per cent, not counting debt service charges, which would be exempt from the 1 per cent limitation. On the average, downstate tax expenditures would have to be cut more than two-thirds if the limitation were adopted, the commission's data show.

NEW DEAL TEST BY MAINE VOTE COMES MONDAY

Easy Money Is Basis of Democrat Campaign.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Portland, Me., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—The first popular verdict on the New Deal will be delivered on Monday, when the voters of Maine will elect a United States senator, three congressmen, a governor and other state officers.

With Republican orators of national repute stumping the state and pressing the issue of the radicalism, extravagance and other dangerous implications of the Roosevelt policies and with the Democrats seeking to capitalize the liberality of the disbursement of government money by a Democratic administration to this normally Republican state the results of the election will be eagerly scanned for indications of the state of the public mind.

Ever since Maine went "Hell bent for Gov. Kent" back in September, 1840, and the Whigs wrested the presidency from the Democrats two months later it has been a political adage that "as goes Maine, so goes the Union."

Adage Held Two Years Ago.

It doesn't always hold true, but it did two years ago, when the election of the first Democratic governor in Maine in eighteen years and of two of the three congressmen was followed by the Roosevel landslide.

As a traditional political barometer, the voting in Maine, the only state that does not hold congressional elections in November, is regarded by the politicians as an important psychological influence on the electorate in the remaining forty-seven states. Hence the national managers of both parties are usually at great pains to endeavor to influence the barometer.

Each in its own way, the two parties are now striving to influence the Maine barometer. The electorate of the state is being plied with arguments against the New Deal by the Republicans and with government largess for the New Deal by the Democrats. While Republican big-wigs have been trooping into the state and crying out against the Roosevelt revolution and its staggering cost, the Democratic national leaders have been studiously keeping away and letting the government money do the talking.

Governor Dictates Tactics.

These tactics on the part of the Democrats were dictated by Democratic Gov. Louis J. Brann, candidate for reëlection. Whether it be, as some politicians aver, that Gov. Brann considered the New Deal far from an asset, not even Democratic National Chairman Jim Farley has given Maine the benefit of hearing one of those speeches Charley Michelson writes for him, though he has favored almost every other state in the Union in this manner in the last two of three months.

The only outsiders whom the governor has brought in for Democratic rallies are Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion, who is a colonel on his staf, and Rudy Vallee, the crooner, who is a lieutenant commander on his staf.

Gov. Brann, a popular man and clever politician, makes a dozen or more speeches a day but never mentions the New Deal. He wastes no time on the philosophy of the new dispensation. He just talks about the money that Maine has got, is getting and if he is reelected, is going to get from the federal treasury. He takes all the credit for the bounties, loans, gifts, and other New Deal disbursements of government money in the state.

Say Total Is 108 Millions.

With all the RFC loans to Maine banks included and the public works and relief funds, the governor tells his constituents that he has obtained for their benefit more than 108 million dollars, a lot of money for a state numbering less than 800,000 souls.

And then, just to throw a scare into the electorate, he elaborates on the plight of Maine if on Monday it should deprive itself of a Democratic governor with a standing with the Democratic dispensers of government money at Washington, particularly of a governor of his go-getting prowess.

"The real danger," said Gov. Brann in a speech at Houlton last night, "Lies in the lack of contact with Washington through an unfortunate selection on Sept. 10" [election day]. A "green man" going to Washington in behalf of Maine, the governor pursued, would lack the necessary "connections" to obtain benefits for Maine. Such failure, said the governor, would throw the burden of relief back on the towns with consequent increase of local taxation.

Gets 2 Million Fund.

Through his "connections" with the powers that be at Washington, the governor was able to get more than 2 million dollars for distribution by himself during the campaign, the biggest campaign chest any candidate ever had in this state.

There was a special highway fund of $1,700,000 and a supplemental relief fund of $100,000 a month which is to run for ten months. The governor personally directed the distribution of all but $70,000 of the $1,700,000 highway fund, telephoning selectmen throughout the state, most of whom are Republicans, and offering them allocations that were totally unexpected.

Leaving no stone unturned in his undertaking to put New Deal money or the hope thereof at work for the Democratic cause the governor succeeded in reviving the moribund 48 million dollar Passamoquoddy dam project. This is a scheme for harnessing the tide of the Bay of Fundy to power production.

Advise U. S. Report Reconsidered.

Government engineers had reported adversely on the plan, holding that there would be no market for the power. Maine now produces more power than there is demand for and it would be necessary to sell 2 million dollars of power annually to pay the interest on the cost of the Passamoquoddy project.

The governor, however, got a letter from President Roosevelt indorsing a reconsideration of the plan rejected by the government engineers and then induced Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes to come to Maine and inspect the site. The visit of Mr. Ickes was dramatized with a view to political capital and Mr. Ickes went away, promising to have the project "restudied." Then the governor appointed a commission to do the "restudying." In his letter the President said:

"I am in full accord with your conviction that this is the proper time to take up in a serious way the possibility of developing the enormous latent electrical energy of the tidewaters of the Bay of Fundy, but the benefit of not only the citizens of the state of Maine but of the entire nation.

Tells Interest in Project.

"With my summer home so near Eastport for so many years I have been interested in what is known as the 'Quoddy project' for a long time, and it has been my hope that eventually the state of Maine would become not only a great industrial center of the nation but that its agricultural population would be among the first to enjoy the manifest advantages of cheap electrical power on the farm as well.

"I also agree with you that the way to go about this in a practical manner is to immediately appoint a commission to go over those definite projects which have been worked out by experienced engineers and select the best and most practical plans of those proposed. With this, however, there must go hand in hand a study of the ways in which this power may be put to work in the shortest possible time."

All this has instilled great hopes in the breasts of the denizens of eastern Maine which has been hard hit by the decline of ship building, of fish packing, and lumbering.

It's a Reunion, Too

Charley Whitton, 80 year old Canadian, who judged beer drinking contests thirty years ago, arrived in Chicago from Edmonton, Alta., yesterday to officiate in the same capacity at a similar competition tonight at the Combined Irish alliance's celebration in the Normal Park stadium. Contestants in the feat have been recruited from Irish, German, Italian, and Swedish national groups.

Whitton's visit had a double purpose, enabling him to see his brother Frank for the first time in fifty-four years. They met for their reunion at 400 South State street.

More than 1,500 persons are expected to attend the celebration at 6 p. m. tonight. A beauty contest and baby show will be part of the entertainment.

PRESIDENT SEES McADOO; SILENT ABOUT SINCLAIR

Neither Will Talk of New "Bedfellow."

BY CHESLY MANLY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—Senator William G. McAdoo of California conferred with President Roosevelt at the summer White House this afternoon and there was every indication that he came up to get his instructions on the question of supporting Upton Sinclair, the Socialist who won the Democratic nomination for governor.

W. G. McADOO.

McAdoo evaded questions concerning his attitude in the forthcoming campaign, declaring he was out of touch with the situation in California and would "have to talk to a lot of people."

The senator said that among the people he intends to see back in California is Mr. Sinclair, whom he described as "a very pleasant fellow." This was before the conference with the President and Senator McAdoo promised to see reporters later. However, he left for the airport while the correspondents were attending the President's press conference.

Knows of the Revolt.

McAdoo said he knew of no threatened revolt in the Democratic ranks because of the radical trend of the party, as evidenced by Sinclair's victory, and indicated that much would depend upon the platform to be adopted by the state convention on Sept. 20.

President Roosevelt, whom Mr. Sinclair left three days ago declaring with enthusiasm that the New Deal had caught up with the "EPIC" plan, was noncommittal on the conference with McAdoo. He said they talked about everything including the kitchen stove.

The President indicated that he had been busily occupied with the pending reorganization of the NRA, on which he will confer with Hugh S. Johnson, administrator, next Monday.

Says NRA Plans Are Clearer.

Mr. Roosevelt said that certain aspects of the reorganization were becoming more and more clear, most important being the legislation to be submitted to the next congress.

He indicated a belief that price fixing is a borderline proposition and declared that other problems being considered are price posting, minimum wages, reports showing surpluses on hand and interpretations of section 7A relating to collective bargaining.

The President made it clear that early in the next session recommendations for legislation to extend the recovery act, in a modified form, for at least another year, will be submitted to congress. In the meantime, he added, there will be certain temporary administrative changes, the nature of which he did not disclose.

It is generally believed that one of these changes will be a clipping of the wings of Gen. Johnson, the blustering administrator, and placing a board in charge of many of his present duties.

Among today's visitors were M. Pierre Flandin, minister of public works or the Ickes of France; Percy Straus, head of R. H. Macy & Co. of New York, and Wallace Donham, dean of the Harvard school of business administration.

ELEVATED LINES GET RESTRAINING ORDER ON '32 TAX

The Chicago Rapid Transit company, through A. A. Sprague and Britton I. Budd, receivers, yesterday filed a petition in federal court seeking an injunction to restrain the county treasurer from collecting $782,335 in 1932 taxes from the transit company. This amount represents the unpaid balance of the company's 1932 tax bill, since $1,104,277 already has been turned over to the treasurer's office.

The petition charges that the unpaid balance represents an illegal assessment by the county assessor and the state tax commission, and that whereas for 1932 the equalized assessed value of all real estate in the county was reduced to approximately 75 per cent of the assessed value of real estate in 1931, the property of the transit company was assessed on a basis of less than 3.4 per cent reduction.

Federal Judge Barnes issued a temporary restraining order pending a hearing on an injunction Sept. 17 before Federal Judge Sullivan.

Report of a Gold Strike Excites Paraguay's Army

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Sept. 7.—(AP)—The ministry of defense pricked up its ears today on receiving reports that prospectors have found rich gold deposits in the department of misiones. Paraguay could use great quantities of gold to finance its war with Bolivia. From the Chaco battle front came reports that the Paraguayans advanced in the Canada Elcarmen sector, and that fighting became brisk about the Bolivian Fort Ballivian.

FINDS FARMERS WEARY OF AAA PROCESSING TAX

Warren E. Wright Tells of Their Complaints.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Farmers in the Illinois corn belt are complaining that the processing tax on hogs is taking money out of their right hand pocket while the government as yet is not replacing it in their left hand pocket, according to Warren E. Wright of Jacksonville. He is Republican nominee for congress in the 20th district, old home of the late Speaker Henry T. Rainey, and at Chicago party headquarters yesterday he dwelt upon the reactions of farmers in his neighborhood to the experimentations of the AAA.

WARREN E. WRIGHT.

As Mr. Wright described it, many farmers are saying the government is setting prices up with one agency and knocking them down with another.

Farmer Pays Processing Tax.

"The corn and hog belt farmer," said Mr. Wright, "is discovering that under AAA he is financing the burocrats who are trying to tell him how to run his business.

"The processing tax is being collected from the farmer by the packing plants. He pays it in the shape of a lower price for his hogs, the packers deducting the tax from the market price.

"The Jacksonville packing plant last month paid $10,400 to the government in processing tax on hogs. It did not come out of the pocket of the packer. Instead, it was deducted from the price paid the farmer for his hogs.

"Hogs are around $8 a hundred weight now. If the processing tax of $2.25 were not taken off by the packers, the farmer would be getting around $10.25.

Very Little Money Returned.

"Of course, it is explained that the processing tax is to be distributed among raisers who signed contracts. In other words, the AAA is taking money out of the pockets of all the hog farmers with a view of putting it back into another pocket of some of the farmers, those who signed up, a wonderful bit of financial wizardry. Those who did not sign up get none of the benefits, but they do get $2.25 less for their hogs.

"So far, however, very little of the money has been returned to the farmer. The figures of the AAA estimate that Illinois farmers who participate in the three year program are to get benefit payments on corn and hogs of $38,255,000. The figures show that on Aug. 1, Illinois farmers had been paid only $37,312 of the corn-hog subsidies. These subsidies are to be paid for out of the processing tax now collected from the processing of all hogs.

"All this may not sound rational, but it is the manner in which the processing tax is actually being operated in the wonderland of the Brain Trust.

Farmers Getting Skeptical.

"One reason given for the slowness of the benefit payments is that Illinois farmers were slow to sign contracts, being skeptical of the AAA program. They now appear to be even more skeptical as the scheme unfolds itself in all of its financial gyrations.

"Prices have gone up. At one time they were down to around $3 or $3.50. The slaughter of millions of hogs last spring had some effect. But the drouth had far more. At one time they were giving pigs away in my district for lack of water and feed. One Friday 1,000 head were sold for three-quarters of a cent a pound in Pike county. So that hogs of marketable size were reduced in number and prices naturally went up, without any aid of AAA. Where nature has sent the price up, the AAA through the processing tax knocks the price down to the tune of $2.25 a hundred.

Consumers Must Pay More.

"Meanwhile the processing tax is demonstrating itself to be a double tax. Consumers are paying more for their meat. 'It's the processing tax,' don't blame me,' says the butcher. So the consumer, seeing a pork loin is too expensive for Sunday dinner, takes a duck or a hen instead.

"It all appears to be manifesting itself in the growth of Republican sentiment. What the farmers are saying is that under AAA hog raisers are trying to hoist themselves by their own bootstraps to 'agricultural parity' while both the hog raiser and the bacon and ham consumer pay the processing tax—a double tax—and the only one who benefits is the salaried burocrat who is running the circus."

LIBERTY LEAGUE TELLS BASIS FOR NEW DEAL QUIZ

Promises Effort to Bring Back Confidence.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 7.—(AP)—The American Liberty league tonight disclosed basic tenets upon which it will campaign for nation-wide support of its examination of the New Deal.

These were:

"Human rights and property rights are practically inseparable, but to the extent that separation is possible human rights should be paramount."

It is a government obligation to aid "men and women who are in distress because of unemployment through no fault of their own."

Will Work for Confidence.

The league "will do all it can to help re-create confidence. Without confidence capital will not be invested. Without capital industry cannot go ahead. Without industry there cannot be jobs."

"We do not oppose change, but would not sacrifice the form of government under which our country has grown strong and prosperous. There have been abuses. They must not be allowed to recur. There have been inequities. They must be righted."

President Jouett Shouse went into this added detail by way of contradicting criticism that the new organization overemphasizes property rights.

President Roosevelt was among such critics, but the answer was not directly to him.

Quotes Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. Shouse did quote the President's inaugural statement, however, that "the only thing we have to fear is fear itself."

"None can deny that there has been a real improvement during the past 18 months," the league leader then said. "On the other hand, it is obvious to every observer that our people today are filled with apprehension."

Telegrams and letters of support were reported arriving "by the thousands," with many including cash donations. The number of $1 and $2 contributions was said to indicate response reaching "far down into the mass of American people."

Repudiate Third Party Idea.

Suggestions that the movement "is the beginning of a new political party" again were repudiated. This was in reference to comment that the league would rally "conservatives" against "liberals," cutting across Democratic and Republican lines.

Mr. Shouse further said the league "will study and dissect without partisan bias or individual prejudice important pieces of pending legislation, and will attempt to advise its members, comprising a huge mass of people at present inarticulate, as to the effect of such legislation upon their general welfare."

WISCONSIN GRAD IS HONORED ON 83D BIRTHDAY

Still young on his 83d birthday yesterday, Henry L. Green, 4734 Kimbark avenue, graduate of the University of Wisconsin in the class of 1872, confided to fellow alumni who had gathered to celebrate his birthday that he expects "to keep right on working a good many more years."

As a luncheon guest of the University of Wisconsin club in the Hamilton club Mr. Green recalled his early days in the young university.

"I entered the University of Wisconsin in 1868 when it was little more than an overgrown public school," he related. "Most of the patrons were farmers who necessarily picked the cheapest place to send their sons for advanced education. The charge was $6 a term, and there were only two terms a year. Most of our social life was centered in the two debating societies which met on Fridays with delectable refreshments served by the girls."

Years later he removed to Chicago and became head of the iron and steel company which bears his name.

A Riverside police squad led by Sergt. Fred Molkintina early today arrested an ex-convict who was attempting to break into the home of Harvey Snyder, 200 Gage road, River Forest, and a young woman confederate who was sitting in an automobile in front of the house.

The man is Roy Provost, 21 years old, 6251 Greenwood avenue, who once served a term in Pontiac reformatory for robbery. The girl is Miss Mildred Essick, 19 years old, 5008 South Union avenue. In the car with the girl the police found wearing apparel, jewelry, and other property valued at about $1,500.

G. O. P. TO RALLY TOMORROW AT RIVERVIEW PARK

State Candidates Added to Program.

BY PARKE BROWN.

State candidates, it was announced by county headquarters yesterday, have been added to the program for the big Republican picnic at Riverview park tomorrow afternoon.

Postponement of the rally, which is the first big event of the fall campaign sponsored by either party, made it possible to extend invitations to C. Wayland Brooks and Milton E. Jones, the two nominees for congres at large; William J. Stratton, former secretary of state now running for state treasurer, and Francis G. Blair, superintendent of public instruction, now seeking reelection.

Postponed from Labor Day.

The gathering originally was scheduled for Labor day, but rain forced the county committee to postpone it. The delay, it is believed, will make it possible for the candidates running throughout the state to be in Chicago and take part in the program.

There is particular interest in the appearance of Brooks, who is reported to have stirred up the downstate with his speeches during the last three weeks. James P. Ringley, nominee for sheriff, is still listed for the keynote speech of the occasion, but Brooks will also be heard from if he is here.

Mr. Brooks was the headliner last night at a rally in the Aurora city hall. Frequently he was interrupted with applause as he denounced "the waste and gropings of the brain trust." He also got cheers when he declared that the New Deal was operating to retard recovery instead of hastening it.

Two Courses to Follow.

"America stands at the crossroads," he said, "and must choose her course. It will be what our citizens make it. Shall it be a further grant of centralized control with all the powers of finance, industry, and agriculture put in the hands of appointed theoretical men in Washington, or shall we go forward by sending to congress men who would demand that any plan for the direction of the activities of our citizenry shall be fully disclosed, presented, and debated in congress of the United States?

"This is not a partisan question. It is a question of whether the American people desire to continue to maintain a government of divided powers nicely distributed among the people who make up and support that government, or a dictatorial power with the right to hand these powers to appointed persons.

Republican leaders continue to cheer over the prospects of an immense turnout at the World's Fair on Constitution day, Sept. 17, in the promotion of which they are taking a leading part. They were particularly joyful yesterday over an announcement by Edward L. Ryerson Jr., chairman of the Constitution day committee, that leading Chicago industrial and commercial concerns are purchasing large blocks of tickets for distribution among their employes and their friends.

Buy $10,000 Worth of Tickets.

One of the announcements was that the National Tea company had bought $10,000 worth of the $1 tickets—which cover admission to the Fair and to 22 concessions, the normal total cost of which would be $6. Other heavy purchasers mentioned were Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., Marshall Field & Co., the Fair store, Mandel Brothers, the Chicago and North Western railroad, the Palmer house and the Stevens hotel.

In presenting the National Tea check, Andrew Duncan, promotion manager of the company, said:

Chicago Democrats have been holding off on any big event because of their activity in promoting the "Drama of Chicago on Parade," which comes to its Soldiers' field climax on Sept. 16, but headquarters announced that there will be some activity downstate before that time.

Democrats from all parts of the state are expected to go to Carrollton next Thursday to attend memorial services for the late Speaker Henry T. Rainey.

The following day, Friday, there will be the annual roundup of the Illinois Veterans' league at the state fair grounds at Springfield.

Homes Fall in Quake

ORLEANSVILLE, Algeria, Sept. 7.—(AP)—An earthquake in northern Algeria last night shook down hundreds of homes, drove panic-stricken thousands into fields and streets, and injured several persons. Damage to this rich wheat belt was great, officials said. No deaths were reported.

An area 20 miles wide extending 150 miles up the Chelif valley felt the shocks, which damaged the towns of Carnot, Les Attafs and Watignies. Algiers was shaken but undamaged, while Orleansville evacuated all its public buildings and moved patients from hospitals.

French colonists and natives who escaped from their demolished houses were camped tonight in nearby fields while troops brought aid to the stricken section. The town of Carnot apparently was the hardest hit. Most of its houses had tottered down and those still standing were so damaged as to be uninhabitable. Property loss in the town was estimated at 1,000,000 francs. [$66,800].

STATE BAR GROUP DRAFTS DRIVE ON U. S. RADICALISM

Plans Program to Boost Patriotic Tenets.

The constitution of the United States was given staunch support yesterday at a meeting of the Americanization section of the Illinois Bar association in the Stevens hotel.

The lawyers announced formulation of a comprehensive plan to combat the growing wave of radicalism; determination to oppose any efforts to alter the constitution or to avoid following its principles, and the resolution to spread throughout the state the doctrine of Americanism.

Although direct reference to tendencies of the New Dealers to disregard provisions of the constitution was studiously avoided, observers believed the remarks of Gen. John V. Clinnin, chairman of the section, to be significant on this point. He said:

"The prime purpose of this movement is to combat communism in every form and to safeguard and promote the constitution to the end that those who seek to change it or avoid the present setup in government be suppressed."

Imply Criticism of Red Quiz.

The stand on communism also seemed to illustrate the lawyers' lack of faith in a one man congressional investigation of communistic activities conducted in Chicago recently by Representative Carl M. Weideman, Michigan Democrat. Weideman reported, after private hearings, that no evidence of communistic activities in Chicago had been uncovered. This report brought a flood of protests from patriotic organizations.

Under the plan advanced at yesterday's meeting, the Americanism section was split into five subcommittees, namely, naturalization, political, historical, and civic teachings in schools; patriotism and liaison.

Members of the section recommended that school boards throughout the state be reminded that teaching of the constitution and its history in the schools is mandatory under state law.

"This teaching has been ignored in many schools up to now," Gen. Clinnin said. "We feel that this subject should be taught extensively in at least the seventh and eighth grades."

Plan Naturalization Aids.

Duties of the naturalization, or "foreign relations" subcommittee, will include finding means of facilitating the naturalization of persons of foreign birth who desire to become citizens; providing instructors and to concentrate attention on mines and other industry which employes foreign labor largely.

The liaison committee's duties will consist of cooperating with the American Federation of Labor to provide instruction in the details of national naturalization for those members of that organization who desire it.

Oct. 26 was set for the next meeting of the section. At that time each subcommittee is expected to present a concise plan of action. The entire project will then be recommended to the executive committee of the association for passage.

Boost Constitution Week.

The plan includes organization of the entire state for the celebration of Constitution week, beginning Sept. 17. More than 1,000 meetings will be held, Gen. Clinnin said, sponsored by civic, business, and patriotic organizations.

Ten other sections of the state bar association were in session yesterday, each section having its own legal subject for study. James S. Baldwin, president and originator of the system, predicted that important reforms in Illinois law would be effected within the next few years as the result of a plan.

KILLS SELF AS DAUGHTER AND VISITOR WATCH

Samuel O. Leitzell, 67 years old, 2701 Harrison street, a retired painter and decorator, shot and killed himself last evening in the dining room of his home.

In the room at the time were Leitzell's daughter, Mrs. Jeanette Steele, and a visitor, Thomas Shanahan, 6222 South Fairfield avenue. Shanahan, seeing Leitzell draw a pistol, ran forward with the intention of wresting the weapon from him.

"Get away or I'll shoot you," said Leitzell, pointing the pistol at the visitor.

Shanahan halted and the older man fired a bullet into his head. Mrs. Steele said her father had been despondent over ill health and financial reverses.

Maps Educational Tours for All Tastes.

BY EARL MULLIN.

Starting on Sept. 15 A Century of Progress Exposition will devote all its resources to the cultural enrichment of those on whom progress must, in years to come, depend—the boys and girls now in schools. Special low rates and tour privileges have been arranged under the direction of the board of education in coöperation with the Fair.

The educational advantages of a trip to the Fair have been appreciated by visiting educators, and the present plan follows their suggestions. While the facilities and special rates are open to all educational institutions, the program was primarily laid out for students in the Mississippi valley, relatively close to Chicago and the Fair.

The method used in selecting subjects for 40,000 students who visited the Rosenwald Museum of Science and Industry last winter has been applied to the selection of subjects for the Fair tours. More than a score of such tours, to interest particular groups, have been arranged.

Suit Tastes of All.

Among those listed in complete detail are: "Man and His World," "Technical and Industrial Arts," "Transportation and Communication," "Home Planning and Economics," "Fine Arts and Music," and "Commerce and Industry." All of these are further broken down into subdivisions depending on the wish of the group for general or specific information.

A special admission rate of 5 cents for each member of the group, with teachers or group leaders admitted free, has been offered by the Exposition. Uniformed guides and guards will be furnished wherever needed. Hotels and rooming house associations have cooperated with the low rate for groups, and a majority of the concessionaires at the Fair, if contacted in advance, also will offer low prices.

Tour Details Available.

School officials who wish details of the plan may obtain them by writing to Edward L. Burchard, chief of students' tour section, A Century of Progress Exposition, Chicago. The tour promoter should mention especially the type of subjects in which his group is primarily interested.

The visits of such educational groups as these, plus the attendance of thousands of Chicagoans who wished to avoid the crowds of midsummer, are expected by Fair officials to maintain the "gate" at its present high average. Many visitors are now seeing the Fair for the first time, notably thousands who live in and around Chicago.

Yesterday's paid admissions to the Fair totaled 82,123 at midnight.

Indians Have Their Day.

Three thousand Fair visitors gathered in the Court of States in spite of chilly weather last night to watch a two-hour program of dances, songs, and speeches commemorating Indian day. The 1934 medal for outstanding Indian achievement was presented to Marie Martinez, honoring her work in pottery.

Col. J. V. Houghtelling of the events division welcomed the Indians on behalf of the Fair. William P. Wilkeson of the Cherokee nation responded on behalf of the assembled tribes. Represented among the sixty Indians in native costumes were Pueblos, Navajos, Winnebagos, Mohicans, Pottawattamies, and Cherokees.

Among the features presented were the reading of "An Indian's Salute to His Country," the Winnebago flag dance, the Hoop dance, and tribal dances of all the assembled tribes.

DIVERSION OF GAS TAX REVENUE TO SCHOOLS UPHELD

Circuit Judge Refuses Plea for Injunction.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—Circuit Judge L. E. Stone today upheld the diversion of one-third of the gasoline tax revenue to the financial relief of school districts during the period between July 1 and next March 1.

The court's ruling was made only two hours after the filing of a petition for an injunction attacking the special session law which provided for the diversion.

The action was instituted by the Chicago law firm of Winston, Strawn and Shaw in behalf of Jesse Werner, a local filling station proprietor. However, it was reported that several oil companies were interested in the effort to prevent part of the gasoline revenues from being used to bolster up the state school distributive fund.

Schools Get $900,551.

Under authority of the new law the state school fund was given $900,551 yesterday from the August revenues.

The judge held with Montgomery S. Winning, assistant attorney general, that the legality of the gasoline tax diversion had been previously established in the unemployment relief bond issue cases.

Winning had objected to the court granting permission for the petition to be filed, but he was overruled, the judge holding that there were reasonable grounds for its presentation. The judge agreed to hear immediate arguments and two hours later refused to grant an injunction.

Appeal Expected.

It is expected that an appeal will be made to the Supreme court, although no comment on that point was made by Attorney Paul Moore of Chicago, who argued in behalf of the petition.

Had the injunction been issued, the state, counties, and municipalities would not be forced to divide their gasoline tax fund with the schools. Part of the gasoline fund is now being used for unemployment relief.

SHOOTS AT TWO POLICEMEN.

Policemen Arthur Williams and George McGinnis of Grand Crossing station were fired on early yesterday in front of 1658 East 75th street by a mysterious gunman across the street who disappeared before they could give chase.

CENTURY OF PROGRESS NOTES

Today offers the last opportunity for seeing and hearing the Chicago Symphony orchestra on Swift bridge at A Century of Progress Exposition. The Detroit Symphony has yet another day in Ford Gardens.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon Dr. Lawrence H. Mayers will give an address on "Through the Cycles of Life" in the south lecture room of the Hall of Science.

A contract with the Ziegfeld Follies awaits the winner of the "Miss Chicago" beauty contest being conducted by the World's Fair in connection with the celebration of Chicago Homecoming week, the Follies management announced yesterday. Preliminaries and semi-finals in the city-wide contest will be staged on the Midway boardwalk of the Fair on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

The set piece "Song of the Lark," which was scheduled to be included in last Sunday's fireworks display at the Fair, will be included in tomorrow night's show. Rain Sunday prevented presentation of the picture.

The choir of a hundred voices from the Court Street Methodist Episcopal church in Rockford, Ill., will sing at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow in the Court of States.

The Spanish Village at the Fair failed to open its gates yesterday on orders of its receiver, Ward Starrett.

The Mormon tabernacle choir of Salt Lake City will begin on Monday a week's engagement of two concerts daily at Ford gardens.

Eleven teams will compete this afternoon in the annual first aid contest of the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross in the Ford gardens.

Amateur gardeners will open their contest displays today in the Horticultural building.

The pushmobile of the Orr playground, driven by Sol Altschult, 11 years old, 4230 Augusta boulevard, won yesterday the tenth annual pushmobile contest of the bureau of recreation of the board of education.

More than 5,000 residents of South Bend in eight special trains will arrive at the Fair this morning.

BOARD PREPARES FOR OPENING OF SCHOOLS SEPT. 17

The board of education cleared up odds and ends of administration necessary for the reopening of the city's public schools on Sept. 17, when 500,000 children will end their summer vacations.

Approval of minor purchases of equipment for lunchrooms, the removal of cinders, and the final rehabilitation of buildings was voted, and Howard P. Savage, business manager, was given authority to readvertise for bids for the public address system at Lane Technical High school, which will be opened for the first time this fall.

Coincident with the board meeting, Supt. William J. Bogan made an appeal to motorists to exercise especial care in passing schools. He recalled that 143 children were killed and 2,349 injured by automobiles in the city last year.

ARMY DRILL MADE COMPULSORY AT OHIO STATE AGAIN

Columbus, O., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Ohio State university, scene of a bitter fight last spring to make military training optional, today decreed that "conscientious objectors" shall no longer be excused from drill.

The order, announced without warning, is an aftermath of the protest that was raised when the university last spring declined to dismiss several self-called "conscientious objectors" from the requirement that they take military drill.

Since then a number of denominations have passed resolutions opposing compulsory drill. The new policy was announced by J. L. Morrill, vice president of the university, in a letter to five prospective freshment students.

WRITES EPITAPH IN VERSE BEFORE SHOOTING SELF

Selkirk's Suicide Blamed on Finance Worry.

Worry over financial reverses was advanced last night as the reason why Andrea Selkirk, former partner in a radio program firm, committed suicide by shooting himself in his apartment at 180 East Delaware place yesterday morning. A story of bitter disappointment and of encroaching poverty was unfolded by police who investigated the case, although one note left behind by Selkirk indicated that he was able to jest over his troubles as he faced the prospect of suicide.

Selkirk, who was 37 years old, had apparently spent Thursday night brooding over his financial predicament, police said. He was to have moved from his apartment yesterday and his wife, because of their uncertain position, had already gone to live with her mother. Selkirk, friends told police, had apparently no place to go.

Leaves 2 Notes with Bellboy.

At 9 o'clock yesterday morning he summoned a bellboy and handed him two notes, one addressed to I. M. Ryan, manager of the building, and the other to his wife, Mrs. Terese Selkirk. The note to the manager asked Ryan to break into the apartment and then notify his wife. Ryan did so, finding Selkirk dead, a bullet in his head.

The note to his wife and another message found in the apartment and addressed to Mrs. J. B. Blackburn, 501 Washington street, Glencoe, a close friend of both Selkirk and his wife, were filled with bitter self reproach.

His note to his wife was as follows:

"Terese Dear:

"These are the last and honest words of a soul in turmoil. For what has happened to us I am entirely to blame. Living, I am of no use to anybody, not even myself. I want you to put all of this tangle out of your mind and begin anew. Good luck, and I wish you a new and better deal. ANDY."

Leaves Epitaph in Verse.

The note to Mrs. Blackburn, dated Aug. 7, included some verse:

"Dear Honey:

"Since we got into this argument, let's have a lot of fun, shall we? What do you think of this paraphrase as an epitaph:

"Here lies the last work of Andy Selkirk;
For him life held no terrors;
He lived like a fool and died like a fool,
No runs, no hits, some errors.

"To get the full significance of the above you should listen to two full baseball broadcasts from beginning to end. Yours in martyrdom, hi-de-hi, "ANDY."

The Blackburns and Mrs. Selkirk went to the apartment immediately. Mr. Blackburn, vice president of the Indiana Limestone corporation, said Selkirk had been despondent lately and had often threatened to end his life. Both he and his wife, Blackburn said, tried to talk him out of it.

Selkirk had been a cellist with various radio orchestras and eventually began his own business of arranging radio programs in partnership with Robert White Jr. of Evanston. The partnership was dissolved recently.

Federal Tax Unit Agents Seize 49 Cases of Whisky

Agents of the alcoholic tax unit under E. C. Yellowley yesterday seized forty-nine cases of bonded liquor in a raid at the Holleb Liquor Distributors, Inc., 163 South Water street. The raid was made when government inspectors discovered that warehouse serial numbers of identification had been removed on each case of liquor in violation of the internal revenue law. No arrests were made, Mr. Yellowley said, but he intended to refer his evidence against the concern to United States Attorney Dwight H. Green for presentation to the federal grand jury.

PIQUETT PLEADS NOT GUILTY; TRIAL SET FOR SEPT. 17

Held on Bond with 3 on Dillinger Plot Charge.

Attorney Louis Piquett yesterday pleaded not guilty before Federal Judge John P. Barnes to charges of conspiracy to harbor and conceal John Dillinger and his lieutenant, Homer Van Meter and was ordered held in $50,000 bond. Three other defendants, Arthur W. O'Leary, Dr. Harold B. Cassidy, and Dr. Wilhelm Loeser, each entered pleas of guilty on both charges.

Arraignment yesterday followed indictment of the four Thursday by the federal grand jury. Drs. Loeser and Cassidy are alleged to have performed face-lifting operations on Dillinger and Van Meter. Piquett is charged by federal authorities with having operated headquarters for the Dillinger gang in his office with the aid of O'Leary, an investigator on Piquett's staf.

Protests High Ball for Attorney.

After Piquett's plea Judge Barnes allowed Attorney Benjamin Landis seven minutes in which to discuss the matter of bail for Piquett, who is held in the county jail in lieu of the $50,000 bond fixed after his arrest. Landis, asking a reduction in the bond, pointed out that the indictment was returned on a specific charge of conspiracy to harbor and conceal a violator of the federal Dyer act, which provides a penalty for transportation of a stolen automobile across a state line. The usual amount of bail in such cases, Landis declared, is $1,000 to $2,500, and seldom is fixed at more than $5,000.

Judge Barnes replied that the government had the right to ask a bond which would insure the presence of the defendant in court.

A protest entered by Landis against holding Piquett incommunicado in the county jail was recognized by Judge Barnes, who said the prisoner was entitled to the same privileges as other prisoners, and such would be the direction of the court.

Trial Set for Sept. 17.

Judge Barnes then set the trial of Piquett, the two doctors, and O'Leary for Sept. 17. The United States district attorney's office, which had urged a speedy hearing of the case, indicated the government would be ready to prosecute on that date.

Arraignment of three other defendants on the charge of harboring Van Meter and Dillinger was postponed until Monday by United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker to await grand jury action after the trio had made a brief appearance before the commissioner. They are Marie Conforti, Van Meter's sweetheart, and William and Ella Finerty of Calumet City, who are charged with giving the Dillinger lieutenant refuge.

On the petition of Attorney P. J. Allman, representing the Finertys and Miss Conforti, Mrs. Finerty's bond was reduced from $5,000 to $2,000, after which she posted the bond and was released. Finerty was held in $20,000 bond and Miss Conforti was held in bond of $10,000.

It's a Dream Fantasy

The most curious painting in the 1934 art exhibit of A Century of Progress at the Art institute was named by institute officials yesterday after crowds had for the last few weeks viewed with obvious mystification a small canvas of the superrealism school, the latest subject of art expression dealing with fantasy of dreams.

The picture is "The Persistence of Memory" by the Spanish painter of the new school, Salvador Dali, 30 years old. Yesterday visitors passed by the pretentious paintings by more conservative artists to gather about the tiny colorful canvas, only 10 by 14 inches, executed with the same painstaking care given to miniatures.

On a tree branch hangs what appears to be a flexible watch. Below is another upon which a pattern of insects moves. To the right is a strange form like an animal's skin decorated with an eyelash or moustache and with another flexible watch. Behind is the strand, bright cliffs, and blue sky.

"What on earth," breathed one onlooker in surprise, "O, Beverly, look!" The guide book was thumbed, the name read. "That's good," commented the companion. "What's good about it?" was the retort. "The color." They tittered and moved on.

"My, how strange," murmured a woman. "Is that a donkey or a fish? That's what I call a wild one. Are those ants?" she asked her husband. "Yes, they must be," he replied, inspecting closely. "I count five legs, maybe six."

GERMAN GROUPS COMPLETE PLAN FOR FESTIVAL

Final plans for a German day festival on Sept. 16 in the Chicago Stadium were discussed last night in the Atlantic hotel by delegates from 300 German organisations of Chicago and vicinity.

The festival, according to Gustave A. Brand, chairman, will depict the progress of German culture and idealism from ancient days to modern times. The three hour program is to consist of three parts: First, the pageant proper detailing 2,000 years of German history; second, the arrival of the ship Concord, bringing the first German immigrants to America 250 years ago, and third, a market scene in old Nuremburg.

More than 700 persons will participate in the pageant and 3,000 singers will form a musical background for the entire program.

Among those on the sponsoring committee are Mayor Kelly, honorary chairman; Postmaster Ernest Kruetgen, Arthur Lueder, Oscar Stoeffel, Robert Sweitzer, Fred W. Brummel, Emmett Whealan, John S. Clark, and Herman C. Hintzpeter, president of the German club of Chicago.

POLICE PREVENT RANSOM PAYMENT BY LABATT AGENT

Brewer Tries to Give Kidnapers $25,000.

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 7.—(AP)—The Border City Star, in an exclusive copyrighted story today said that police prevented payment of $25,000 to the kidnapers of John S. Labatt, London, Ont., brewer.

The story quoted Alex Colvin, Windsor agent for the Labatt brewery, as saying the close police watch kept upon him prevented his turning over the money.

The reporter said that "three outstanding facts I obtained from Colvin in an interview at his home this afternoon" were:

Labatt promised $25,000 when he was released three weeks ago, and since that time has tried by every means in his power to make good his promise.

Each time he was frustrated by the authorities.

Gets New Death Threat.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 7.—John S. Labatt, wealthy brewer held captive three days by kidnapers, is under a new threat of death if he does not pay to the kidnap gang $25,000, in accordance with an agreement made during his captivity in a summer cottage on Lake Muskoka, twelve miles from Braceville, Ont.

In two letters received by Labatt since his release the gang first reminded him of his "solemn promise made over a meal" during his captivity to pay $25,000 after his release, and in a follow-up threatened him with dire consequences if the money is not forthcoming.

Labatt could see with one eye from underneath the tape used to blind him, and he was able to impart very definite information concerning the appearance of his kidnapers, police admitted today.

Premier Gets Threat.

Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn of Ontario today received through the mails from the kidnapers a printed note stating: "If you guys don't shut up the newspapers so ransom man and gang can work it will be too bad. Remember, no moves in papers after Friday. Put yourself in this position."

A reward of $5,000 for information leading to the conviction of the kidnapers was offered by the Ontario government tonight. At a conference with newspaper men Attorney General Arthur W. Roebuck asked that public patience be exercised with the government—that the hunt for the criminals would continue vigorously.

COAL MERCHANT LEADER ATTACKS HIGH CODE COSTS

Compares Budget Figures Citing Excesses.

Discrepancies in the budgets of the 49 divisional code authorities of the retail coal industry throughout the nation were pointed out yesterday by George W. Boller, secretary of the Independent Equipped Coal Merchants, and as official of the Ideal Fuel company.

The only possible explanation of the figures, Mr. Boller declared, is contained in the familiar old phrase: "Whatever the trafic will bear."

The annual budget of the Chicago code authority amounts to $188,700. This is $1,700 more than that of the national code authority itself, Mr. Boller said. Detroit's code authority, with an estimated tonnage of 2,60[illegible],000 annually, or more than one-third of Chicago's 7,500,000, has a budget of only $23,000.

Cites Much Lower Budgets.

The New Jersey code body, on its "collectible" tonnage of 5,000,000, has a budget of only $35,000 and $28,000 is the amount set aside to support the code authority for Colorado and Wyoming, with "collectible" tonnage of exactly one-fifth that of New Jersey.

"There is certainly no valid reason," said Mr. Boller, "for taking arbitrary figures to make up the huge amounts that are set forth as necessary in the budgets. Furthermore, if the Chicago code authority succeeds in collecting its 2.6 cents a ton, the assessment set on the coal actually sold here, variously estimated at ten and twelve million tons, it will amass for its use $260,000 or $312,000, instead of $158,700."

"Incidental Expenses" Go High.

In Chicago "incidental expenses" are put down at $53,000, while in New Jersey the code authority was content with $2,500. Again, in this district $30,000 is asked for postage, plus $3,000 for stationery, although in the New York City and Long Island trade area $10,000 covers both items, despite a greater tonnage.

The Chicago code authority members are down for total salaries of $33,000, estimated at $20 a day for 150 days for each of the nine coal dealers, and $30 a day for the chairman, not a coal dealer. However, in Detroit, the six members asked no salaries at all.

DRIVE ON RELIEF 'CHISELERS' CUTS MANY OFF ROLLS

Public's Aid in Baring Cheaters Urged.

The Illinois Emergency Relief commission has gained "substantial results" from its appeal to the public for aid in clearing the relief rolls of cheaters. This was announced yesterday by Charles E. Miner, assistant executive secretary. Continued cooperation of taxpayers in the campaign against cheaters was requested by Mr. Miner.

More than 180 reports have been received from private citizens in Cook county as a direct response to the appeal, but this figure does not include reports furnished to various agencies of the commission which may or may not have been inspired by the appeal. Nor does it include the reports in downstate counties, for which figures are not available.

Single Out Reported Chiselers.

Each report has been made the object of an individual investigation. A "substantial number," said Mr. Miner, resulted in the dropping of "clients" from the rolls. In other cases, it was learned that the "client" had previously been cut off from the supply of public funds. Some of the persons investigated were employed, but were not earning enough to maintain their families.

"The public is asked to continue this coöperation," said Mr. Miner. "We want any one who has any information which will assist us in removing chiselers from the relief rolls to notify us. This information will be treated confidentially and acted on promptly. If we are given the cooperation of the people at large we will be able to eliminate whatever cases are receiving unneeded aid."

Slight Decrease on Rolls.

A decrease of one-fifth of one per cent was indicated yesterday in the preliminary figures covering the number of resident families on relief in Illinois in August, as compared with July. In the latter month there were 281,774 relief families, while in August there were 281,224.

Cook county experienced a slight increase, from 120,667 to 127,817. This was more than offset by downstate figures, with 153,407 families for August and 155,107 during the previous month.

However, if drouth relief cases are excluded, there was a rise of 4,725 cases in August. The number of drouth stricken farmers on relief rolls fell from 7,890 in July to 2,615 the following month.

POISON DEATH HELD SUICIDE.

A coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict of suicide while of unsound mind at the inquest into the death of Miss Mary Zagata, 20 years old, who died in the Oak Forest infirmary Thursday after swallowing poison.

From Our "University" Style Book

The first page of our University style book opens up on the type of headgear to be seen this fall on young men in and out of college. The crown about 5¾ ins. high—the brim 2⅛ in. wide. Bound or welt edge—all with black bands. In covert, the new color that goes with blue as well as it does with grey or brown; seal brown and dark bluish grey—$5.

Neckties run to rep silks. These happen to be from our gold stripe set. Diagonal gold stripes on grey, dark blue, maroon, light blue and black backgrounds. The ideas we've gathered together in reps are one of the high spots of our "University" collection—$1.50.

Oxford cloth dominates the shirt page, which is not a new discovery as far as a young man's choice of shirting fabrics goes, but the collars are worth looking at. At the top is the new short collar without tabs, which calls for a pin. The three-inch point and the button-down Brookway, $2.50.

This shoe took hold just before commencement—we introduced it as the Habana. New material took it out of the hold-over class and we've given it a new name. For fall it will be known as the "Ruffian," of brown or grey bucko with leather saddle strap as well as black and brown seal leather with leather saddle strap—the bottoms are crepe rubber and waterproof—$5 pair.

ALL SOLDIERS IN STATE RUSH TO NEW ORLEANS

Huey Long, as Dictator, Takes Charge of City.

molested, the open vice dens are going to close and New Orleans is going to have a peaceful election. That is all I know about anything."

It is estimated that the troop movement will cost the taxpayers about $100,000 if they are out ten days.

The senator proposed "not one armed man at the polls." This included the militia. Mayor Walmsley said that the commission council of the city had passed an ordinance today to that effect, and there will not even be police at the polls, unless the arbitration committee requests them.

Enlist Under Call to Duty.

"However," he added, "arbitration committee or no committee, the constitution and the laws make the mayor the chief law enforcement officer of the city and if it becomes necessary, in order to maintain peace and quiet at any or all of the polls, I shall not shirk my duty. If it becomes necessary to swear in additional police we will do so. I would then want the Citizens Committee of 100 to furnish we with men who are known to be impartial."

Senator Long has his own ideas about the impartiality of the members of the citizens' committee and those who have enlisted under the "call to duty" which they have issued. Perhaps that is why he has the troops here.

Stephen Allison, a former newspaper man and government clerk, also a former Christian Science reader and practitioner, who lives in an old house in the French quarter, described conditions in that district.

Two Blocks from Old Cathedral.

"Two blocks from the old cathedral, we see it vitiated and degraded," he said. "There is no restricted district. Vice is unrestricted. It is a veritable Sodom and Gomorrah. In the houses of prostitution they have to pay the police or leave. The police use their authority of arrest unless paid. Lottery tickets litter the gutters. We cannot get anything done. It is systematized protection, from the mayor down. Everybody knows it. The police there have lost all sense of decency."

Gov. Allen's hurried call for a meeting of "ministers of the gospel" and other civic leaders at the Jung hotel last night to consider the problem of the red light district resulted in the adoption of a resolution to create a citizens' committee to investigate this subject and report by Sept. 16 on the best method of action.

Committee Walks Out in Body.

Members of the citizens' committee refused to take part in the session. They walked out in a body, but said they will be willing to meet with the governor or a committee selected by him at a more suitable place. Archbishop Shaw of New Orleans refused to attend the conference. He said he was not in politics, and did not approve of having New Orleans advertised before the world as a hotbed of corruption. Father John W. Hynes, S. J., president of the Loyola university, took a similar stand. The Catholic church, he said, cannot participate in politics, nor can the Jesuit order take any part in politics.

Ask Protest to Roosevelt.

Monroe, La., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—Citizens here launched a movement today to enlist Louisiana fathers and mothers in a protest to President Roosevelt against the use of school boy members of the National Guard in New Orleans, scene of a long factional political battle.

The committee asked parents of youthful guardsmen to telegraph the President asking him to issue an executive order "exempting school boys from active armed service in a purely political issue."

Telegrams were sent by the committee to Senator Huey P. Long and Gov. O. K. Allen, informing them "they will be held personally responsible if a single boy is injured as a result of the call to the Louisiana National Guard for armed service in New Orleans."

Wires Threat to Long.

From Baton Rouge came word that Alfred D. St. Amant, a business man, had telegraphed Senator Long that he would "personally kill him as he would any other mad dog," if any harm befell his son, a member of the Baton Rouge company of the guard.

St. Amannt made public the following telegram to Senator Long:

"I understand you have had the governor order the several National Guard units of the state mobilized for duty in New Orleans or elsewhere over the period of the approaching primary. My son, Thomas Harris St. Amannt, is a member of Company A, 156th infantry now mobilizing at Baton Rouge. This is to notify you that should any harm or injury come to him as a result of this mad argot of yours either by accident or otherwise, I will personally kill you as I would any other mad dog."

FOUR RESCUED FROM LAKE AS BOAT CAPSIZES

Three young men and a woman were hurled from a small sloop when it capsized in Lake Michigan off Wilmette harbor early yesterday. All were rescued while clinging to the hull of the overturned craft by a coast guard crew from the Wilmette station.

Robert Hall, 20 years old, 1515 Highland avenue, Wilmette, is the owner of the boat, the Nor'easter. With his guests, Edward Noble, 22 years old, and his wife, Angeline, 20, of Kalamazoo, Mich., and Bruce Ellison, 18, of 1221 Lake street, Wilmette, Hall put out at 6 o'clock yesterday morning.

Lookout E. R. Hudson of the coast guard station watched the small boat as it sailed out into the lake. He saw it capsize about a half mile off shore. The coast guards found Ellison and Hall supporting Mr. and Mrs. Noble, neither of whom could swim.

Hall is an employe of Lloyd Hollister, Wilmette printer and publisher. Ellison, who plans to enter Northwestern university this fall, is a son of Robert J. Ellison, Chicago civil engineer. Noble, a garage owner, is Hall's cousin.

U. S. LIQUOR UNIT PARTS BREWERS FROM RETAILERS

Announces Drive to End "Tied" Houses.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 7.—(AP)—A new enforcement sword was brandished today by the Federal Alcohol Control administration (FACA) with the intention of severing all binding ties between the men who make beer and those who sell it to the public.

The enforcement weapon has just been sharpened in conflicts with two of the nation's biggest breweries. FACA officials said it would be swung hardest at brewers controling dram shops.

The reason the "tied" house is being singled out, it was explained, is that it receives special favors from brewers, such as gifts of beer and bar fixtures, and consequently the competition is unfair.

"Just a Beginning."

"That's just a beginning," an administration spokesman said of recent court clashes with big brewers on this question.

More complaints about violations of the code ban against the "tied" house have been referred to the alcohol administration by the brewing code authority and some are scheduled for early action.

Present confidence of the FACA in its ability to enforce the liquor codes is born of legal victories over the Joseph Schlitz Brewing company of Milwaukee and the Anheuser-Busch brewery of St. Louis.

Ruled Against Schlitz Company.

Federal Judge Walter Lindley of Illinois prevented the Schlitz company from furnishing 100 signs, costing more than $400 each, to Chicago taprooms, beer gardens, and other retail outlets.

Another decree, obtained from Federal Judge Wayne G. Borah of Louisiana, forced the Anheuser-Busch brewery to cancel contracts to lend bar fixtures and other equipment to retail establishments throughout the state of Louisiana.

CITY DRESSES UP FOR BUSY WEEK OF HOMECOMING

Series of Celebrations to Begin Tomorrow.

Chicago goes on dress parade today to welcome home her wandering sons and daughters.

Although the first annual home coming celebration does not open officially until tomorrow the State street shopping district and many outlying community centers began to put on their holiday attire last night. Gay flags and bunting, streamers, banners, pennants, and panels were erected along the eight blocks of the city's shopping mart, as men worked all night to have them in place by 5 o'clock this morning.

Climax on Sunday Night.

Forty homing pigeons will be released at State and Washington streets at 11 o'clock this morning, to carry a message to as many cities in the middle west inviting them to participate in Chicago's Home Coming week.

The celebration will be climaxed next Sunday night at Soldiers' field in the "Drama of Chicago on Parade," in which 4,500 singers, dancers, musicians, and actors will depict the progress of Chicago from a bog on the river bank to its high place among the cities of the world.

Throughout the week State street merchants have dedicated each day to a part of the American family which brought it from a muddy lane to a wide roadway where $400,000,000 worth of business is done annually. Monday will be general sales day, Tuesday home furnishings, Wednesday "Back to School" day for children and young people, with a parade including "Wings of a Century" from the Fair; Thursday, women's apparel day; Friday, women's accessories, and Saturday will be devoted to the men.

Neighborhood celebrations are being staged in forty-seven communities. Last night two of them, Logan Square and Grand Crossing, held parades, in which merchants of the districts participated with floats, bands, and other entertainment. Mayor Kelly addressed the gathering at Logan square.

6,000 at Oak Park Fete.

In all there will be twenty-five parades, eighteen neighborhood pageants, a score of carnivals, a county fair celebration, athletic contests, masquerades, street dances, baby shows, and many events for the children.

Radio actors have arranged a reproduction of the great Chicago fire, including the historic O'Leary cow, which will be broadcast over a nation-wide hook-up Monday night at 10 o'clock.

Last night Oak Park's three day celebration reached its peak when 6,000 persons gathered in the High school stadium to observe a historical pageant.

MACY'S DEFENSE OF NEW DEALERS STIRS N. Y. FEUD

State G. O. P. Moves to Oust Him as Chairman.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 7.—[Special.]—An amazing political war flared here today. The peculiar spectacle was offered of the titular head of the Republican party in New York stoutly defending the New Deal against criticism while a majority of the prominent Republicans in the state organized to wrest control from the leader who, they charged, had betrayed them. He is W. Kingsland Macy, state chairman of the Republican party, known as a personal friend of President Roosevelt in the fall campaign.

W. K. MACY.

When the other Republican leaders, including former Senator James W. Wadsworth, Bertrand H. Snell, minority leader in the house; Ogden L. Mills, and others finally were convinced Macy actually insisted upon this somewhat astounding dictum, they formed a committee of 400 to remove Macy from his post at the coming convention and nominate Wadsworth for governor.

Macy Backs Seabury.

Macy is sponsoring Samuel Seabury, an independent Democrat, for the Republican nomination.

This move, announced yesterday, aroused Macy today to a screaming denunciation of the old guard and an added attack upon the American Liberty league, recently founded to support the constitution.

"This appears to be the first ghastly illegitimate offspring of the American Liberty league," said Macy's statement, referring to the committee of 400, which includes almost every Republican of note in the state. "This committee is just as brainless an effort as its half witted parent."

See Move to Split Party.

To which, the Republican committee responded that Macy had forfeited his right to his position as leader by attempting to suppress criticism of the opposing party's actions.

Unofficial comment at the headquarters of the committee opposed to Macy was that the state chairman was engaged in a deliberate attempt to split the party, thus making it easier for the Democrats, who may have a tough time explaining to the voters a big increase in state indebtedness and expenditures, despite economy promises.

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman is sure to be the Democratic nominee for re-election, it is conceded, and Macy has been a consistent supporter of the governor throughout the latter's term, it was pointed out. A wave of discontent with the high taxes growing out of the Lehman régime has been evident among the voters, but with the Republican party divided the governor may easily slide into office a second time, it was explained.

See Chance for Upset.

The new Republican committee, of which F. Trubee Davison, former assistant secretary of war, is chairman, has an excellent chance of taking control of the state campaign from Macy and blocking Seabury's nomination, according to political observers.

In his attempt to avoid discussion of the Roosevelt policies during the coming state campaign, Macy argued that it meant certain defeat for the Republicans if they opposed the New Deal.

ACT TO SUSPEND DR. WYNEKOOP'S MEDICAL PERMIT

Suspension of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop's license to practice medicine was recommended yesterday by the medical committee of the state department of registration and education. The committee recommended revocation of the license of her brother-in-law, Dr. Gilbert H. Wynekoop.

Dr. Alice is now serving a 25 year sentence in the woman's prison at Dwight for the murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta Gardner Wynekoop. Appearing for her, Attorney W. W. Smith asked that her license be suspended and not revoked pending the outcome of her appeal from the conviction to the Illinois Supreme court. The committee granted this request, but recommended that if the conviction be upheld the license be automatically revoked.

Dr. Gilbert Wynekoop is now in the Illinois Security hospital at Menard, having been adjudged insane. That fact was given as the occasion for the suspension of his license.

JOHN E. CASSIDY, NRA COMPLIANCE DIRECTOR, QUITS

Will Resume Practice of Law in Peoria.

John E. Cassidy, Peoria lawyer, announced yesterday his resignation as state compliance director of NRA and of the National Emergency council for reasons which he said were "purely personal." His resignation, after eight months of service, was accepted in a letter dated Sept. 1 by Donald R. Richberg as executive director of the emergency council, a coördinating body over all governmental emergency agencies.

Asked whether his action was prompted by predictions of the collapse of NRA, Mr. Cassidy said, "Not at all." He declined to comment on the degree of effectiveness of code compliance measures in Illinois other than to say that approximately $125,000 restitution had been made to employes who complained of being paid less than minimum code wages.

Gives Reason for Action.

"I am for the NRA," Mr. Cassidy said. "I think it can be reduced to government aid in securing minimum wages and maximum hours and in preventing sales below cost. Some of the things that have been put into codes are workable and some are not."

"My every inclination, inspired by devotion to President Roosevelt, is to continue my service," Cassidy wrote to Richberg on Aug. 28. "However, demands of my law practice as well as family considerations have accumulated to a point that can be no longer denied."

He explained that he had a "pretty substantial" practice in civil law at Peoria under the firm name of Cassidy & Knobloch and that his family resides there.

Richberg replied that he would accept Cassidy's resignation to take effect Sept. 15, "recognizing the valuable and conscientious service you have rendered." Mr. Cassidy's appointment last January was made by Frank C. Walker, predecessor of Richberg as director of the coördinating council.

Roberts Is Acting Director.

Questioned as to his successor, Cassidy declared he did not know who it would be, but that he might be consulted as to his recommendation on that point. Frederick L. Roberts, his executive assistant, will be acting director between Sept. 15 and the time the appointment is made.

Roberts initiated the NRA program in Illinois last year after being transferred from a post in the bureau of foreign commerce, where he had served for 15 years.

AN EMPLOYER WINS FIRST DECISION BY NRA'S LABOR BOARD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—For the first time since it was formed weeks ago, the national labor relations board today decided a case in favor of an employer instead of in favor of the protesting union.

The employer was the Baltimore Transfer company, charged with discriminating against seven union workers when it rehired men after a strike. The teamsters and chauffeurs' union protested that there was discrimination and that this was a violation of section 7A of the NIRA.

In rejecting the union's case, the national board overthrew a decision by its Baltimore regional board. The national board held that there was no evidence to show discrimination and that the transfer company had acted fairly in rehiring the striking workers in the order that they applied for work.

TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION MEETS IN CHICAGO TODAY

The International Typographical union will open its 78th annual convention today at the Palmer House after an absence from Chicago of 41 years. The union last held its convention here during the World's Fair of 1893.

NRA, pensions, unemployment, and other problems affecting the printing industry will come before the convention. More than 400 delegates, representing 75,000 members, and 2,000 visitors are expected.

The Fair has set aside Sunday as "I. T. U." day in honor of the organization.

BOND COMMITTEE FACTS TOLD AT STORMY HEARING

Witnesses' Frankness Is Met by Cheers, Jeers.

A Chicago banker who is himself a member of a real estate bondholders' protective committee yesterday told the congressmen investigating activities of these groups that "practically in every case the committees are actually self-appointed and are representatives of bond houses and banks" rather than of the small owners of securities.

Another protective committee member, a former investment broker, said that "most of the committeemen" he knew did not own a bond issued against the valuable properties under their control.

A third witness, another banker, asserted: "I'd hate to have to answer —an an individual—for the statements made concerning the value and stability of all the real estate bonds sold here."

1,000 Listen to Testimony.

All these statements were brought out in a courtroom on the sixth floor of the United States courthouse during a stormy hearing which lasted, with time out for meals, from 10 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock last night. Throughout the session nearly 1,000 men and women, most of whom had to stand, remained packed in the room, which has a normal capacity of 500.

The throng of middle aged men and women followed the examination of the witnesses by Representatives A. J. Sabath [Dem., Chicago], Everett M. Dirksen [Rep., Pekin, Ill.], and Thomas O'Malley [Dem., Milwaukee] with almost savage intensity. Although somewhat less numerous than the crowd of Thursday, when the testimony taking began, the spectators yesterday were even more vociferous, continuing to cheer, jeer, and applaud.

At one point in the hearing a woman's shrill voice was heard to scream at one witness: "I'd like to sock you in the eye!" At another time a man shouted from the rear of the room during the testimony of another witness, "String him up! Throw him out!"

These demonstrations brought the admonition from the congressmen that the room would be cleared if they continued.

Tuttle Astonishes Throng.

Charles S. Tuttle, vice president of the Central Republic Trust company and a member of the protective committee of the American Bond and Mortgage company, which is in control of 100 million dollars' worth of property upon which bonds have defaulted, was the banker who said most of the bondholders' protective groups were self-appointed.

A white haired man in his 70s, Mr. Tuttle astonished the spectators by his frank statement. He was replying to questions of E. Jay Comer, chief investigator for the congressmen.

"O yes," said he calmly, "I was made a member of the American Bond and Mortgage protective group by the bank for which I work. I had headed the real estate loan department of the bank and had made the loans on most of the issues in which we had been involved. My place on the protective group was one which resulted from my association with the ban ."

Happy to Shelve Responsibility.

The questioning then turned to the subject of the refusal of most of the protective groups to turn over lists of bondholders to those directly interested in the reorganization of properties. When asked if his committee had also refused to hand over the names of all bondholders to interested parties Mr. Tuttle replied that it had. Asked by Congressman Sabath the reason for this attitude he said:

"I wish you had the authority to direct me to hand over the list of bondholders. I'd be glad to do it if you would take the full responsibility in the chaos which would follow."

He said it has been his experience that the bondholders can never agree among themselves, and asserted that usually the information was used by dissenting groups among them to cause costly litigation which further complicated the picture.

An outburst of cat calls, and the shouts of threats occurred during the testimony of Dayton Keith of Lake Forest, one of the first witnesses of the day, and chairman of the American Bond and Mortgage company protective committee. Mr. Keith was formerly an investment broker.

Yells Reach Climax.

It began when he told Investigator Comer that he did not own a single bond in the properties he was reorganizing. It grew louder when he said that only one of five other men on the committee owned any of the A. B. & M. company issues, and reached a climax when he said, after admitting that he was being paid a salary of $15,000 a year for his work with the committee: "And believe it or not I can't live on that kind of money."

Frederic S. Pope of Hinsdale, banker and former official of the Chicago Title and Trust company, told the committee he "would hate to have to answer for the statements made concerning value of realty bonds sold in Chicago."

George W. Rossetter, head of the accounting firm which bears his name and chairman of the protective committee handling the bond issues of the firm of S. W. Straus & Co., testified at the close of the afternoon hearing and during the early part of the night session.

Mr. Rossetter read a 34 page statement in which he outlined the policies of the protective committee, and later in a discourse to the congressmen advocated federal aid to bondholders similar to that given to farmers.

Congressman Sabath said that "steps would be taken" at the next congress to present a bill along that line "if the administration can do so without being accused of spending too much money."

EVIDENCE BARES ENGLISH KING AS GUN SALESMAN

Part in Polish Deal Is Told to Inquiry.

velopments on the Driggs anti-aircraft gun if it would "get sufficient business to expand armament facilities in the United States."

In connection with Driggs' efforts to sell munitions to Turkey it was revealed by the introduction of letters that the U. S. S. Raleigh was used as a showroom for Driggs' guns when it went to that country in 1929. This use of the warship was made as a result of arrangements the Driggs company was able to effect in Washington, it was shown.

Driggs defended this by contending that the aid given his company by the navy and war departments occasioned no expense to the United States government because the cruiser was in Turkish waters anyhow.

Calls British Tactics "Dirty."

The keen competition between the Driggs and Vickers concerns for the Turkish business was shown in letters written by officials of the American firm. The letters complained bitterly of the English firm's tactics.

Driggs said they were "dirty" and that his Turkey representative reported that the British concern employed women of ill repute in its sales efforts. The women were used to entertain prospective munitions buyers.

A letter to Driggs from Herbert Allen, one of his agents, stated that the "Vickers crowd had almost an entire embassy in number working for them, and use women of doubtful character freely."

In a letter to Driggs written in June, 1927, the company's Warsaw representative told of the necessity for entertaining a large number of persons in order to get the Polish nation's orders.

U. S. Navy Aids Colombia.

Among the other somewhat startling disclosures made during the day's hearing was the testimony that an American naval officer prepared plans to aid Colombia in protecting her ports from Peru at a time when the two countries were disputing over the Leticia region.

The officer, Lieutenant Commander James H. Strong, now resigned and the present commander of the Colombian air forces, was shown to have given the Colombian consul general in New York detailed data concerning plans for the defense of the ports of Buenaventura and Tumaco.

LONDON PRESS INDIGNANT

LONDON, Sept. 8 [Saturday].—(AP)—London's morning newspapers expressed astonishment and indignation today that the name of King George had been mentioned at the Washington inquiry into munitions manufacturers.

At the same time a move was under way to launch an inquiry of the same kind in Great Britain, initiated by Liberals in parliament.

The Morning Post, noting that his majesty's name had been injected into the inquiry, added an editorial footnote to a summary of the Washington evidence:

"We publish this incredible story as illustrating the sort of evidence which is thought good enough for the senatorial inquiry."

Call Story Most Amazing.

The Daily Herald said the disclosures that armaments agents had been making use of the name of "a very high personage" were "the most amazing" of the Washington evidence.

"The Washington inquiry has produced sufficient evidence about practices in this country to make clear there is an overwhelming case for such an inquiry here."

While some papers plainly stated the name of the king had been mentioned, others merely implied it by the use of such terms as the Herald's "high personage." The Times published a whole column about he armaments investigation, but did not mention the incident at all.

Authoritative comment on the use of the king's name in a senate inquiry in Washington was not obtainable, owing to the lateness of the hour at which the news got into print here. An emphatic denial, however, was regarded by informed persons as inevitable.

Freshman Squad of Letters Has Training Camp

Writers of Best Sellers Come Back Instructors.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

HOME from Parnassus. On a mountain top dedicated to the pursuit of the art of literature . . . with walks of white Vermont marble in the Green mountains at Bread Loaf inn . . . the very sound of the geography was Parnassian. Gathered there, there were sixty-five writers in assorted stages of development [or decay] and a staf of fourteen, including four young "fellows." Two weeks of intensive work the staf and the "studges" put in, and by the end of the fourteen days seventy-nine souls were racing on high for the goals of success.

Bread Loaf has a short but vivid history. The inn was once owned by an eccentric named Battell who invited to its shelter all of the leading literary incandescents of his day—Charles Dudley Warner, Mark Twain gave it cachet in their days. Mr. Battell also owned some 35,000 acres of land on the mountain top where his lions could roar unhampered. One of the most unusual bequests ever made to a college was the presentation by Mr. Battell at his death to Middlebury college of the whole lion preserve, including the inn itself.

Dr. Paul Dwight Moody, son of the famous evangelist, Dwight L. Moody [and father of one of our favorite human beings, Charlotte Moody], put inn and acres to a brilliant use in establishing a summer graduate English school for six weeks of the Vermont coolness, and John Farrar, editor, author, publisher, and general angel, suggested extending the joys to two weeks of an intensive conference where young writers could meet established authors and bring their manuscripts for criticism.

Seven years ago the first conference was held. Since then other colleges in other states have followed suit. Yearly the conference has flourished, but this year was the peak. Hervey Allen came back—part of Anthony Adverse was written at Bread Loaf, and there are pictures around of a ship model that he made when the intricacies of Anthony's career made him feel the urge to use his hands in release.

Hervey was the sort of pater squire of the mountain . . . always in the breach in the arguments about experimentation vs. classic methods, sitting hours on the side porch of his cottage trying to iron out the problems of the inexperienced, never losing his poise nor his patience.

Julia Peterkin gave them all literary religion. As usual, five minutes after she began to talk at the first lecture, the whole audience was in the palm of her hand and for two weeks her progress down the white marble paths was that of a queen with her court, or of a surgeon and his gallery. One very smart young thing, who had studied Aimee Semple McPherson as the material for her master's thesis at Radcliffe, said that every quality that Aimee McPherson had spent years acquiring in the business of winning souls Julia Peterkin had by the grace of God and her wide, generous smile.

Bernard de Voto, not so long ago of Northwestern, now of the faculty of Harvard, author of "We Accept with Pleasure," to be published Sept. 21, and also author of the best book ever written on Mark Twain, "Mark Twain's America," was the hard-headed, stern wrangler for reality in writing. He is one of the born teachers, one of the innate exhorters to the better [and more honest] literary life.

Gorham Munson, critic in that subtle sense of the word which implies the business of taking the machinery apart to see why it ticks and putting it back together so that it will continue ticking, led many straying souls into the straight and narrow paths of expert nonfictional writing.

John Farrar gave whole-hearted advice about publishing, and his wife, Margaret, who is a major darling, has three children of her own and is something or other very official about children's reading, was liaison officer between the juvenilists and their futures. Walter Prichard Eaton, America's best known dramatic critic, found a couple of good dramatists under the cabbages and fired even the third raters with zeal. He is the most consistently real of New Englanders, with his rather sharp, clipped speech emitting the most delightful and dryly humorous observations. Raymond Everitt, New York representative of the largest international literary agency, Curtis Brown, Ltd., told the conference the hard, cold but warming facts about selling manuscripts.

Theodore Morrison of the department of English at Harvard led the poets into new fields, and he and Mr. de Voto and this critic had ardent arguments about Archibald MacLeish's "American Letter." We claimed it was the beginning of the greater MacLeish, and Mr. Morrison hotly pointed out its failings. We were all amused when Archibald MacLeish, who came over on Saturday evening from his home in New Hampshire to give a reading of his poetry, chose "American Letter" as his final barrage.

That Saturday evening other distinguished writers dropped in—Alexander Laing, author of "The Sea Witch," who did an amusing dormouse act, and Herbert West, who apparently knows everybody who ever pushed a pen in London [they are both on the faculty at Dartmouth], and Irving Fineman, author of the prize winning novel "This Pure Young Man" [and others], a cosmopolitan and a sophisticate and professor at the experimental Bennington college, and Owen Lattimore, whose books on the rigors of the Mongolian desert don't prepare you for a monocled, perfectly groomed young Englishman with soft spoken ironies about the horrors of Chicago.

Another evening Dorothy Canfield Fisher came over from her home in Arlington, Vt., to read one of her stories and explain where the material of it came from, something which she does supremely and inspiringly well.

The young "fellows" were startlingly bright young persons. Josephine Johnson, whose first novel, "Now in November," will be published next week, looked to me exactly as I imagine the young Willa Cather must have looked. She is a sensitive little thing destined, so every one agreed, to be really great. Lauren Gilfillan, author of "I Went to Pitt College," pattered down the marble walks like a sprite, intense and intent on her destiny . . . a girl just out of Smith who had hurled herself into the life of the miners and come out not wholly untouched by tragedy. Scott O'Dell drove all the way from California with his engaging first novel, "Woman of Spain," to be the best looking and most engaging young gentleman on the range. The fourth "fellow" was Mrs. C. C. Prentice, svelte, gray maned, sophisticate whose first novel is a-borning.

Well, that's the skeleton of a saga of a Parnassian voyage. This member o the staf went to Bread Loaf for rest and a spectator's view of the literary circus. She was pressed into service as critic and general animal trainer, and some day she's determined to go back to see the show from out front!

TRAGIC HERO

Neil Bell's "Winding Road" was published yesterday. It is a tragic, touching tale of a child of misfortune. The book has had the most extravagant praise in England.

Brett Young's 'Little World' Hit in England

Critic Sees Success with American Readers.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.]—At the moment, the leading success in England among new novels is Francis Brett Young's "This Little World" [Heinemann]. It will probably be as great a success in the United States when it is published there. It deals with great skill and thoroughness and beauty with the life of a corner of England—an imaginary corner, but the real England, and a corner so well known to Mr. Brett Young that he is aware of every aspect of its life. He records every aspect.

The book perhaps resembles "Portrait of Clare" [which in America was called "Love Is Enough"] more closely than any other of its author's works; and it was of "Portrait of Clare" that one celebrated English writer of an older generation said briefly, "It's England." The new book speaks for the old order, but Mr. Brett Young has a fine pen and he is no bigot. Those who felt that John Galsworthy gave them the truth about a race will enjoy "This Little World."

Another book which is being very highly praised is "Dew on the Grass," by Elfuned Lewis [Lovat Dickson], which has the advantage of a prefatory letter to the author from Charles Morgan. The author, as her name indicates, is a Welshwoman [Charles Morgan and his wife are both Welsh], and she is said to have written a really beautiful and distinguished book about childhood. This is not only a choice of the Book guild [a private and noncommercial organization which selects a book for its members each month and awards degrees of merit to other books], but is a recommendation of the Book society.

One of the reasons for the success of Mrs. Ethel Boileau, whose "Turnip Tops" has been a seller in England for three years, and whose newer novel, "When Yellow Leaves," has already sold more copies than "Turnip Tops," is that, like Mr. Brett Young, but less ambitiously, she writes about an English countryside that is passing.

Mrs. Boileau says, "I have no illusions about my own work. I try to write honestly about life as I see it, of people as they are. . . . I live in the country. I wanted to write an accurate chronicle of life as it is lived there."

And she has ideas about the land and its administration. Readers can tell that she knows what she is talking about, and she can interest them in her picture; hence the success which has puzzled some people including the American publishers.

Mystery of the Week
BY MORTIMER QUICK.

"The Teatray Murders" [Morrow], by Christopher Bush, is another account of unseemly doings in an English institution of learning. This time it is a secondary school of no importance, but if murder story writers are right it must be pretty dangerous nowadays to be a British headmaster. They are being bumped off in all sorts of queer ways that would put any Chicago gangster to shame on the score of ingenuity.

In this instance there are two sudden deaths within a few minutes of each other, and George Wharton, something new in Scotland Yard men, takes along his friend, Ludovic Travers, to help him find out just who is responsible. Until the very end of the book they have very little luck, but they are nice fellows whose further career I, for one, look forward to following.

There are a lot of other nice people in the book, too, all of whom heartily hated the murdered headmaster and were very fond of the other victim, who was another of the masters. You must accept the English way of doing things and not allow yourself to be confused by what might seem to us pedagogical oddities to thoroughly enjoy the book, for it should be enjoyed by any one who likes a neat murder story neatly told.

At the finish there isn't a loose end lying anywhere about. Everything that is said, done or thought falls quietly into place. You may wish that some one else had committed the ingenious murder, but you will have to admit that from the very beginning you hoped against hope This is the second or third detective story that Mr. Bush has written and each is better than the last.

Famous Author of South America Writes Story of a Priest

"Holy Wednesday" (Appleton Century) comes to us in translation from the pen of a noted South American author, Manuel Galvez. Through the events of Holy Wednesday, more or less routine, Father Solanas, fat, middle aged, heroic, reviews his own life, happy in devotion, sad in loneliness from the wife, home, and children that he might have had. As a youth he had loved not too well, but wisely, and instead of the father of his own children he had become a father in God.

The privation had never become unimportant to him, although the years had brought him the belief that any other life than the one he chose would have been wicked. When fate sends him in the confessional box the girl—now grown old—whom he had loved the struggle ends with Father Solanas' "strangled cry."

"Holy Wednesday" is written in that semi-impressionistic style in which many of the Spanish novels of the southern America have been done . . . showing the definite French influence of precision of word choice and pattern, of idea as well as of sentences which produces something delicate and cerebral rather than powerful and realistic.

Pictures Years of Fighting in Latin Revolts

Col. Dean Ivan Lamb Likes a Good Scrap.

Astonishing adventures race by the reader of "The Incurable Filibuster" [Farrar & Rinehart] as Col. Dean Ivan Lamb picturesquely pictures his twenty-five years of professional soldiering in Mexico, Central and South America. This is no ghost written autobiography; it's a straightforward, smashing series of sensational exploits in the fightingest lot of revolutions—a round dozen of 'em—that a gallant Yankee soldier of fortune ever fought, bled over, and nearly died in to satisfy his love of a good scrap.

Col. Lamb's astonishingly adventurous autobiography is a whirlwind of action, beginning with a wild race to get out of New Orleans ahead of some crooked gamblers whom he outgunned.

Later he stumbled into a South American revolution and found it so intriguing that he refused to go back to the more humdrum life of working for Uncle Sam on the Panama canal, which he had tried and found sadly lacking in thrills.

Col. Lamb came back to America, took a few lessons in flying, made his solo flight, and then sickness sent him to Arizona. But on the left side of the main street of Naco a perfectly good war was raging in Mexico, and Lamb plunged into it. He told a Mexican general he was one of the best flyers to be found. The general believed him and bought a plane.

Lamb had a hilarious time in the air, pretending to fight another Yankee filibuster who was flying for the other side. Then he quit sky fighting temporarily and headed for the Balkans, where he heard there was trouble.

Col. Lamb jumps over his world war record, which was a brave one, but which apparently didn't fit into his picture of life as an "incurable filibuster."

Lamb was one of the first pilots employed by the United States postoffice department when it started the air mail to Chicago, but, ironically, "fires, crashes, and poor equipment" eventually retired him.

Revolutions, however, always were being staged somewhere on the western hemisphere, and Lamb played the circuit—often with a star rôle. His last and bloodiest performance was a desperate civil war, which lasted many months, in one of the Brazilian states.

"The Incurable Filibuster" is an outstanding man's book—there are stories in it which even the most sophisticated of the fair sex might be puzzled over—but we believe there isn't a woman who won't relish its outstanding bravery and chuckle over its bacchanalian humor and thrill to its fearless fighting. An Epochal Book Completed

For More Than 100 Years Each New Edition of the Merriam Webster Has Marked an Epoch in American Education

The New Merriam Webster Now Ready, Is the Most Important Contribution to Educational Equipment In 25 Years

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
Second Edition

A New Creation—Greater Than Its Famous Predecessors
The past quarter-century has witnessed an amazing evolution in man's practical and cultural knowledge. The foundation book of education, Webster's New International Dictionary, had to be remade to comprehend this vast change. No mere revision was adequate. A new creation was necessary—a new book that could serve the present generation as Merriam-Websters have served succeeding generations for more than a century. The stupendous task of making a NEW Merriam-Webster has been completed. A new book has been created that is beyond comparison with any other ever published.

207 of the World's Greatest Specialists
Under the leadership of William Allan Neilson, President of Smith College, as Editor in Chief, the greatest corps of editors ever organized was created to make this volume and to maintain the Merriam-Webster reputation for "supreme authority." Every technical subject has been handled by a specialist. Dean Roscoe Pound of Harvard, for Law; President J. S. Ames of Johns Hopkins, for Physics; Professor H. H. Bender of Princeton, for Etymology, are representative of the unassailable authority back of this new Merriam-Webster.

600,000 Entries—The Greatest Amount of Information Ever Put into One Volume
The scope and completeness of material in this book make it a source of information on every subject in the whole range of human knowledge. It is the key to every science, every art, every branch of man's thought and activity. Never before has any book covered so many subjects.

122,000 Words That Are In No Other General Dictionary
No other dictionary has ever approached the new Merriam-Webster in the size of its vocabulary. How greatly our language has broadened, to keep pace with modern civilization, is evidenced by the fact that there are thousands of new words in the new Merriam-Webster.

Thousands of Encyclopedic Articles
The new Merriam-Webster goes far beyond the ordinary conception of a dictionary. Not only does it list the largest vocabulary ever published with the meaning, spelling, pronunciation, etymology, and use of each word; but in addition it contains encyclopedic articles in thousands of cases. These articles are amazingly rich in useful information and add incalculably to the educational value of the book.

12,000 Terms Illustrated
Wherever a picture is needed to enable you to see a thing clearly, the new Merriam-Webster gives you an authentic, detailed illustration, expertly drawn to show just what you want to know. The pictorial illustrations, including many beautiful color plates, cover every subject imaginable, and offer a great fund of information and education in graphic and fascinating form.

35,000 Geographical Subjects
Complete pronouncing Gazetteer section covering the entire world. Modern names, latest population figures, most useful and up-to-date geographical information.

13,000 Biographical Notes
Pertinent information on noteworthy men and women from classical times down to the present.

Marks a New Stage in the Science of Etymology
The new Merriam-Webster sets a new standard for completeness and accuracy in presenting the sources and evolution of words, and offers etymological treatment far beyond anything ever before published.

Definitions Are Authentic But Easy to Understand
While the first requirement of every definition in the new Merriam-Webster has been absolute accuracy, at the same time the editors have striven for the highest degree of clearness and simplicity so that anyone can easily understand everything except matters of interest only to technicians.

Synonyms and Antonyms
The admirable work on Synonyms is that of John Livingston Lowes prepared especially for Webster's New International Dictionary. Thousands of Synonyms have been added. Complementing the Synonyms are full lists of Antonyms—the largest number in any general dictionary.

Write for Free Illustrated Brochure
It is obviously impossible in such small space to give an adequate description of this epoch-making book. There are scores of striking features that can not even be mentioned here. So that you may realize fully why the new Merriam-Webster is the greatest single volume ever published, we will be glad to send you without cost or obligation a most interesting and handsomely illustrated booklet containing full information, sample pages, and specimen color plates. NEW PARK BOARD ADOPTS BUDGET OF $25,836,000

$20,357,000 Set Aside for Debt Service.

The new Chicago park district board at a special meeting yesterday adopted an appropriation ordinance for an eight month period ending Dec. 31, 1934. The commissioners set aside $20,357,407 for debt service, including bond principal and interest, and $5,478,637 for all corporate purposes, a total budget of $25,836,044.

R. J. Dunham, president of the board, said that the nearest estimate he could make of savings to result from park consolidation this year would amount to $400,000. He explained that of the twenty-two superseded park districts twenty-one had different fiscal years and a detailed analysis of savings could not be made at this time.

Rigid Economy Promised.

A formal statement, signed by all the commissioners, summed up their economy aims as follows:

"Our budget, as adopted, reflects maximum requirements only and reservation has been made whereby a curtailment may be effected. From our survey of conditions in the park service the commissioners feel that they can safely assure the taxpayers that through the application of rigid economy measures they can and will effect a substantial reduction in the cost of the maintenance and operation of their parks, with at least as high a standard of service as they have been accustomed to under the old system."

The appropriation ordinance specified that the salaries provided for were at maximum rates and that should it be necessary for the commissioners to scale down the budget could not be construed as making the wage rates permanent.

New Secretary Elected.

"Owing to lack of sufficient time," the formal statement said in this regard, "it has been impossible to accomplish a complete classification of employés in all branches of the park service as will be done before the preparation of our 1935 budget, which, under the act, must be adopted before the first day of next January."

Before adoption of the budget the commissioners accepted the resignation of Ralph Shaw as secretary of the board, and elected J. Frank Lyman to the post. Lyman, Democratic committeeman of the Forty-eighth ward, was general superintendent of the old Lincoln park system.

There was a full membership of the board present. The commissioners, besides Dunham, are Harry Joseph, vice president; Martin J. Kennelly, Bessie O'Neill, and John Nash.

GIRL WHO KILLED PARENTS IS FREED BY GRAND JURORS

Anna Maietta, 15 years old, who killed her father and also accidentally killed her mother when she fired a pistol several times at the father as the parents were engaged in a quarrel in their home, 1109 South Damen avenue, last week, was freed by the grand jury yesterday.

The jurors voted a no bill in the case after hearing a number of witnesses including a sister of Anna, Carmella, 19 years old; two brothers, Mike, 14 years old, and Nick, 12, and several neighbors. Dr. Harry R. Hoffman, director of the Criminal court behavior clinic, another witness, reported on an extensive investigation into the girl's history and the family relations which, he said, disclosed many instances of cruelty on the part of the father.

"It is our opinion," Dr. Hoffman's report stated, "that with proper supervision this patient could make a good adjustment to her environment and be a useful member of society, but if this child were institutionalized in a penal institution it is our opinion there would be a gradual deterioration. She is not committable as insane or feeble-minded." Dr. Harold S. Hulbert, alienist retained by the defense, concurred.

The girl was turned over to juvenile authorities and later was released on a $1,000 bond to the custody of her uncle, Joseph Tortorici, 1960 Ogden avenue, a grocer, pending her appearance Wednesday in the Juvenile court. At that time a guardian will be appointed.

POSTPONE TRIAL OF INSULL AND 15 UNTIL OCT. 2

Samuel Insull's trial on a charge of using the mails to defraud was postponed by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson yesterday when attorneys for some of the 15 other defendants gained a continuance until Oct. 2. Attorneys Harry S. Ditchburne and Charles C. Lounsbury, recently retained as counsel for four officials of Halsey, Stuart & Co., won the delay. The trial date originally was Sept. 18.

Ditchburne and Lounsbury first asked a continuance until Nov. 5. United States Attorney Green told the court that he would not object to a two weeks' delay, but would protest any extension. The new attorneys also indicated that they may file a motion for a separate trial for their clients. A similar motion in Insull's behalf was rejected several weeks ago.

Judge Wilkerson instructed the attorneys to complete all preliminary motions between Sept. 17, when he will open the fall term of court, and the trial date.

Insull's attorney, Floyd Thompson, asked a court order permitting him to be present when the jury venire is drawn. The government objected to his presence and the court instructed Mr. Green to file a memorandum stating reasons for his opposition.

CRITICS EXPLAIN THEIR OPPOSITION TO LAKE AIRPORT

Hospitals and Civic Groups Heard.

Opponents of the proposed island airport on the lake front were given an opportunity yesterday to state their objections at a hearing in the offices of the Chicago Plan commission before the special committee appointed by Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes to investigate airport sites in the Chicago metropolitan area. The proponents of the airport project had their day on Aug. 6.

Representatives of hospitals and industries in the area adjacent to Burnham park and of civic and business organizations of the south and west sides spoke against the lake front site. Their objections ran along the lines of a possible noise nuisance, hazards to persons and property, and a commercial use of land adjacent on the east to lake front park areas.

Cites Loss of Time.

Before the objectors spoke the financial and engineering aspects of the airport plan were explained by Maj. Reed Landis, world war aviator, and Hugh E. Young, engineer of the airport committee of the plan commission. Fred D. Fagg, director of the air law institute of Northwestern university, gave a history of transportation.

"All other means of transportation, which have been vital to the growth of cities, have been centrally located," concluded Mr. Fagg. "Why should not aviation have the same privilege? And what good is a four and one-half hour schedule to New York if an hour is to be lost getting to the airport?"

In the proposed plans the westerly end of the island airport would be 1,600 feet east of Northerly Island. From that point it would run 3,150 feet east into the lake, embracing approximately 200 acres. The estimated cost is $8,600,000, of which $2,200,000 would be a federal grant and the remainder liquidated in a thirty year period from a head tax of 50 cents per passenger using the airport.

Hospital Representatives Object.

The city would pay only the annual maintenance costs, estimated at $80,000, according to Maj. Landis. Rentals and other fees, he said, would reimburse the city for nearly all, if not for the entire amount. From the visual viewpoint, Mr. Young said, the island would appear only as a haze on the horizon.

Physicians on the staffs of St. Luke's, Mercy, Michael Reese, and the Chicago Memorial hospitals, situated beside or near railroad tracks along which hundreds of trains pass daily, stressed the injury that the noise from the airplane motors would do to their patients. They cited the mental anxiety that an imaginative patient would undergo and the danger due to possible airplane crashes.

"Your objection falls," said Mr. Fagg in rebuttal, "if the planes are not routed over the hospitals or the Art institute, and fly at heights from which the motor noise is not noticeable. I believe that if the objectors understood the proposed plan in its entirety they would not be in opposition to this location."

Denies Increase in Noise.

Chairman Dresser also interjected a comment that sought to banish the fears of the objectors that the loop's noise would be greatly increased. He said that reputable engineers have told him that within two or three years the noise produced by airplane motors will be reduced considerably, probably to the extent that they will make no more noise than the average automobile motor. He also said that only passenger and mail planes would use the lake front, the commercial planes continuing to utilize the other airport.

On behalf of the civic organizations nearly 50 statements were read into the record outlining their objections to the commercial use of a lake island, the danger that forced landings would present, and the noise. Objections were given also by representatives of the Art institute, a group of musicians, real estate operators, industries, and St. Mary's church, 911 South Wabash avenue.

All arguments were taken under advisement by the committee, which is to make a recommendation to Mr. Ickes. Members of the committee are F. J. C. Dresser, chairman; John Wentworth, Merrill C. Meigs, Henry P. Chandler, and Kellogg Fairbank.

FORMER LAKE FOREST WOMAN POLICE DESK SERGEANT IS MARRIED

MRS. E. L. LARSON.

Miss Marion Louise Huntoon, 197 East Westminster avenue, Lake Forest, until last summer the only woman police desk sergeant on the north shore, was married last night to Edward Leo Larson, 312 North St. John's avenue, Highland Park, son of a garage owner. Only members of the immediate family attended the ceremony, which was performed at the Church of the Holy Spirit, Lake Forest, by Dr. Herbert W. Prince.

When Sheriff Lester Tiffany was made chief of police of Lake Forest in 1926 he appointed Miss Huntoon desk sergeant. She held this position until 1933, when she went to work for a woman's clothing store in Lake Forest.

After the wedding the Larsons left on a two weeks' honeymoon in northern Michigan. They will be at home at 1547 South St. John's avenue, Ravinia, after Sept. 21.

JAPAN TO DEMAND NAVAL BUILDING BANS BE LIFTED

Cabinet Gives Unanimous Approval to Policy.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Sept. 8.—[Saturday.]—Although the Japanese cabinet gave its unequivocal approval yesterday to the naval stand this country will adopt at the London conference next year, what this stand is continues to remain a deep mystery.

All that is known is that if the proposal which Japan will present is what the newspapers and naval circles claim it is, it must be a miracle, for it is supposed to be acceptable to all parties.

The plan was submitted last night to a meeting of the supreme naval council, composed of the nation's highest naval leaders, which approved the formula.

Seeks to Fix Tonnages.

From what can be learned from usually reliable sources, the formula seeks to fix common total tonnages between the United States, Great Britain, and Japan, with the Japanese tonnage slightly lower than those of the other powers, but giving all parties the right to build whatever class of ships is required below 35,000 ton battleships. Under the present treaty restrictions are placed on the building of various classes of ships. Japan expects a reduction in tonnages of battleships.

The Japanese formula, it is claimed, will insure equality of strength and will be the answer to the demand of various nations for the right to build ships to suit their special needs. It will also justify the arms limitation principle, it is said, for Japan proposes slashing all total tonnages considerably.

Favor Abrogation of Pact.

Instructions have been sent to the Japanese ambassadors in the United States, Great Britain, France, and Italy regarding the general outline. The ambassadors were told that Japan favors abrogating the Washington naval pact and desires to have the signatories of the treaty sounded out in the hope that it might be abrogated automatically through mutual consent. Little hope is held out for the success of this scheme, since Japan understands that the United States favors retention of the present ratios and slashing of fleets on this basis.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farm By Bob Becker

On a Flying Trapeze

September 7, 1934.

THERE is a workman atop the big new silo here on the farm who reminds one of the much talked about "man on the flying trapeze." When you stand close to the towering concrete structure, which is to be filled with silage this fall, and then bend back to look up at Jack the lone workman on top of it surrounded by a network of wires and other apparatus, you can easily understand why some of the boys are jesting about the farm's "man on the flying trapeze."

This workman stays on top of the big new silo because he is the one who takes the buckets of concrete hoisted more than 70 feet in the air and pours the contents into the circular steel forms.

When this is done he takes hold of one of the wires to keep his balance, turns the concrete container around and just when you might expect him to go sailing through the air, he shoots the bucket down to earth for another load.

This new silo already is an imposing structure although it isn't quite done. When all the concrete has been poured it will be more than 80 feet high. The diameter is 16 feet. I didn't realize how big it is until Clarence and Louis Thurow and I walked around the barn near which the new structure stands, and looked at a 14 by 40 silo. When I saw this small one I realized that the 16 by 80 one is going to hold a lot of ensilage. On the side facing the road the silo will have a sign reading "THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE Experimental Farm."

Clarence Thurow, manager of the farm, expects the new silo to be ready by the middle of next week. Then he will trot out a brand new ensilage cutter, just purchased, which chops up the corn and blows it into the silo.

A sort of "pulling contest" has been going on during the past few days. Herman Guenther's remark about Jack and Gene, his favorite team of horses, was the tipoff on the contest. Herman was just about to leave the barnyard to get another load of gravel to be used in the concrete mixer. He had Jack and Gene hitched to the wagon. After Louis Thurow and Herman had slowed up in their good natured arguments about whose team could pull the bigger load of gravel I learned that Herman was claiming first honors for his favorite horses, Jack and Gene, because yesterday Louis' team, Rex and Prince, couldn't make the grade with a loaded wagon out of the gravel pit. Apparently the two teams of horses are going to be "matched" before the gravel hauling job is done, in order to settle all arguments on which team can pull the heavier load.

All the boys here on the farm are wondering if Herman's pumpkin crop is going to beat the first frost. When I looked over the garden next to his house several weeks ago on a hot, dry day the pumpkin pie outlook was pretty dubious, because the heat and the drouth had just about burned up the vines. Yesterday I looked at the vines again. There are a number of good sized pumpkins to be seen, but just one has begun to show any yellow on it. All of the others are green.

Herman shakes his head rather pessimistically when his pumpkin crop is mentioned.

SIX YOUTHS HELD ON RAPE CHARGES OF TWO VICTIMS

Six youths, arrested yesterday by Austin police, were later identified by a young woman who said that the six had participated in a criminal assault upon her early yesterday morning after she left a dance ballroom with one of them. A short time later another girl identified the same youths as the six who had attacked her a week ago under similar circumstances.

The gang was rounded up after Dorothy Lavigne, 20 years old, 5632 North McVicker avenue, a stenographer, told Sergt. Patrick Gilhooley that Nicholas Yerbick, 18 years old, 541 North Harding avenue, had been the escort who was responsible for her being assaulted by the other youths. Miss Anna Miller, 18 years old, of 3955 Metropolitan avenue, the second rape victim, told police that Yerbick had taken her riding in his car with the other youths on Aug. 31 and had driven the car to a railroad yard, where the assault took place.

Those arrested with Yerbick were Albert Tiesti, 23 years old; his brother Anthony, 20 years old, both of 526 North Springfield avenue; Joseph Abusinna, 19 years old, of the same address; Michael Eukovich, 18 years old, 3848 Ferdinand street, and Joseph Newlon, 26 years old, 522 North Springfield avenue.

Patsy Cozzitarto, 15 years old, 823 Washburn avenue, was in custody at the juvenile home last night and three other boys were being sought after Evelyn Rhode, 15 years old, told Marquette station police that the Cozzitarto boy and three unidentified companions seized her Thursday night near Paulina street and Roosevelt road, dragged her under a porch and attempted to attack her. The boys fled, she told police, when she resisted.

POLICE REOPEN DRIVE ON LOOP HANDBILL MEN

Police Commissioner Allman yesterday launched a new drive to rid the loop of handbill distributors who litter the streets and impede traffic. A similar campaign was stopped a year ago when attorneys for several tearoom and beauty shop operators gained a temporary injunction against the police department.

Yesterday the commissioner was informed by Corporation Counsel William H. Sexton that Master in Chancery Henry L. Burman on Wednesday had dissolved the injunction. The arrest of ten handbill distributors followed.

Commissioner Allman said action would also be taken against the photographers who snap pictures of pedestrians and then offer the photographs for sale to their subjects. While they have a license to operate, Commissioner Allman said, they have no right to obstruct or impede traffic.

"Give me but the liberty of the press and I will give to the minister a venal house of peers. I will give him a corrupt and servile house of commons. I will give him the full swing of the patronage of office. I will give him the whole host of ministerial influence. I will give him all the power that place can confer upon him, to purchase up submission and overawe resistance; and yet, armed with the liberty of the press, I will go forth to meet him undismayed. —Richard Brinsley Sheridan.

DISTRIBUTION OF WHOSE WEALTH?

The Redistribution of Wealth boys are making a good thing out of assuring the American people that they can get rich by robbing each other. They have defined capital as an inexhaustible supply of money in the hands of an imaginary minority which can pour out money and luxury without end and without limit. Their authority for this is a quotation from some unidentified source that a small percentage of the people own a large percentage of the national wealth. Usually they say two per cent of the people own 90 per cent of the wealth.

This quotation has been vaguely and recklessly used in politics for a long time without ever having been traced to any responsible authority.

Its falseness has been clearly exposed by Dr. Virgil Jordan, president of the National Industrial Conference board, who shows that no one really knows how national wealth is distributed because neither the government nor any one else has tried to find out. The actual capitalists of the country, Dr. Jordan shows, are the 45 million owners of savings bank deposits, the 10 million members of building and loan associations, and the 115 million owners of life insurance policies whose combined claims amount to more than one-half of the estimated national wealth. Other capitalists are the 14 million families who own their own homes, the farmers on their own farms, the 10 million persons who own stock in the 151 leading corporations and the small merchants who in the aggregate transact a very large total of the nation's business.

The Distribution of Wealth boys also are eager to limit the earning power of invested wealth. Four per cent, they agree, is about right, or sometimes six. They point to the investment policy of insurance companies and the restrictions surrounding the investment of trust funds where owners of wealth must be satisfied with four per cent to insure security. What they do not say and willfully neglect to consider is that there would be no four per cent earned for the insurance companies and the trust funds, there would be no investments and no industry unless there was hope of a greater reward for the creator of wealth who is willing to back his industry, his imagination, and his judgment with his own money and his credit.

This is the investor who develops the industries, the manufactories, and the mines and who actually creates the wealth of the country. The four per cent for other investors who must be certain of their return is the cream of the wealth the first type of investor creates. It is the first money earned from his energy and ability. He receives no reward until the secured investor takes his four per cent.

Without a probability of safely earning four or six per cent for the safety investor and then earning as much more for himself and associates, there would be no inducement for the man of energy and imagination to face the risks of industry. Investments would stop and jobs disappear.

Dr. Jordan has made that clear. "Every man who works for his living and earns $100 a month at his job," he writes, "uses twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars of the national wealth in earning his living.

"Some one else may have supplied the capital out of his savings and have title to it, but the man who uses that wealth in earning his living gets the benefit of it. He would not be able to earn his $1,200 a year if some one else had not saved the twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars of capital and put it at his service to enable him to earn more."

The politicians are doing the best they can to prevent any one from having capital to invest in creating the workingman's $1,200 job. It is the inevitable outcome of their theory of the redistribution of wealth.

SOCIALISM IN PRACTICE.

The other day it was announced that the city of Milwaukee had withdrawn a million dollars from the banks in the form of $20 bills and had stowed the money away in safety deposit boxes.

The Socialist government of Milwaukee is withdrawing its surplus funds from the banks because it wants to avoid paying a 1 per cent charge imposed by recent Wisconsin legislation. Under the new law all local governments must pay 1 per cent of their deposits into a state fund to insure public deposits against the risk of bank failures. As the insurance premium would more than eat up any interest which the money can earn these days, the Socialist burghers have chosen the highly unsocial course of hoarding their money. They have been encouraged in their action by the circumstance that though Milwaukee has been the largest contributor to the insurance fund, the fund is indebted to Milwaukee for losses and can't pay the claims.

The upholder of free institutions can find no serious objection to Milwaukee's withdrawal of its bank balance. He assumes that men will pursue their own advantage. It is difficult, however, to see how the evasion of the insurance law can be justified from the viewpoint of the Socialists who govern the city. They are not supposed to question the wisdom of the state. They are supposed to delight in entering upon all sorts of joint enterprises to increase the security and happiness of the weaker brothers.

If Socialist officials will not coöperate in a Socialist scheme because it costs a few thousand dollars of other people's money to do so, there seems to be ground for the suspicion that ordinary people, with no special training in altruism, may also try to wriggle out from under Socialistic laws calculated to oppress them.

THE FRIEND OF ALIEN TROUBLE-MAKERS.

Miss Perkins, the secretary of labor, when charged with a lack of zeal in seeking deportation of alien agitators, replied that she had no money at her disposal with which to finance a campaign of deportation. The excuse was plausible rather than convincing. In these days the executive departments have little trouble in finding funds for activities which they desire to undertake. Miss Perkins might have been more candid had she said that she has not been particularly eager to undertake one of the most important duties which falls to her department.

The unnaturalized alien in the United States is here as a guest. If he behaves himself he is not molested, and of course his person and his property are safeguarded. But as a guest he must not venture to take part in American political activities and, of course, he has stepped far beyond both propriety and law when he participates in definitely subversive movements. He has been permitted to enter the country on the assumption that he will respect established institutions, precisely as any guest in any house is expected to conform to his host's domestic arrangements, however distasteful the guest may find them. When aliens in this country seek to create dissension, as not a few have done of late, they have forfeited all claim on hospitality and should be thrown out of the country as fast as trains and ships will carry them.

It is Miss Perkins' sworn duty to see that the undesirable aliens are deported. They have violated every principle of decent and lawful behavior and if she has not been aggressive in ridding the country of them it may be because she welcomes their subversive activities.

REPORTED WITH REGRET.

Two regrettable aspects of the football game between the Bears and the All-Americans have been insufficiently commented upon. In the first place, there was a public announcer system, but it didn't work very well. It mumbled; and in consequence the spectators had to observe for themselves what was happening on the field. Many of the younger persons present had never had the experience before and were plainly ill at ease. Some remained helpless and pouting to the end, but it was noticed that, with a little help between quarters from old-timers, the brighter among the young people soon caught the idea. By the middle of the third quarter many of them, it was plain, knew where the ball was and in whose possession, without a word of help from any one. One young man was heard to say that though he wouldn't care to go through the experience again, it was fun of a sort while it lasted.

The other lapse has to do with cheer leaders. There were a number of them present on the field, but, as neither the Bears nor the All-Stars had a yell, there was astonishingly little for the cheer leaders to do. That, of course, did not prevent them from doing many things, generally concluding with a leap in the air, a handspring and a double cartwheel. In contrast, the behavior of the spectators left much to be desired. Where good taste would have prompted every one to try, at least, to encourage one team or another, it only by barking or coughing in rhythm, there was only silence except when something happened to bring cheers spontaneously to the lips. It was difficult to believe that so well dressed and in all other respects so mannerly a crowd could show itself so inadequate to a great occasion.

IF FALL COMES.

Each day the north wind blows it is colder and the lake's anger against the stone breakwaters increases. Purple martins are meeting on telephone poles, swallows perform giddy acrobatics in the gusty air, and orange breasted robins search hungrily for worms. In the sky the clouds assume an autumnal hue, and the waters of the lake are no longer solely blue, but green and slate gray as well. In the evening there is a haze, tangy with the smell of downcast smoke. Soon the keen eared may hear on a quiet night the strangest, loneliest and wisest of all sounds: the honk of wild geese.

Nature is not always unkind, and by these portents she signifies to mankind the approach of another season. The farmer notes them and hurries to husk his corn and fill his cribs with fodder for his animals. His wife in her sweet kitchen preserves the red tomato and the wild grape. The wise squirrel hides acorns in capacious trees. Even the ant is busy, and the bee.

The crisp air and the feel of snow bring for humans increased vigor. Blood circulates briskly; the mind becomes livelier; energy is restored. A use is found for the vitamins taken from the sun. The appetite is sharp; there is a zest in life. The enervating monotony of summer is shattered. Winter treads on the heels of fall, but it is not to be dreaded.

Editorial of the Day

[Charleston News and Courier.]

In so great a country as ours the only federal government that can last, short of one resting on a dictatorship backed by armies, is one that governs little, that leaves the states to do the governing. That the makers of the constitution foresaw.

The United States is not a welded nation. It is scarcely a "nation" at all except in time of war. It has never had a war in which the people were really united except the world war.

The one big state idea won't last. It can't. The country will have to go back to the older and wiser ways or it will break up. The New Dealers may mean well, but their scheme is impossible.

"PACIFISTS GROW STRONGER NOW, Preacher Says."—W. G. N. But what good does it do for a pacifist to grow stronger? He doesn't intend to fight, anyhow. If he gets too big and husky the government may force him into the ranks in the next war whether or no. If a pacifist wants to stay out of war he'd better not go around bragging how much stronger he's getting day by day. He'd better say he's getting weaker all the time and cultivate a dyspepsia droop and a consumptive cough and maybe throw a few fits and spasms now and then. Then the recruiting officers will lay off him.

KIDNAPERS seem to be growing kindlier and more thoughtful. That Canadian brewer who was stolen from his home, according to news dispatches, was "chained by his wrist to a white enamel bed." If kidnapers should ever waste their time kidnaping me I wish they would chain me to a nice four-poster old colonial bed. And while they were chaining me to the old colonial bed I wish they would also chain me to a couple of quarts of good old Canadian rye. And if they have enough chain after that I would like to be chained to a porterhouse steak and a bushel of doughnuts. If one has just got to look possible kidnaping right straight in the face these days it is well enough to take thought of what he would like most to be chained to.

PYGMALION.

A FASHION EDITOR says the women will paint their faces green this Autumn with iridescent eyebrows and silver eyelids. But they haven't got any eyebrows left; no matter, they'll probably draw iridescent lines to make where the eyebrows used to be. The gals ought to adopt this new style only after giving due notice. It would be an awful shock to a man who went home somewhat unsteadily from his club after midnight to have some terrible thing with a green face and iridescent eyelashes and silver eyelids pop out at him when he finally gets the hall door open.

UPTON SINCLAIR is prowling around Washington popping unexpectedly in on those in high places every minute or two. Sinclair is just as popular with our leading Democrats and Brain Trusters as the seven year itch or the neuralgia, but they can't afford to tell him to git thell outten there. That would make a bigger story on the front page than if they sat down and chatted grimly with him about who's going to win the baseball pennant, the salubriousness of the climate out in California, and how soon is he going back. Meanwhile the sale of parachutes enabling anybody to flutter unharmed to the alley from an office window is increasing, and many cabinet members and leaders of the administration are having concealed closets constructed into which they can dive and remain in safety until Sinclair is out of the building.

NEWSPAPERS are now busy printing recipes for farmers' wives and housekeepers generally telling all about how to make jellies and jams and preserves of every sort. In some respects newspapers are quite mid-Victorian. Stop anywhere in the country and ask for jelly and jam or anything like that and you have to wait until Jimmy jumps into the old flivver and goes down to the grocery store and buys it. And then you wait a little longer until the good housewife finds the can opener. Making jellies and jams and preserves belongs in the category of the lost arts these days.

JEANNE DELAMARTER.

THE TRAGEDY in Hollywood which resulted in the death of Russ Columbo makes me take up my old dusty lyre again and twang some more on my favorite string—beware of a friend showing you a revolver or any kind of shooting iron. But if you are too agitated that will make him nervous and, while ordinarily he is such a rotten marksman he couldn't hit the side of a barn if he was locked up in one while he was shooting, you can be very sure his accidental shot will plug you right through the gizzard. It's a cinch. The best thing to do when somebody suddenly produces a gun and says it isn't loaded and then starts fooling with it is to smile and then say, "Oh, what a pretty gun! My, I just love shooting things," all the time backing towards the door. Feel behind you for the doorknob and then turn around suddenly, jump through the door, and hurl yourself down the stairway. The gun will go off, of course, but the bullet may stick in the door or only hit you in the left leg. Anyhow, it's your only chance and you'd better take it.

NOSE BLEED.

THE mucous membrane of the upper air passages bleeds easily. Most cases of nose bleed come from the mucous membrane of the septum, which is a thin, flat piece of cartilage and bone that separates the two nostrils. Ordinarily bleeding from the nose must be considered an abnormal process.

We may enumerate briefly some of the causes and their significance. We are familiar with the bleeding that follows blows or injuries to the nose externally and that bring about tears in the mucous membrane. Injuries may occur without external violence. For example, dust particles that lodge along the border of the cartilaginous septum sometimes form crusts, the removal of which is attended with hemorrhage. Sometimes dust particles carrying bacteria may set up local irritation with ulceration and hemorrhage.

Various types of inflammation may so erode the thin mucous membrane that bleeding will follow violent blowing of the nose or sneezing. Occasionally foreign bodies carelessly introduced into the nostrils may cause inflammation and bleeding. Fibrous tumors in the nose and pharynx, in addition to causing mechanical obstruction to the passage of air, frequently give rise to hemorrhage. Nasal polyps rarely bleed. Most malignant growths are richly supplied with blood vessels and bleed easily. Acute infectious diseases, particularly rheumatic fever, typhoid fever, and influenza, predispose to bleeding.

Most nose bleeds in children cease spontaneously after a few minutes. If bleeding continues beyond, say, five minutes, a clean cotton plug may be introduced into the nostril until it presses tightly against the septum. This is nearly always successful in controling hemorrhage. The plug should be allowed to remain for an hour or more until a firm clot has formed.

With adults the situation is quite different. The contractile power of the blood vessels is less and it is often necessary to pack the area tightly, using at the same time some local anesthetic combined with adrenalin or ephedrin. In cases of frequent bleeding in adults caused by ulceration, cauterization or removal of the ulcerated area is sometimes necessary.

Lee Hurd has called attention to the good results that follow the use of strips of fat salt pork in the bleeding nostril. Thin strips may be inserted one after the other until the plug exerts moderate pressure against the bleeding site. The success of this treatment may be due to the high concentration of salt contained in the strips, or to the fact that the pork contains some substance that stimulates the clotting of the blood. Hurd states that pork strips are easy to introduce and are very much more comfortable than the type of packing so frequently employed. The patient may complain at first of the smarting caused by the salt.

In the presence of nasal hemorrhage the patient should sit erect with the head thrown back. This relieves the pressure on the veins of the neck. Now and then bleeding will persist in spite of all that can be done and it will be necessary to secure expert help.

A careful nose specialist can so completely pack the nostrils as to cause sufficient pressure to check the hemorrhage, unless some blood disease complicates the picture. In this event consultation must be secured and occasionally blood tranafusion resorted to. The use of calcium salts or some extract from the blood platelets sometimes increases the clotting power of the blood.

Many instances of nose bleed may be prevented by the simple, hygienic precaution of placing each day two or three drops of clear, neutral mineral oil in the nostrils. White vaseline serves the same purpose. This will keep the mucous membrane soft, will prevent the formation of crusts and scabs and hence ulceration. If there is a tendency to repeated nasal hemorrages a thorough examination made by a competent physician will usually determine the organic cause, if one exists.

TUBERCULOSIS.

Mrs. R. T. P. writes: My son, 28 years old and married four years, had a very serious hemorrhage of the lungs last spring. He never had such trouble before, but took cold easily all his life, and it would take him a long time to get over the colds. He has coughed only while the colds lasted. His right lung has bothered him more or less ever since the hemorrhage.

1. Can you tell me what causes such trouble?
2. What would you advise him to do?
3. He smokes cigarets a good deal. What effect would that have?
4. Do you think this is the first stage of tuberculosis?
5. If so, could change of climate help? He lives at sea level now.

REPLY.

1. A very high percentage of hemorrhages from the lungs is due to tuberculosis.
2. He should first seek the most expert physician available in the treatment of tuberculosis and place himself unreservedly in his care. He has a hard fight on his hands, but can win it with proper treatment, persistence, and courage.
3. He should not smoke in his present condition.
4. No. Tuberculosis existed for some time before the hemorrhage.
5. He should follow his physician's advice on this point.

SIDEWALK DISPLAYS.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—[Friend of the People.]—Please tell me what steps are necessary to compel a fruit market to keep the sidewalk clear. It obstructs the walk with its wares and it is impossible to pass. J. D.

An officer visited the location complained of and instructed the owner to remove displays from the sidewalk, which he promptly did. He also was cautioned that if displays were not kept off the sidewalk he would be given a summons to court. Owner promised to keep the sidewalk clear. The officer reports he visited the premises several times since and has found the walk clear.

UNPAID TAXES.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—What is my status in relation to a piece of vacant property purchased some years ago? I have paid all taxes to date; likewise special assessments, except those which became due last March. How long can I consider myself the owner, having hopes some time of being able to clear up the obligation against the property? Will I be notified should it be taken from me? F. S.

The first step against you will be a sale for taxes. Two years are permitted for redemption from this sale. At the end of two years a tax deed will issue which will be a serious cloud on your title, but even this can be set aside by appropriate court proceedings. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

RENEWAL BY IMPLICATION.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I had a lease until two years ago. Since that time I have not signed a new lease but have had my rent reduced twice. In giving notice to give up my apartment, do I have to give sixty days' notice, or do I have to give only one month's notice in order to leave? W. E.

In our opinion, the renewal by implication principle would apply, in accordance with the decision in the 19th volume of Illinois Appellate Reports, but we understand that some of the Municipal court judges have been ruling that there is no renewal by implication where there has been a change in the rent. If there is a renewal by implication, you could not terminate until the end of the year, otherwise you could presumably terminate on thirty days' notice.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID.—Spain, the land of vineyards, famed for her sherry wine, is becoming a land of beer drinkers at an alarming rate—according to the wine merchants.

Official figures show, in fact, that thirsty throats in Spain absorbed 8,700,000 gallons of beer in 1931, whereas the annual consumption was up to 18,600,000 gallons for 1933.

A Madrid daily recently took the trouble to find out what the Madrileños drink in the summer days when the mercury sticks around the ninety mark and the approximate figures obtained showed that beer was far and away the most popular drink and that even with a quarter of the populace seeking coolness at the sea or the mountain, Madrid still put away 40,000 gallons of beer daily.

Meanwhile the wine business is in such a bad way that the vintners think that they will have to turn away many tens of thousands of tons of luscious grapes this autumn, and this despite the new market which has opened this year across the Atlantic. Beer drinking is not the major factor in this situation, but rather the fact that France has slashed the large quantities of Spanish wines which she purchased in other days in order to please Algeria and other colonies.

So, instead of the juice of the grape taking the way appointed for it during the long centuries since mankind first tasted wine, the Spanish government has decided to make motor fuel of the products of the vineyard. By way of experiment every month for the next five months the Petroleum Monopoly company has been ordered to purchase 50,000 gallons of low-grade alcohol obtained from grapes and which is to be used to help make a "national fuel." One financial newspaper believes that the experiment will cost the state $4,000,000. A less serious newspaper has asked what will be the effect of the exhaust fumes from the new fuel on pedestrians in crowded streets.

Alcohol from the sugar beet is also to form part of this new national fuel. The Monopoly company must purchase 350,000 gallons of alcohol monthly from the producers of molasses, which is to compensate the latter from being too badly hit by the restrictions on the sale of alcohol obtained from sugar products, which are imposed in order to protect the wine interests.

THE VOICE OF THE PROVIDENT.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—I am speaking for the hundreds of thousands of elderly persons who were frugal during their productive years. These persons innocently put their savings into securities which represent an interest in business, so that they would be self-supporting during their advanced years and not wards of their local or national government.

Now, an account of the machinations and operations of the New Deal and due to the so-called leveling off process or redistribution of wealth, the income of these persons is getting smaller and smaller, while the cost of what they consume goes higher and higher. If the marvelous New Deal continues these persons will soon become wards of the government and in order to exist will be forced on the relief rolls along with the other millions now on the dole. For these elderly persons could this be called "a more abundant life" and could it be true that "they are better off this year than last"? You answer this question.

In all fairness should these frugal and elderly people be penalized for having stinted and saved and gone without luxuries to attain security in their advanced years while the New Deal with its job holding professors is endeavoring to level off the savings of these people in favor of those who never saved and never will?

There surely can be no real and lasting progress unless property rights are protected in accordance with the principles of the constitution.

Let there be a square deal for all rather than a new deal for the few.

THE CONSTITUTION AS NEWS.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Your editorial on the spirit of 1787 was splendid and the suggestions made in the letter by "S" are, in my opinion, very constructive. Judging from my own experience in the last years of grammar school and high school, supplemented by some college courses, there is a great deal of romance in connection with the constitution of the United States which should intrigue young men and women in the formative period of life, and I believe that there is an opportunity to present the subject in an interesting manner through a series of articles by some well known writer with a popular style of diction which would be both entertaining and constructive to young and old alike.

I remember reading and studying with the utmost interest one of John Fiske's books entitled "The Critical Period of American History," which referred to the period during which the adoption of the constitution was under discussion. No one can read that book without the feeling of interest, appreciation, and pride.

I should like to see THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE initiate a series of articles bearing on the subject of the constitution—not overtechnical in its context, but which would re-create an interest on the part of all patriotic and thinking Americans in a subject which now for some years to come will be very much in the forefront. JOHN C. HARDING.

DENMARK'S GREENER PASTURES.

Lombard, Ill., Sept. 4.—A friend of mine has lately returned from Denmark. He reports that unemployment is at a minimum, that agriculture and industry are moving along in fine shape and that farm prices are such that the buying power of agriculture is at high tide.

He credits this in large measure to production control, especially of hogs. In order to boost hog prices the Danish government has instituted a production control system which has cut down production 24 per cent. The plan has met with general favor not only among farmers but also among city workers who find that when farm buying power is high, business profits.

In the light of the hue and cry about high bred seed corn, it is interesting to note that Denmark more than any other nation is stressing efficiency and high standards in swine production. Record of performance studies are under way and only the most efficient types of swine are retained. The Danes have found that there is no conflict between production control and farming efficiency.

My friend says that there is no talk of "regimentation" or "dictatorship" as is common among metropolitan dailies in this country. There is a general recognition of the fact that there is more to agriculture than the production of "cheap" food, and that if agriculture does not flourish, industry also suffers.

HITLER BOASTS HE IS RULING BY DIVINE RIGHT

God Gave Nazis Their Mission, He Says.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NUREMBERG, Germany, Sept. 7.—"We received our command, not from a human superior. It was given to us by God who gave us life."

Chancellor Adolf Hitler made this statement to 200,000 of his political soldiers at the Zeppelin meadow near Nuremberg today as sacrificial fires and searchlights penetrated the dusk of early evening.

The leader's address was a tribute of thanks to National Socialism's organization leaders. The 200,000 men represented nearly 1,000,000 Nazi political workers.

Party Bosses Cheer Leader.

The faces of the party bosses glowed with faith as Hitler spoke. Time and again they interrupted the dictator with cheers.

"A nation which is held together by the spirit of unity of our movement cannot be broken by a hostile world," Hitler cried. "Carry on our banners, they harm nobody. Should anybody attempt to interfere in our peaceful work we know how to defend ourselves.

"Be models to all Germany. Let us pledge ourselves anew to be a living incarnation of those virtues of discipline, undying devotion, obedience, comradeship, modesty, and the spirit of sacrifice so that the party will live forever.

A Fight for Freedom."

"Those nations, which never experienced the sufferings we did, cannot understand the intensity of our feelings, or what brought these hundreds of thousands together. They followed us because it was the dictate of their heart. They wanted to free the fatherland from misery. Today it is not the state that commands. We command. The state did not create us. We created the state.

"We are but the instruments in the hand of Providence. We are servants laboring for the resurrection of the country. We shall lead until better leaders come. There will be no better ones today or tomorrow.

"Even if we perish, Germany will live. Our movement stands solid as rock. As long as there is a breath in any of us, we shall defend it and with it the fatherland."

Carry Packs on Shoulders.

The special audience of 200,000 men almost filled the forty acre field in which Hitler spoke. An additional 150,000 spectators witnessed the impressive ceremony. The political organization leaders wore brown uniforms. Their bearing was military. They were men of all ages. All carried packs on their shoulders. They operate the "Nazi cells" in each house and factory in the nation.

They came to Nuremberg on foot, in automobiles, and in special trains. Twenty-one thousand flag bearers holding their Nazi standards high in the air preceded Hitler's political soldiers to the meadows.

Hitler's arrival was dramatic. A wide center aile and twelve smaller avenues were kept open. Hitler strode down the wide aile alone, his head throw back, accepting the plaudits of the throng.

After he reached the platform from which he spoke the 21,000 flag bearers slowly stepped down the hillside, filling up the thirteen avenues.

The flags were dipped in memory of fallen Nazi revolutionaries as the ceremony was concluded. Hitler tonight reviewed a parade of his political soldiers.

HELD IN HOLDUP, M'GINNIS ADMITS ROBBERY OF BANK

Arthur McGinnis, an informer for police and who aided federal agents at one time in the search for John Dillinger, yesterday confessed a $33,000 bank robbery at Henderson, Ky., last July 26. He gave a detailed account of the robbery to Sherif J. F. Reed of Henderson. The Kentucky sherif sought to arrange for his extradition, but was told McGinnis faces prosecution for robbery in Illinois first.

Edward Lindsay and William D. Ferguson, who had offered to sell information regarding one of McGinnis' robberies, were sentenced to thirty days in the Bridewell yesterday for an attempt to obtain money under false pretenses. They were charged with scheming to collect $10 from Henry G. Zander Jr., head of the Illinois division of the Home Owners Loan corporation, by offering to identify the robber who took $3,500 in jewelry in the Zander home from women attending a bridge party there two weeks ago.

On Thursday a dozen women identified McGinnis as the bandit. When McGinnis and the two "informers" were brought together it was found they were unacquainted. The two admitted to Judge Robert J. Dunne they had not known who staged the bridge party robbery.

BRITISH COURT RULES IN FAVOR OF FASCIST FOES

Dismisses Case Against Communist Editor.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 7.—Anti-Fascists gained a first victory in their campaign against Fascism today when four summonses relating to articles appearing in the Communist Daily Worker were dismissed by a magistrate.

Robert Haseldon, proprietor of the Daily Worker, and Leslie Morton appeared at the Old Street police court to answer a summons in connection with articles which dealt with the great Fascist rally at Hyde Park next Sunday. The articles alleged that the Fascists incited others to commit a breach of the peace. Another summons alleged that they incited others to act in a disorderly manner. There also were two other summonses relating to alleged similar offenses at different dates.

Paragraph Read in Court.

John Maude, the prosecutor, said a paragraph in the Daily Worker might lead rowdy elements to an outbreak in Hyde Park. The paragraph in question read as follows:

"The signatories warn workers that an unorganized rally of workers in Hyde Park Sept. 9 runs the risk of being attacked by Fascists with calculated brutality, which experience has shown the Fascists will use when they can get away with it. But organized preparation can turn the proposed Fascist demonstration into an anti-Fascist triumph."

The magistrate said that he saw nothing wrong in the action of the Daily Worker and dismissed all summonses. He also granted the defendants $100 costs.

Smash Fascists! Banner Reads.

The Fascist rally has been the subject of considerable action by anti-Fascist elements. In the last week banners bearing anti-Fascist slogans have appeared in the most unexpected and embarrassing places. Twice a huge banner was displayed outside the dignified high court building now undergoing repairs. The banners read: "Be at Hyde Park Sunday to Smash the Fascists!"

During the week radio listeners were surprised to hear dance music interrupted by shouts of, "Smash the Fascists at Hyde Park Sept. 9." Walls of public buildings have been plastered with posters bearing similar slogans. Yesterday four men were fined $10 each for painting anti-Fascist slogans on the plinth of Nelson's monument in Trafalgar Square.

The proposed Fascist and anti-Fascist demonstrations in Hyde Park are causing the authorities considerable anxiety.

All police leaves have been canceled. Special constables—the volunteer police—will take over trafic duties. Lord Trenchard, chief of police, will personally supervise operations. It is possible that an autogiro will be used for the first time as an experiment in reporting the movements of crowds.

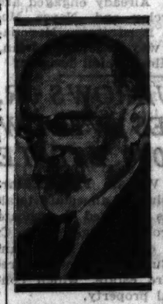
Annual Inspection

Charles Crippen, steeplejack, began yesterday an annual inspection of cornices on the Otis building, La Salle and Madison streets. As the "overhang" of a cornice cannot be seen from above or below, the steeplejack performs his work seated in a "boatswains [bosun's] chair" swung over the side from the roof by a block and tackle. The project will be completed in a week or ten days.

3 NATIONS FIGHT RUSSIA'S ENTRY INTO THE LEAGUE

France Fails to Win Their Support.

GENEVA, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Louis Barthou, French foreign minister, today failed to persuade Poland, Portugal, and Argentina to support Russia's admission to the league of nations.



LOUIS BARTHOU.

He spent the day conferring with delegates representing those nations, the most potent opponents of the Russian candidacy, but admitted afterwards that further negotiations would be necessary.

Portugal's affirmative vote is regarded as vital inasmuch as France, England, and Italy, the triumvirate backing Moscow's cause, are anxious to place the soviet permanently on the league council, for which Portugal's assent, by virtue of her council membership, would be necessary.

It was learned that authorities at Lisbon are so opposed to communism that in exchange for Portugal's adherence to the Russian cause they must have assurances that there will be no communistic propaganda in the Iberian country.

Poland was described as demanding that Russia accept obligations respecting racial minorities just as Poland.

A secret session of the council has been convoked for tomorrow afternoon when the French hope the Russian problem will be solved satisfactorily.

RAGING WAVES SUBSIDE ALONG PACIFIC COAST

Los Angeles, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Huge, thrashing breakers which for several days have battered the southern California coastline between Malibu beach, home of many film stars, on the north, and Newport on the south, moderated today.

Rollers still thundered in at Santa Monica, Long Beach, and other oceanside resort, but they lacked the destructive force of the last four days when they ripped down a pier, undermined beach homes, and claimed at least one life.

At high tide last night the breakers overran the Roosevelt highway in two places between Santa Monica and Malibu. Residents of Malibu maintained a guard during the night. Workmen, rushed to the beach resort, raised barricades of sand bags.

At Newport and Balboa beaches, water rushed through the streets and undermined many beach homes.

D. D. STANSBURY'S WIDOW SUES FOR $40,000 INSURANCE

Mrs. Ella R. Stansbury, widow of Attorney David D. Stansbury, yesterday filed suits in the Circuit and Superior courts seeking to collect $40,000 from two insurance concerns. Those named were the Aetna Life Insurance company and the Prudential Insurance Company of America.

According to Attorney A. R. Hulbert, who filed the suit, Mr. Stansbury took out a $20,000 policy with the Aetna firm Dec. 28, 1932, and one for the same amount with the Prudential company Dec. 30, 1932. Officials of the company have thus far refused to make payment, the lawyer declared.

Mr. Stansbury died in Washington, D. C., last April 6. According to Attorney Hulbert, the insurance concerns have based their refusal to pay the policies on a question of his physical condition at the time the policies were issued.

JEWS WILL MARK THEIR NEW YEAR, 5695, TOMORROW

Solemn Services to Be Held in Synagogues.

The Jewish new year, 5695, begins tomorrow night at sundown. Festivities surrounding the occasion known as Rosh Hashanah last two days for Orthodox Jews and one day for Reform groups. In place of the symbol of bells "ringing out the old and ringing in the new year" among Christian groups, the ancient ram's horn, or shofar, is sounded in synagogues and temples.

Significance of the sound of the shofar in the synagogue as described by Dr. George Fox of South Shore temple is that it symbolizes "the awakened conscience of Israel. It also recalls the fact that the ram's horn was always used in the days when Israel was a nation on its own soil to call together the inhabitants of Palestine whenever a great occasion demanded."

History of Ancient Holiday.

In earliest times, the Hebrew new year began in autumn with the opening of the agricultural year in Palestine—a system adopted by all Semitic peoples. Announcements of Rosh Hashanah by the central conference of American rabbis state that the beginning of the economic year has also been observed since ancient times and was celebrated with a holy convocation of the people, trumpets being blown and special sacrifices being offered on the altar in the temple.

The announcement adds that "with exile from the Holy Land, New Year's day assumed a new meaning and a higher value in Jewish life. In rabbinic tradition the holiday is regarded as the commemoration of the beginning of the creation of the world. It is the day upon which all creatures pass in review for judgment before the Creator."

Bugle Call to Conscience.

The solemnity of the occasion was amplified by Rabbi Louis L. Mann of Sinai temple. He stated that the shofar is the bugle call of conscience to awaken three ideas.

"The first of these ideas," said Dr. Mann, "is faith in God's providence. The second is that justice is cosmically grounded and its urge emanates from the nature of things. Finally, Rosh Hashanah, is a time of historical perspective when we look backward, inward and forward.

Services will be held in all temples and synagogues tomorrow night and Monday morning. In Orthodox synagogues, services will continue through Tuesday.

Mayor Kelly yesterday instructed heads of all city departments to excuse all Jews from duty without loss of pay during the Rosh Hashanah holidays. His order also holds good for the festival of Yom Kippur, or day of atonement, on the 19th. This custom of excusing Jews on high holidays has prevailed for several years in Chicago.

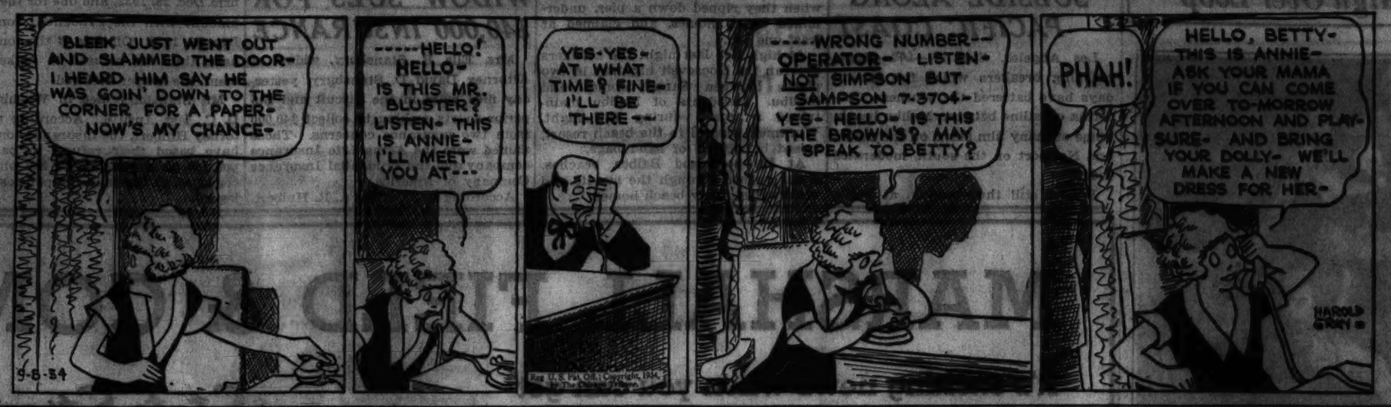
LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: The Telephone Deceiver



'FOR SALE' SIGN ON CATHEDRAL SHELTER TRACT

Hope to Sell Ruins, but Work Will Go On.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

A "For Sale" sign has been erected on the ruins of the old Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul, Washington boulevard and Peoria street, signifying that the 165x150 feet of land and the buildings which house Canon David E. Gibson's widely known Cathedral shelter, are being placed on the market.

These buildings, which were unharmed by the fire of 1921 that wrecked the cathedral, formerly were the clergy's quarters and the chapter house. After the fire the Cathedral shelter, which was organized by Father Gibson in 1918 at 937 West Randolph street at the request of the late Bishop C. P. Anderson, was removed to the buildings which survived.

Lacks Improvement Funds.

Bishop George Craig Stewart of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago, questioned about the "For Sale" sign, said yesterday that he had no intention of giving up the Cathedral shelter.

"It simply means that the run-down ruinous buildings which have been used by the Cathedral shelter are being offered for sale," he said. "One can't keep a property as valuable as that without improving it, and I don't have the money to improve it.

"There probably is little chance of selling it, but if I do sell it, I shall remove the shelter to one of several other properties. Meanwhile the work of the shelter will go on as usual."

Proceeds For New Edifice.

Bishop Stewart explained that he owned the property as a "corporation sole" and held it as the trustee for the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul chapter. The money accruing from a sale would go to the Cathedral chapter, he said, and in time would be used for building a new cathedral.

In the last annual report of the Cathedral shelter, it was pointed out that 26,555 men were lodged in the shelter house in 1933; 68,939 meals were furnished, 61,775 of them free; 21,004 articles of clothing provided for the needy, 351 baptisms performed, and services conducted for an attendance of 13,177.

ASK INJUNCTION AGAINST WCFL; ALLEGE SLANDER

Radio station WCFL was charged with making "defamatory and slanderous statements" in a bill for an injunction filed in the Circuit court yesterday on behalf of Dr. Lietzman Dentist, Inc., 79 West Madison street, successor to the Boston Dental Parlor.

Named as defendants were the station, the Chicago Federation of Labor, John Fitzpatrick, president of the federation; E. N. Nockels, general manager of the station, and the Dental Laboratory Workers' union, No. 19358.

The radio station, the bill charges, has made slanderous broadcasts in an effort to force the dentist corporation to hire union workers.

YOUTH ON TRIAL AS SLAYER TELLS OF CO-ED'S DEATH

Norman, Okla., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Neal Myers, 21 year old University of Oklahoma junior, testified on cross-examination at his murder trial today that Marian Mills died in his arms, but denied he killed the campus beauty queen in an effort to avert motherhood.

Telling of his efforts to revive his 19 year old sweetheart when she became unconscious after taking medicine in the apartment of Hazel Brown, fraternity cook and student confidante, Myers said:

"I felt dizzy and sweating all over. I told Mrs. Brown to call a doctor. She told me to get out of the country.

"Mrs. Brown said, 'She is as good as dead.'

"Finally she told me to take the girl out of there and prop her up in the car, that it wasn't her funeral."

Myers reiterated that he loved the girl, asked her repeatedly to marry him, and that he had opposed the attempt to prevent maternity. As he left the witness stand, he slumped over a counsel table and sobbed violently.

Myers' testimony, with that of seven character witnesses, closed the evidence in the trial, and District Judge Tom Pace instructed the jury after denying a defense motion for an instructed verdict of acquittal.

Under the charge to the jury, one of three verdicts—the death penalty, life imprisonment, or freedom—is possible.

ONE OF TWO HIT BY SKIDDING CAR DIES OF INJURY

George Chytyk, 19 years old, 1718 North Mozart street, died yesterday in the West Suburban hospital, of injuries received Thursday when he and another man were crushed between an automobile and a bus when another car skidded on the wet pavement and crashed into them.

The accident occurred at the foot of the North Central avenue bridge over the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, and Pacific railroad tracks. Chytyk and Gus Szyntak, 4801 West North avenue, driver of a surface lines feeder bus, had alighted to untangle the fenders of the two machines after a collision. Szyntak is expected to recover.

Dr. Emory J. Lusk, a dentist with offices at 4265 Cermak road, was exonerated by a coroner's jury which returned a verdict of accidental death at an inquest into the death of James Kraft, 52 years old, 2511 South 57th avenue, Cicero, who was killed when he was struck by Dr. Lusk's car at 57th avenue and Cermak road.

The death of Chytyk increased the toll of automobile fatalities in Cook county for the year to 820.

ARMSTRONG WILL FILED; BULK GOES TO PHILANTHROPY

The will of Mrs. Blanche Swingley Armstrong, widow of Frank H. Armstrong, president of Reid, Murdoch & Co., leaving most of an estate estimated at $200,000 to religious and educational institutions, was admitted to probate yesterday by George B. Weiss, assistant to the probate judge. Mrs. Armstrong, 69 years old, died on May 25. Her home was at 1030 Ridge avenue, Evanston.

The will provides that the Art institute of Chicago receive $6,000 to be held in trust, the income to be used for a $300 prize to be awarded at a yearly exhibition to the woman painter of the Chicago area who produces the best canvas.

Other bequests were: Presbyterian Old Peoples' home of Evanston, $10,000; Church Extension committee of the Presbytery of Chicago, $10,000; First Presbyterian church of Evanston, $5,000; Evanston Visiting Nurse association, $5,000; Berry schools, Mount Berry, Ga., $15,000; and Park college, Parkville, Mo., $15,000.

Five friends will share $30,000 and three servants will receive $2,000 each.

The remainder of the estate goes to Cornell college, Mt. Vernon, Ia., which Mrs. Armstrong attended, to build a structure to be known as the Armstrong Fine Arts building.

The following other wills were admitted to probate and filed with Clerk Mitchell C. Robin:

JAMES H. SULLIVAN, died June 26. Estate $35,000 to widow and two daughters. The First National Bank of Chicago, executor.

DANIEL OLSON, died July 22. Estate $15,000 to daughter. Wilford C. Shipner, executor.

MARGARET CROWLEY, died May 20. Estate $5,000 to two sons and three daughters. Helen C. Riordan, daughter, executrix.

FRED WRIGHT, died July 17. Estate $10,000 to widow, four daughters and son. Josephine Wright, widow, executrix.

DIRECTS VERDICT FOR WIDOW IN VEHON WILL SUIT

A brother and niece of the late William H. Vehon, onetime president of the Royal Tailoring company, failed yesterday in their attempt to break his will, which disposed of an estate of more than $1,000,000. Judge Edward D. Shurtleff, sitting in the Circuit court of Lake county at Waukegan, instructed the jury to return a verdict in favor of the widow, Mrs. Tillie Goodkind Vehon, 123 Lake avenue, Highland Park, who was bequeathed the bulk of the estate.

Harry Vehon, 5226 Everett avenue, the brother, and Mrs. Johanna Strumpf Turner, 6803 Merrill avenue, the niece, alleged in their suit that Vehon was of unsound mind and health and was subject to undue influence by his wife at the time his will was made. A score of witnesses testified for Mrs. Vehon, however, that her husband was quite sane at the time of his death on Sept. 22, 1932. All the plaintiff's witnesses admitted under cross-examination that they, too, had had intelligent conversations with Vehon before he died.

Mrs. Vehon took the witness stand only for a few minutes to identify a memorandum in her husband's handwriting, which was later incorporated as several paragraphs in his will. Harry Vehon was bequeathed $500 and Mrs. Turner $1,000.

REV. WM. EGAN, ST. RITA SCHOOL FOUNDER, DIES

The Rev. William Egan, O. S. A., 53 years old, a founder of St. Rita's High school, and for many years prominent in Roman Catholic education on the south side, died yesterday at North Troy, N. Y., according to word received here. His death followed an operation for brain tumor in July.

Ordained to the priesthood in the order of St. Augustine at Villanova, Pa., in 1906, Father Egan, with Father J. F. Green, came here and founded the high school. From 1918 to 1926 he was its principal. He was later appointed pastor of the St. Clair Catholic church, 55th street and Washtenaw avenue, serving there from 1926 to 1931, when he celebrated his silver jubilee in the priesthood.

Three years ago Father Egan was transferred to the St. Augustine church in North Troy.

Brick Thrown Through Bus Window; Woman Injured

Miss Irene Lane, 31 years old, 2341 North Francisco avenue, was cut on the face last night when a brick was hurled through a window of a Chicago Motor Coach company bus at Diversey avenue and Ward street. The brick thrower escaped. Miss Lane's injury was treated by a physician. Police said the missile might have been hurled by a sympathizer with a group of bus drivers who are on strike against the coach company.

Miss Helen R. McCormick to Be Bride Today

Wedding to Mr. Buckler in Bar Harbor.

Of great interest to Chicago society is the marriage today in Bar Harbor, Me., of Miss Helen Rutherford [Patty] McCormick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick, and H. Warren Buckler Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. H. Warren Buckler of Baltimore. The wedding will be reminiscent of the ceremony last June 30 at which Miss McCormick's sister, Eleanor, became Mrs. Sargent Francis Collier of Boston.

As then the service today will be read at 4:30 o'clock in the Church of Our Father at Hulls Cove, it will be attended only by members of the family and intimate friends, and will be followed by a reception at Burnmouth, Mrs. McCormick's Bar Harbor estate.

The bride, tall and aristocratic, will be given in marriage by her father, who has been east for some weeks. Preceding her to the altar as matron of honor will be her sister, Mrs. Collier. Miss Mary Buckler, a sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Margaret Chapman, daughter of the John Adams Chapmans of Chicago, who are summering at Bar Harbor, will be the bridesmaids.

George Barry Bingham is to serve Mr. Buckler as best man and ushering will be Eduardo Andrade, who is the son of Mrs. Frederick Pope of Wilton, Conn.; William Alexander Graham, Robertson Honey Jr., whose father is the American consul in Calgary, Alta.; Robert Blair Smith, Alexander Gordon Boone, and Laurence Perne.

Miss Margot Bell to Be Bride Today.

There are enough weddings here today, however, to provide interest for those who are not attending debutante parties. At 5 o'clock at the Lake Shore Drive hotel Miss Margot Bell, daughter of Col. and Mrs. J. Franklin Bell, who are making their home at the hotel, will become the bride of Carlyle Elwood Maw of New York City.

The Bells moved to Chicago from Washington, D. C., when Col. Bell became one of the managers of A Century of Progress. Dr. Arthur A. Hays, professor of theology at the Presbyterian Theological seminary, will read the service, as he did a number of years back for Col. and Mrs. Bell.

Contrary to custom Miss Bell will have two matrons of honor, her mother and Mrs. Samuel Scrivener Jr. of Washington, D. C. Miss Margaret Maw of New York City, a sister of the bridegroom, will be one of the bridesmaids and the others will be Miss Katherine Mahaffey of St. Louis and Miss Carolyn Ferguson of Washington, Pa.

Herbert Woodman of New York will be best man for Mr. Maw, who is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Maw of Provo, Utah. Ushering will be Charles True Adams, Lawrence Bailey of Washington, Pa., Carlile Bolton-Smith of Washington, D. C., and Frank Detweiler of New York City.

McElwain-Barber Nuptials in Evanston.

On the north shore this evening Miss Mary McElwain, daughter of Bishop and Mrs. Frank Arthur McElwain of Evanston, will be married to Henry P. C. W. Barber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith Barber, also of Evanston. The service is to be read by Bishop McElwain, assisted by Dr. Harold Bowen, at 8:30 o'clock at the altar of St. Mark's Episcopal church in Evanston.

Miss McElwain will have her sister and sister-in-law, Miss Caroline McElwain, and Mrs. Frank A. McElwain Jr. as maid of honor and matron of honor, respectively. Unfortunately Miss Alicia Barber, the bridegroom's sister, has been called east suddenly, so Mrs. Josiah Hartzell III. of Minneapolis will take her place as a bridesmaid. The other bridesmaid will be Mrs. Harry M. Schoening of Minneapolis. John Roberts Colvin will be the best man for Mr. Barber and ushering will be Walter H. Bennett of Brooklyn, N. Y., William Jefferson, William K. McElwain, Cabel Ball of Lafayette, Ind., Nelson Deyo, and Kenneth Cowan.

After Oct. 1 the couple will be at home at 822½ Forest avenue, Evanston.

Josephine Hopkins' Wedding Today.

Announcement was made only yesterday of the marriage this afternoon of Miss Josephine Hopkins, daughter of Mrs. Douglas Hopkins of 408 Briar place, and Fayette Smith Dunn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel O. Dunn of 3500 Lake Shore drive. The service is to be read at 4:30 o'clock at the Belmont hotel, with a small reception following.

Miss Hopkins, who was graduated from the Mount Vernon seminary in Washington, D. C., is a granddaughter of former United States Senator Albert J. Hopkins. Mr. Dunn is a graduate of the University of Michigan and the law school of Northwestern university. After a motor trip to Quebec Mr. Dunn and his bride will make their home at 440 Barry avenue.

The afternoon at 5 o'clock in her home in Lake Forest, Mrs. Ruth Thompson Owen, daughter of Mrs. John R. Thompson and the late Mr. Thompson, will become the bride of Donald Holman McGibeny, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McGibeny of Indianapolis. The service will be read by the Rev. Dr. McHatton of London, England, who is officiating at the Presbyterian church of Lake Forest during absence of the pastor, Dr. Roberts. Only the relatives and a few intimate friends will attend, including the bride's mother and her four children, Florence Louise, Ruth Elizabeth, Fredericka, and David John Owen, the bridegroom's parents and his sister, Mrs. Hudson Burr of Bloomington, Ill., and Mrs. Camilla Buckingham of Danville, Ill.

The senior Mr. McGibeny is a well known violinist and he and Mrs. McGibeny will furnish music at the wedding.

John R. Thompson Jr. will give his sister in marriage, and Mrs. F. Thompson Thomas will attend her sister. Charles C. Dawes will serve as best man for Mr. McGibeny. The junior Mrs. Thompson and their youngest daughter, Pauline, are at Lake Placid for two weeks, so they will not be at the ceremony, and Lois and Eleonore Thompson have been ill with the flu, so they will not see their aunt married.

Mr. McGibeny is a radio broadcaster with headquarters in Chicago. He served in the world war, first with the French ambulance corps and later with the American intelligence department. He covered the Riffian war as a United Press correspondent and was decorated by Marshal Petain and by the sultan of Morocco. He then was Paris correspondent for a New York paper and lived in Barbizon, where he still maintains a residence. Due to his duties as a broadcaster he and his bride will not take a wedding trip just now. They will live at her home, Chimney cottage, on North Green Bay road in Lake Forest.

Mary Reed in Tennis Match

It's hard to find two better women tennis players here or any other place than Miss Mary Reed, daughter of Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed of Lake Forest, and Miss Lucy Jane Hedberg, whose parents are the Henry E. Hedbergs of Glencoe.

Miss Reed will be one of the three players representing the United States tomorrow afternoon in the exhibition matches with England at the South Shore Country club. The others will be Miss Helen Fulton, daughter of the Frank Fultons of Winnetka, and Miss Elizabeth Ryan.

Miss Katherine Stammers, Miss Frieda James, and Miss Betty Nuthall will play for England. To welcome these English visitors, who arrive about 3 o'clock this afternoon, Groverman Ellis, president of the South Shore, is giving a tea later this afternoon at the club.

A STORY that we hope will send shivers down your back concerns Michael McLiammoir, the handsome young Irish actor who, with Hilton Edwards, also of the Gate theater in Dublin, left Chicago last week for Santa Fe. After the Woodstock theater festival ended they spent a week-end as guests of some friends in Ravinia. One morning Mr. McLiammoir recounted an experience he had had early that morning. He awakened and saw the bedroom door open, then realized that the door hadn't opened really. It was closed tight, but a ghostly door was swinging open, and a ghost dog was coming through the door. It came straight to the bed, jumped up on it and lay down. Mr. McLiammoir described the dog. It was a little larger than that dog there, he said, pointing to Mary Seraskier, the family pet. It had drooping ears, and was obviously a cocker spaniel. And he went on into further details of the dog's description.

His host and hostess listened intently. Mr. McLiammoir had described perfectly a former pet of theirs—a cocker spaniel that had been killed in the road two years ago. Moreover, a cocker spaniel that had liked to go to that particular room and jump on the bed in the early morning.

THAT was not the only instance of Mr. McLiammoir's clairvoyance, if it may be thus described. On another occasion he very clearly saw Orson Welles, co-actor in the Woodstock theater festival, not as he is today but as a small boy wearing a sailor suit. He was followed, in the vision, by a larger boy, and behind them both was Dr. Maurice Bernstein, the guardian of young Welles. Dr. Bernstein was clearly displeased with the older lad. He called him Richard, and at the moment of the vision Mr. McLiammoir very clearly heard him say gravely, "Richard, you can't do such a thing."

Clairvoyant—Dizzy—Scarecrow.

This interested Orson Welles and Dr. Bernstein exceedingly, as Orson has an elder brother named Richard, who, frequently in his childhood days, had to be taken in hand. But Mr. McLiammoir did not know that Welles had a brother named Richard. He had never heard of the existence of Richard.

A friend to whom these incidents were recounted listened through, then commented:

"No wonder the Irish see leprechauns."

MAIL for the Christmas Merry-Go-Round, to be held by the Chicago Lying-In hospital the first week in December, when addressed to the room number of the office in the Hotel Sherman, No. 338, sometimes gets sent by mistake to a room with a similar number. The gentleman in No. 338 handed a letter back to the mail clerk yesterday morning that was addressed, "Merry-Go-Round, Room 338, Hotel Sherman," and said humorously:

"I've been pretty dizzy lately, but still don't think this letter means me."

A LADY called up the other day to give us a piece of news. Name was Corcoran, she said.

"I was coming down to the loop on the elevated and I saw, from the window, the prettiest roof garden on a house that looked like an old tenement," she said. "There were lots of flowers of all kinds, but the thing I wanted to tell you about was the scarecrow. In the middle of the roof, amid all the flowers, was a scarecrow wearing dinner clothes. There was even an expanse of shirt front. It looked pretty funny, and I thought you'd like to know about it."

We thanked her and promptly typed it out.

Debut Season to Open Today; Four Will Bow

Parties Will Be Held on North Shore.

BY JUDITH CASS.

FOUR young women will make their formal bows to society here today and thus inaugurate the debutante season, which gives promise of being a very gay one, for there are over fifty names on the debutante list now and there undoubtedly will be a few more added to it before the season of 1934-'35 becomes history.

All four of today's parties are on the north shore, but because the weather has been so unseasonably cool none of the three teas will be garden parties.

A dance tonight at which Miss Hope Leonard will be introduced by her parents, Mrs. David R. Forgan and Clifford M. Leonard, will be an al fresco one, however, at least as far as the dancing goes, for a pavilion has been constructed for the occasion on the lawn of the Wayne Chatfield-Taylor estate in Lake Forest which Mrs. Forgan and her daughters are occupying this summer. Supper will be served indoors, however. A few of Mrs. Forgan's and Mr. Leonard's friends will be among the three hundred who will enjoy the party.

Miss Leonard will dine before the dance at the David B. Pecks' residence in Lake Forest at a party Mr. and Mrs. Peck are giving for Miss Gwendolyn Bowen, debutante daughter of the Joseph T. Bowens. Mrs. Peck, who is just back from visits in Desbarats and Antigo, has invited twenty-five young people to the dinner.

Miss Leonard finished her schooling at Miss Walker's in Simsbury, Conn., last spring. Her sister, Fleury, made her debut last winter.

Among other dinner parties that will be given before the Leonard dance are one that Mr. and Mrs. George H. Malcolm will give for their daughter, Durie, who is making her debut this afternoon.

Malcolms to Receive from 5 to 7 Today.

Miss Malcolm, who finished last spring at Chathall Hall in Virginia, will receive with her father and mother from 5 to 7 o'clock in their home on North Elm Tree road in Lake Forest. Miss Leonard will be one of the assistants and the others will be Miss Katherine Hilton of Dayton, Miss Malcolm's roommate at Chatham Hall; Miss Ellen Wacker, Miss Caryl Ely, Miss Barbara Bersbach, Miss Ethel Johnston, Miss Fanny McPherson, Miss Mary Elizabeth Reid, Miss Deborah Butler, and Miss Priscilla Morse, all debutantes of this season.

Miss Bersbach will do double duty as an assistant this afternoon, for she also will be among the pretty young girls flitting about Mrs. Oliver Sheppard Picher's home on Sheridan road in Hubbard Woods, assisting at the tea Mrs. Picher is giving to present her daughter, Muriel. Mrs. Picher and her daughter will receive from 4 to 7 o'clock, after which the debutante and most of her assistants will attend the dinner-dance that Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Barrett will give at the Indian Hill club for their daughter, Carolyn, who also is making her debut at a tea this afternoon. In addition to Miss Bersbach, Miss Picher will be assisted by Miss Elizabeth Hollis of Boston, who was at Mme. Boue's in Paris with her last winter; Miss Henrietta Boal, Miss Nancy Brown, Miss Charlotte Chandler, Miss Harriet Daughaday, Miss Marjorie Kelly, Miss Jane de Peyster, Miss Peggy Sargent,

Good Morning!

BELOVED BOOKS
BECAUSE it is so
HONEST and so RESTFUL
BECAUSE it takes me away from
PANDEMONIUM and gives me
PEACE.
But I didn't see HOW
They were EVER going to be able To SCREEN the novel successfully
It being just a CHRONICLE of DAILY LIFE on a FARM during
The FOUR SEASONS of the year
Well, they FOOLED ME!
The film is EXCELLENT
Though the characters are not ALL
As I had mentally PICTURED them
And though SOME LIBERTIES have Been taken with the STORY.
Neither fact MATTERS
Because no TWO people ever
CONJURE up the SAME
MENTAL IMAGES—and the CHANGES were permissible for the SAKE OF PUNCH.—[not MUCH punch
But a little]
As STANDS, the PHOTOPLAY is a SIMPLY TOLD TALE of REAL folks who get Their LIVING from
The DEEP BOSOM of MOTHER EARTH.
PLANTING in the SPRING
HARVESTING in SUMMER
"Putting up" in AUTUMN
And in WINTER
The BIG WARM KITCHEN with HOMEY smells of FRYING HAM
HOT BISCUITS—apple PIE
And COFFEE.
The HEART of the HOME is
Jen, the ELDEST daughter
Who MOTHERS, advises, and hears
CONFESSIONS of happiness and HEARTBREAK from not only her
FAMILY but all who come in CONTACT with her and REALIZE at FIRST SIGHT that she is
UNDERSTANDING
Personified
At LAST Jen has TIME
For a ROMANCE of her own. . . .
"As the Earth Turns" is a CLEAN
QUIET, and ENGROSSING picture
SYMPATHETICALLY acted, FINELY DIRECTED and REALISTICALLY staged
If you ever LIVED on a FARM or Ever YERNED to do so, this movie
Is SURE going to GET YOU.

See you tomorrow.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

She knows what a part bland soap plays in keeping skin satin smooth and free from dryness. Her bath soap is a cold cream one, scented with almonds. [TRIBUNE Studio Photo. Posed by Marjorie Clark.]

More soaps that you should know about if you're the unhappy possessor of a skin that gets all crinkly and dry every time you try to get closer to godliness. When we wrote about a bland one recently we were so overwhelmed with women who wanted to pounce on it we decided that mild soap propaganda wouldn't be a bad thing to devote our life to. We're starting now, too, because now's the time to begin coddling the dry skin, if you want any peace and poise this winter.

There are five, all as soothing to the old epidermis as milk or olive oil. You can tell by the very feel of the bars that they're rich and creamy: they lather like mad and there isn't a skin sting in a carload.

One of the five is extra mild, sort of a superfatted affair for the skin that is just too, too ornery about soap and water. This one is called cold cream soap, and has, unless our nose deceives us, the appetizing odor of almonds. It's our special weakness among the five.

But there is a beautiful jasmine, a scent that is literally leaping in popularity lately. More of this la-de-da trend, we suppose. Minuets and fainting spells wouldn't surprise us a bit this winter.

Verbena, too, another delicate, ultra-feminine fragrance that the 1934 lassies are liking as well as their grandmothers ever did. The bars of the verbena are a buttercup yellow you can hardly resist.

The pine, for the woman of sturdier tastes or for the man of the house, is green, of course, and the sweet lavender is dutifully orchid. You'll probably be glad to know that the bath bars are really big; you can get a firm grip on them and soap up the washcloth in record time.

And—these soaps aren't expensive.

Pin Dotted Raincoats Come in Grand Shades.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Finds for Saturday! White pin dotted raincoats and capes in grand new shades of old blue; stuff that looks so much like foulard or the silk in men's lounging robes that it will fool an expert. They are decidedly different and decoratively effective on the darkest day. If you must have color, try the vivid scarlet capes as thin as onion-skin, highly satisfactory as to swanky lines, and featherweight.

New costume jewelry in prystal and jade green combines, ovalized bracelets in trios, the green a stunning composition stuff carved to simulate real jade. The same stuff in smart dull black with transparent prystal in bracelets, chest pins, clips, and big chunks used for knockout finger rings.

All the autumn gloves have bows coquettishly trimming the cuffs, or trimming that looks like fagoting or hemstitching, or contrasting bands of lether or silver or gold tracings in leaf designs or scrolls. Black, dark brown, and creamy beige are the smartest shades for fall wardrobes.

If you have gone Russian with either suits or hats you'll like the new footwear, also à la Russe, slippers that come high over the instep and then lace through the exact center. You can buy them in all street shades. This lacing racket is quite different. It is used down the center of the heel, down the toe on some half and half combines, of smooth kidskins and suede with exciting results. The outside is kidskin, the inside half suede. There are matching handbags laced and contrasted in the same equally divided manner.

Some of the highest heels are found on the street ties of black suede combined with patent lether. But the patent lether is so different that any shoe shopper will crow with delight. Ribbed to look like corded shiny satin, with the dizzy heels covered with the patent lether to match the toes, it's amazing how short the foot appears.

Irish crochet collars and cuffs are being revived. After you see their devastating charm on black or bottle green velvet dresses you'll understand why. Tiny little bows of the same lace are used effectively on slim tailored street clothes and mixed dark tweeds, and larger bows and tiny turnover collars are used on dull crêpe afternoon dresses. If you have any such hidden away, this is the year to wear them.

BLAZING GUNS

By WILLIAM MacLEOD RAINE

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Landis inherited the Lazy B ranch from her uncle. It adjoins the Circle 3 T ranch, owned by Chet Radbourne, powerful boss in the county, who is Mary's legal guardian. He has been stealing Mary's cattle and trying to force her to marry him. To escape his tyranny Mary marries Cole Sanborn, fearless young outlaw and suspected train robber, within an hour after meeting him. There is bitter enmity between Cole and the Circle 3 T brand. The marriage is one in name only, giving them both better advantage to fight their common enemy. Jerry Haskell, Radbourne's foreman, brought Mary to the Jonesboro house, where she met Cole. Haskell had given Cole an hour to get out of town. Cole plans to find a home for Mary in the town while he goes to her ranch as foreman, expecting plenty of trouble to break. Mary writes a note to Mrs. Peters, whose husband is a leading citizen of the town. They both call to see her and agree to have her stay with them. Cole goes to the Haven of Rest to find Haskell and call his bluff, followed by his two men. Haskell escapes. Cole gets out of town safely. A messenger brings Radbourne the news of Mary's marriage. He is arranging with Curt Jordan to get Cole, when Cole breaks in on their conference.

INSTALMENT XII.

TRAPPED.

Sanborn shut the door with his foot. He did not lift his gaze from the two at the desk. One instant of carelessness would be fatal.

"We can talk more comfortably with the door shut," he said. "You wouldn't want for us to be interrupted, Chet."

"Just before you came in we were mentioning you, Cole," the ranchman said, from a dry throat.

"Saying nice things about me," Sanborn drawled, derisively. "Don't quit just because I dropped in. But I don't need to hear you talk to know how fond of me you are."

"You figure me wrong, Cole," replied Radbourne with unctious heartiness. "I never did have a thing against you. Trouble is you're one of these impatient lads who get notions and stick to them through hell and high water." The Circle 3 T man tittered, on a note of simulated friendliness palpably false.

"Good old Chet. I've been doing you a wrong," Sanborn murmured. He saw the rancher only out of the corner of his eyes. His attention was on the other man. He read the thought behind the shallow stony eyes. "You did right, Jordan, in putting up your hands. No chance of beating me to the draw—then or now. You'll have to wait till you can get me from the brush."

The vanity of the bad man was aroused. "I don't need to get you from the brush. I'll take a chance with any man alive," he boasted.

"If you have to," Sanborn answered contemptuously. "I know your kind."

Again Radbourne cut in: "Don't be a fool, Curt. He came here on business, Cole did. We'll listen to his proposition."

"Good of you," Sanborn said, with his thin sardonic smile.

"You and I don't always see alike, Cole, but I aim to be reasonable. I reckon a talk will clear things up. It's been quite some time since we met up, and we've both listened to a lot of lies whispered by busybodies. I'm right glad you came." Chet managed a reciprocal smile, but it was not a very convincing one.

"It's been a year since we met—in person," the visitor said. "But I've had messages from you since then. A few months ago I stopped a Circle 3 T bullet. By the way, Chet, you'd ought to make your warriors demonstrate before you hire them."

Radbourne shook his head sadly. "That's no way to talk, Cole. If any of my boys fired at you it was without instructions from me. I did hear about one of my riders, when he was crazy with drink, pulling a gun and firing at you. I gave him his time right off."

"Then his name wasn't Jordan?"

The bleak gaze of the owner of that name met that of Sanborn.

"I'm thorough," he said, hardily. "When I shoot a man he stays dead."

"So I've heard. No hospital for those you drop. Better get Jordan next time, Chet."

The boss of the Circle 3 T brushed this aside impatiently. "What's the use of jawing? You came here to tell me something. Spit it out."

"I came here to get your blessing, Chet," Sanborn said, with a satiric lift of the upper lip. "I've just married your ward, though I don't reckon that is news to you. Of course you'll be glad not to be worried with her affairs any more. I'm taking them over."

Radbourne did not say what he would have liked to say. It would not do to try too far the patience back of that bitter, insolent smile. Had Sanborn come to devil him into making a false move as an excuse for killing him? That was likely. This strong, virile devil of a fellow was thorough. He had given his proofs.

"We'll have to talk that over, Cole," he said smoothly. "I had other plans. But no use going into that now. Spilt milk, you might call it. Well, we got to make the best of things as they are. You're certainly a young man in a hurry, Cole. I don't recollect ever having seen faster work. Boy, you'll have to quit hellin' around now."

"Yes," agreed Sanborn. "I'm going to settle down now, Chet—on the Lazy B."

"That's fine," Radbourne said promptly. "I'm too busy with my own affairs to have much time left to look after those of other folks. I felt it was my duty to see Miss Landis got a square deal, but now she's married I can step out with a clear conscience. I'll admit I was some riled when I heard she had taken so important a step without letting me know. But the more I think of it, the better I like it. You know cows."

There was a hint of ironic derision in the weatherbeaten face that looked down at the Circle 3 T owner. All this talk was a lie designed to put Cole off his guard. Sanborn knew that and it got exactly nowhere.

"Much obliged for your indorsement, Chet," he drawled. "I was worried for fear I was a four flusher. I reckon, then, you'll push your stock back off our range right away?"

Radbourne chewed his quid. "Sure. If any of my stuff have drifted over. We won't quarrel none about that."

"If you've got private business with Chet I reckon I'll be going," Jordan announced. He did not lift his hands from the desk, but a ripple passed through his lithe body, as though he was about to move.

"Don't you!" warned Sanborn, with deadly evenness.

The ripple died down. "I'm to stay here, am I?" Jordan inquired, sullenly.

"Couldn't get along without you."

Sanborn spoke to Radbourne. Over his eyes a film had come, a shutter which left them opaque and without warmth. The muscles of the brown face were rigid, the voice cold as wind blowing across an ice covered lake.

"Listen, Chet. I sent a message by your man Haskell, then decided to deliver it myself. I'm here to lay the law down. My wife will stay with Mrs. Peters, as a guest, until I'm ready to take over the Lazy B and run it. That will be right soon. From now on it will be hands off. You'll not bully her. You'll not crowd her. It was up to her to make a choice, and she's done that. I've come here to tell you just one thing. If you annoy or mistreat Mrs. Sanborn, or if you do any harm to Mr. or Mrs. Peters, I'll put you where you'll never trouble another woman. I could do that tonght, but I'm giving you one chance. Don't make a mistake. You can't hide in your hole deep enough so that I won't drag you out. Understand?"

Through the open window had come the sound of horses' hoofs.

A man called, "That you, Jerry?"

For answer came a raucous curse.

Voices, the stamping of horses, the creak of saddle lether, drifted to those in the room. Some one was striding toward the house.

Swiftly Cole drew a revolver. "You don't want to be interrupted just now, Chet," he warned.

The lean muscles of his jaw had tightened and his deepset eyes had narrowed to shining slits, but there was not the faintest hint of panic in the cool voice.

Neither of the men at the desk spoke. Neither of them moved. But both knew the equation had changed. Sanborn had stayed too long and was now on the defensive. In another moment with any luck . . .

The footsteps came close.

Sanborn leaned against the door. He was trapped, and as always when danger came close, he felt the lift of the spirit only daredevils know.

The beady eyes of Radbourne gloated, but he did not intend to make a mistake. He did not want to pass out with his enemy when the guns roared.

"I'm busy," he called hoarsely to the approaching man.

"It's me," the answer came, harshly. "Got to see you, Chet."

Fingers turned the doorknob, but Sanborn's weight prevented the man from entering.

"Get him, Jerry," shouted Jordan. "It's Sanborn."

He reached for a weapon and flung his body to the floor, and at the same time Radbourne's great bulk slid under the desk. The man outside put his shoulder to the door and pushed it open.

Miss Harriett Street, Miss Nancy Knode, and Miss Leslie Wilson, all buds of the season.

Before going to Mme. Boue's Miss Picher was at Westover for four years. Also assisting this afternoon will be the debutante's sister, Mrs. Picher Purcell and her house guest, Mme. Edith Rauscher of Paris, France.

Miss Chandler, Miss Brown, Miss Street, Miss Knode, Miss de Peyster, Miss Sargent, Miss Daughaday, Miss Wilson, Miss Kelly, and Miss Boal also will be among Miss Barrett's assistants. Her list also includes Miss Joan Elliott, Miss Grace Barnum, Miss Jane Noyes, Miss Miriam Fetcher, the Misses Susan and Elizabeth Ballard, and Miss Barbara Barrett, the debutante's elder sister.

Mr. and Mrs. Barrett and their daughter will receive in the music room of their residence at 530 Cherry street, Winnetka, from 4 to 7 o'clock. Miss Barrett is the only one of today's buds who is combining college and debutante gayety. She entered Smith last year, having finished at Knox the year before, and she will be returning to Northampton around the twentieth to start her sophomore year.

Debutante Party Tomorrow Noon.

A gay debutante party is scheduled for tomorrow noon when Mr. and Mrs. Ayres Boal Jr., Stewart Boal, and Thomas Boal will be hosts and hostess at a cocktail party from noon until 1:30 for Miss Henrietta Boal. The party will be at the residence of the junior Mr. and Mrs. Boal on Tower road in Winnetka.

Another debutante party that will be given tomorrow at noon is a luncheon that Miss Suzette Morton will give for Miss Mary Elizabeth Reid, debutante daughter of the Bryan S. Reids. The party will be in Lake Forest, where Miss Morton and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Morton, are occupying the Walter S. Brewster house.

Miss Jane Noyes is not making a formal debut, but her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Noyes, are giving a tea tomorrow afternoon for her and her sister, Mrs. Charles A. Howe, the former Annie Noyes. Mr. and Mrs. Noyes and their daughters will receive their friends in the Noyes home on Sunset road in Winnetka.

Millcreek Hunt Opens Tomorrow.

There may not be a large turnout for the first hunt of the season of the Millcreek hunt [the former Onwentsia hunt] tomorrow morning, for the notices were not sent out until Thursday and many of the members are away or have made other plans for the week-end, but the group will make up in enthusiasm what it lacks in numbers, without a doubt.

Austin H. Niblack, the M. F. H., will be on hand for the hunt, which will start at 11 o'clock from the stables in Millburn, but his wife left yesterday for the east, so she won't be there. She has gone east to attend the east-west polo matches at Meadowbrook, L. I., and will not be at home again until the 18th.

Mrs. William H. Bush and her daughter, Miss Emeline Bush, are entertaining at dinner tomorrow night at the Saddle and Cycle club for the Bartle Bulls of London and Prentice Buell, the well known Eyptologist who is at the head of the Oriental institute's expedition at Memphis, Egypt. Mr. Bull and his wife, the former Rosemary Baur, are visiting her mother, Mrs. Jacob Baur.

Entertain for Ruth Holloway.

Miss Ruth Holloway, who arrived in Chicago Thursday to spend a week before she returns to Stockbridge, Mass., for her wedding on Oct. 13 to Edward T. Herndon, is mixing shopping with parties during her stay here.

Her matron of honor, Mrs. Brownell T. Bradstreet, gave a kitchen shower yesterday afternoon at her home in Winnetka, and Miss Judith Walsh, who will go east to be a bridesmaid for Miss Holloway, is giving a luncheon today at the Indian Hill club. Mrs. John L. Lane has planned a luncheon for Tuesday at the Union League club and that afternoon Mrs. Charles H. Brown wil give a tea and handkerchief shower at her Winnetka home.

Miss Holloway's other wedding attendants include Mrs. F. Harney Bassett [Betty Scriven] and her niece, Barbara Finlay, who will act as flower girl; Miss Merle Whitcomb, the bride's cousin, of Dedham, Mass.; Miss Frances Cookman of Englewood, N. J., and Miss Sara Louise Hoeffer of Pottsville, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Haldeman Finnie of Detroit are in Lake Forest to visit Mrs. Finnie's mother, Mrs. Charles S. Holt. Mrs. Finnie is the former Isabelle Holt. Mr. Finnie will remain over the week-end only, but Mrs. Finnie will be here for two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Wirtz of 6270 Sheridan road are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, Arthur M. Wirtz Jr., on Thursday at St. Luke's hospital. The young man is their third child.

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph. D.

In spite of almost universal opinion among visitors at the zoo, monkeys rarely have been known to have fleas. When they search through each other's hair they are looking for small bits of sweet secretion which is shed by the skin. They like this "scurf" because it is salty, and will spend hours searching for small particles of it.

BY MARY MEADE.

Vacationing seems to stack up piles of questions all sitting pertly on the desk fidgeting for one's return. Poser the first comes from Mrs. E. G. and eggplants are her trouble.

She writes: "Why is it that sometimes, after I French fry eggplant, it is so bitter that we cannot eat it? I soaked it in salt water for several hours before cooking it."

The trouble, Mrs. G., is not with your preparation, but with the eggplant. When these fat vegetables are picked late in the season or are too mature they develop a very pronounced bitterness which any amount of soaking in salt water will not completely kill. Often the old fellows also are pithy and have other unpleasant internal troubles. The youngsters of the eggplant family are almost never bitter. Lodge a complaint with your grocer if he is consistently selling you overripe eggplants. He'll really thank you for the tip, for a bad vegetable often turns away a good customer.

Next from Mrs. R. F. M., with queries about buttermilk and soy beans: "Is buttermilk as nourishing for children of 9 to 16 as sweet milk? And is it a laxative?"

No, buttermilk is much less nourishing, both in the amount of calories or energy giving properties and in the amount of vitamins it contains. For instance, a scant half cup of buttermilk gives us 36 calories of nourishment, while the same amount of whole milk gives 69 calories. This is mainly because the butter fat has been removed in the preparation of the buttermilk. There is only about half as much of vitamins A and B (for promoting growth and protecting against infection) in buttermilk as in whole milk, and vitamin D, which protects children against rickets and helps build good bones and teeth, is entirely taken from the milk when buttermilk is made. Buttermilk also has somewhat less calcium (bone and teeth builder) than has whole milk. This doesn't mean that buttermilk is injurious in any way, but we simply must be sure that these vitamins, minerals, and calories are supplied in other ways if we are going to give it to children to any extent.

Occasionally buttermilk is made from whole rather than skim milk. In that case both the buttermilk and the whole milk would have the same nutritional value. Buttermilk, rather than a laxative, is believed to act as a regulator. It is the opinion of scientists that it supplies certain friendly bacteria which help to counteract some of the harmful bacteria often found at work in the bowels.

Now for the soy bean questions. Mrs. M. asks: "Are soy beans nourishing? What place may they take in a child's diet? Can the soy bean meal be used?" And the answer: Yes, soy beans are extremely nourishing. They have good quality proteins (body building elements) and a high caloric or nutritive value because of their richness in oil. These beans are not particularly high in minerals nor vitamins, but by combining them with milk and vegetables and a little meat the diet will be balanced. There is one drawback, however, in feeding soy beans too freely to young children. The beans contain considerable rough, indigestible matter which may irritate sensitive digestive tracts. Therefore I suggest that you use them with moderation. Soy bean meal and flour are approximately the same in makeup as the beans themselves.

Stock Conducts Orchestra in Fair Concert

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Frederick Stock, immaculate in white summer costume, conducted the Chicago Symphony orchestra through its semi-final night at the Swift Bridge of Service last night to what was as fully a fine artistic success as any during the ten weeks of the orchestra's engagement. With a brisk, not to say chilly, north breeze as a reason for nonattendance, the bridge theater was nevertheless populated to its last row of seats, and the audience was as appreciative and as audible in its appreciation as though the big thermometer at the immediate west had been registering twenty or thirty degrees of higher temperature.

For all this there is a reason. Mr. Stock has frequently by word and precept expressed his opinion that the public is entitled to the best performances of the best music that the Chicago Symphony orchestra can supply. Anything in the way of musical condescension is entirely foreign to his philosophy.

Consequently the Bach-Abert Prelude, Choral, and Fugue, and Beethoven's Seventh Symphony took up the first half of the program, played with a beauty of tone and spirited interpretation that one would scarcely find equaled in midwinter at Orchestra hall.

Tonight, the last concert of the series, he is going to do even better by his public. On this program there will be his own orchestral transcription of Bach's Prelude and Fugue in C minor, a magnificent score this, to be followed by Tschaikowsky's Fifth Symphony. Then, after the intermission, there will be Ravel's "The Waltz," Mr. Stock's arrangement of the love scene from the second act of "Tristan and Isolde," and Respighi's unfailingly stirring "The Pines of Rome."

John Charles Thomas, headliner among American baritones, has just received the order of Cavaliere of the Crown of Italy. Mr. Thomas was one of the stars of the Chicagoland Music Festival program at Soldiers' field on Aug. 18. He will sing with the Chicago Grand Opera company on the afternoon of Nov. 17 and the night of Nov. 19.

The Stage

Margaret Anglin, co-star with Alexandra Carlisle of "Fresh Fields" at the Blackstone theater for the last nine weeks, will leave the company after tomorrow night's performance. Her rôle will be assumed on Sunday night, for the rest of the engagement, by Gladys Hanson, an actress who has appeared prominently in many important dramatic productions. Miss Hanson's last appearances in Chicago were in "The Queen's Husband," at the Cort theater, in 1929, and "Dear Old England," at the Princess theater, in 1930.

The Harris theater will open for the new season on Monday night, Sept. 17, with "No More Ladies," a comedy by A. E. Thomas which was rated among the major hits of last season in New York. The cast will include Mary Sargent, Daphne Warren-Wilson, Walter Pidgeon, Betty Linly, Marcella Swanson, Nicholas Joy, Boyd Davis, and Robert E. Lowers. This play was recently announced for the first booking on the subscription season of the American Theater society at the Erlanger.

Fred Astaire Signs New Contract for Three Movies

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Fred Astaire, dancing comedian, today signed a new contract with R. K. O. studio calling for three pictures to be made within a year.

Mother Tosses Her Family a Huge Bouqet

Her Youngest, Especially, She Rates as Model Baby.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Instead of writing today on child behavior, I'd like to have you look over my shoulder as I read a letter. It is from one of my readers with whom I have been corresponding for years—and just paints a picture of one of those "happy homes" that don't make the head lines.

"Dear Mrs. Bevans: If you're real busy don't take time to read this now, as it is merely a symposium on my lovely and highly satisfactory family, and you may not have time for egotism at this moment.

"The setting? I'm writing in the kitchen just now, perched on Jane's long legged chair because I like to be above a typewriter and our chairs all run to lowness. David is on the floor trying to open a can with a rubber hatchet when not interfered with by Jane, who has just gotten up from a nap. Norman and a playmate are busy at store or house in the attic. And the bones from yesterday's lamb roast are stewing gently for broth. My cake frosting is cooling for a 'new recipe' cake. And I am so thrilled. It seems to be a good cake and I have been trying for a long while to find a chocolate that I wouldn't spoil. They seem to be my nemesis. I seldom put out anything inedible but chocolate cakes have heretofore been my waterloo.

"David, my baby, is one of those darling children! And I have decided to keep right on now with more. Maybe it is just David himself. My mother-in-law tells me how my husband, when a baby, used to stop his play every few minutes to come in and say "I yike my mumsy.' And David seems to have that sweetness about him. His eyes smile more than his face. He looks at me with that boundless devotion you see in a dog's eyes, and more. Just as if he said, 'mother, you are so wonderful and I just love to look at you.'

"When I pick him up he snuggles his face in my neck or puts his cheek next to mine, and his arms tighten around my neck. Mother said he just made a person want to hold him. But he doesn't beg for it.

"He doesn't walk yet. His ankles are slender and fragile looking although he stands up now. He has sweet curly toes. All he needs is time. He is his father's son—looks and disposition.

"Jane is a perfect lady now and as sweet as sugar. A little spunky once in a while. She is truly girlish and dear, and such a help to me. A."

"P. S. The cake met with the approval of the 'head of the house.'"

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

THE PLAYING ADVANTAGE OF A SUIT CONTRACT WHEN BOTH ARE NOT 4-3-3-3 SPLIT HANDS.

Take two hands which in the bidding situation we are analyzing should reach a slam because of the primary values in each hand.

Opener's hand:

Sp. K J x x	Di. A K x
Ht. A x x	Cl. A Q x

Responding hand:

Sp. A Q x x	Di. x x x
Ht. K x x	Cl. K x x

Here the spades are a duplication, and only five-odd can be made in spades or no trumps. The addition of the jack of hearts to either hand would give a finesse for slam, as would jack-ten of diamonds in the responding hand. We cannot discover these facts in the bidding and so will not stop short of the slam. It is just an unlucky hand on which slam must be bid though it cannot be made. Now let us retain the same high cards, but with a different distribution. Make the responding hand and the slam in no trumps would depend on the diamond suit being split 3-3 against you, whereas in spades the slam will be upset only by five trumps in one hand against you, or possibly if the hand on responder's right has four spades and only two hearts. Nine chances out of ten in favor of an easy slam. Now keep the responding hand as last given (c), but alter the opener's hand to

Sp. A Q x x	Di. x x x x
Ht. K x	Cl. K x x

(d)

Sp. K J x x	Di. A K x
Ht. A x x x	Cl. A Q

and the hand will deliver seven-odd if the trumps break, or even if they are massed against you, provided that you can ruff the small cards of each red suit with a low trump without being overruffed.

Played in spades, there is no duplication at all and a perfect fit. In no trumps, however, six can be made only if the diamonds break. Opener's hand is the same as last given (d), but responder's holdings are

Sp. A Q x x	Di. Q J x
Ht. x x x x	Cl. K x

Now we have the worst possible duplication in three suits, and two heart tricks must be lost. An unlucky and unlikely combination. Change responder's hand to and now we see that to slam in no trumps the hearts must be split and also the club finesse must win; whereas in spades you can strip the hand so that if hearts are split and the third round is won by the opponent on opener's left, the club finesse will be unnecessary.

Sp. A Q x x	Di. Q J x
Ht. K x x x	Cl. x x

Do Not Become Pessimistic About Slams.

I am afraid the above instances of unlucky duplications may lead you to feel that slams are a dubious gamble on the values stipulated for this particular form of slam try. That is really not the case. I have stressed th worst possible breaks and duplication with the idea of deterring you from shading the requirements I suggest for these bids. Actually you will find that you will make three slams out of four, because the cards will not consistently conspire to group themselves unfavorably around the high cards on which you have based your bidding. Generally one or both hands will supply some unbiddable key holding such as a jack, jack-ten, ten-nine, or a stray queen, which will give you at least a finesse for your slam. Above all, remember this: Your slam bid will never prove a disaster from the penalty point of view. Seldom can the opponents double, for they can have very few high cards. A set of more than two is unknown if the bidding has been correct. A set of two is very, very rare. Usually there is no doubt about five-odd, distinct probability for six and frequently a play for seven. If doubled in six of a suit, you must expect five trumps in one hand against you, and it may be wise to bid six no trumps. The latter contract will then be easier to handle. You may be able to make it; if set, the penalty will be no worse, probably less. If able to trust your partner's bidding, and with a queen or two jacks in reserve, hope that they may also double six no trumps so that one of you can redouble. Every outstanding high card will be located for you, and you should get an early count on the suit doubler's hand. Probably you will be able eventually to finesse deeply or end play him. Short suited slams are the hardest to bid skilfully. The methods here advised will protect you from misfits and serious penalties, while steering you nine times out of ten into the contract in which your playing resources can best be employed.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The scene is George Renahan's venerable lodge, near Round Lake, Ill. The settings, by special arrangement with Ma Nature, include woods, fresh air, and a five mile lake. The cast, headed by James Londos, the world's heavyweight wrestling champion, numbers sundry stooges and one excellent chef. As the action opens, Mr. Londos is about to rise and shine for a day's training. Looking at Mr. Londos, you would say this is a very foolish and needless chore, indeed, for he appears to be an old settler in that peculiar state known as the pink. But James has a date to rassle a big guy named Ed [Strangler] Lewis at Wrigley field on the night of Sept. 20, and so is taking his training very much to heart, since this Lewis is a very tough party to handle at any and all times.

The blankets on the couch in Londos' second floor apartment are beginning to stir, and presently they reveal James. It is not quite 7 a. m., but the champion is soon up and doing, personally rousting his partners out of their slumbers. In no time at all, the entire crew is on deck ready for a spell of road work. There is no breaking of fasts prior to this, although James might decide to snatch a fistful of ripe olives or a glass of milk before he hits the highway.

He Takes a Little Run.

If the muscles of your legs tighten in the morning sprint for a tram or train and your wind is not what it used to be, it would be well for you to decline the champion's invitation to join in the gallop, for he will have gone from 10 to 12 miles ere he returns to the Renehan board. What is more it will not be a level ten miles. James not only delights in roadwork, but fancies a hilly route for it. Before you have gasped through a couple of miles, he will have come upon a golf course, and there he quits fooling, jogging up and down the fairways as though this were so many carpets.

If you survive this ordeal, the next step will be a shower and rub down, the latter with heated olive oil. Follows breakfast, after which he retires to his chambers for another nap until luncheon. The period from there until he actually begins wrestling does not come under the head of amusements, either. One day he may take a notion to get in a few licks at chopping wood. The next day it may be a session of digging trenches. Then again, James may hop into a boat and go rowing up and down and across the lake. In any event, if you can't take it, you will be somewhat aware of that fact by this time.

Now for Some Fun.

All of this, of course, has been a lark to the champion himself. Now comes the real business of the day—the actual work on the mat, which usually begins about 2 o'clock. On his arrival at the camp, Londos caused a ring to be erected outdoors, but the weather has been such that he considers it too chilly to risk the possibility of a cold.

Before going into the daily rassling program, Londos limbers himself up with a series of calisthenics enough to ruin a white collar citizen for a week. He prances around the premises for a few minutes, finally going over to the canvas and there doing a routine of tumbling which would earn him a booking with any acrobatic skit. This includes, among other items, a series of somersaults from a prostrate position and a bridging exercise wherein he wriggles about the mat with only his toes and the back of his head for supports.

Then follows his favorite gymnasium stunt, one which he designed himself, and points to as one of the best training aids a wrestler has. He takes two large bath towels, weaving them together full length, and then chooses a partner. They seat themselves on the mat, facing each other with the soles of their shoe joined, and begin a tug of war which eventually reduces the towels to the thickness of ordinary rope. This trick's prime value is in strengthening the parts of wrestling's most important tool, the grip—fingers, hands, wrists, and forearms.

No Tricks; Just Business.

Next on the program will come a short turn with the medicine ball, which James always concludes by having one of his stooges hurl the ball at him as he lies on his back, returning it with his feet. Try that one on your dancers some afternoon.

Next and last is the rassling itself. With Manager Ed White holding the

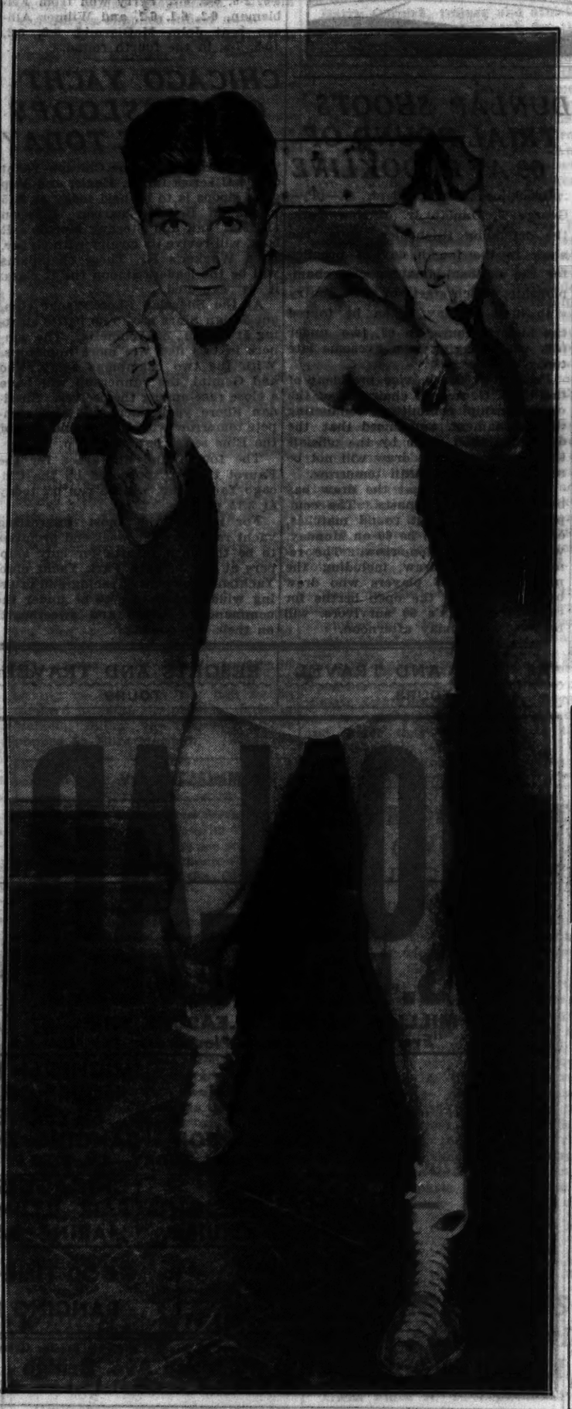
TWO WHO REALLY MAKE AN ARGUMENT



Leo Rodak, Chicago featherweight boxer, who promises to rise to the top of the 126 pound division. He fights Young Rightmire ten rounds Sept. 20 at Wrigley field on the Londos-Lewis championship wrestling card. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Everett (Young) Rightmire, whose boxing skill will give Rodak one of his hardest tests when they get into the ring Sept. 20.

Rodak Agrees to Weigh 128 for Rightmire

The welterweight championship fight between Barney Ross and Jimmy McLarnin was postponed again last night. It is now scheduled for this evening. Details on page 20.

Leo Rodak, one of the greatest amateur boxers Chicago has developed and undefeated as a professional, will have to make 128 pounds for his ten round match with Everett Rightmire at Wrigley field Sept. 20. The Rodak-Rightmire bout is one of the main attractions on an all-star program featuring Jim Londos and Ed Lewis in a heavyweight championship wrestling contest.

Pat Kenneally, who is employed by the Catholic Youth organization to manage Rodak and other boxers from the group who turn professional, wanted the weight set at 130 pounds. Rodak now weighs 133 pounds and is in good condition. His trainers feared it might weaken him to reduce five pounds. Tommy O'Loughlin, who handles Rightmire, insisted on 127 pounds.

Effect a Compromise.

After a discussion between the two managers yesterday a compromise of 128 pounds was agreed upon.

"If Rodak comes in half a pound over weight he will have to work it off," O'Loughlin stated. "He is rated the foremost contender for the featherweight championship. Why then does he balk about making 128 pounds? He would have to get down to 126 if he wanted to win the title.

"I doubt if he can make that weight. Judging from the protest his handlers made over the weight for the Rightmire bout, I think he ought to campaign among the lightweights and leave the featherweight field for those who are legitimate 126 pounders."

Loses One of 87 Fights.

Rightmire, who has lost only one decision in 87 fights, is expected to give Rodak the strongest opposition he has had. Manager Kenneally and others who have watched the former Golden Gloves champion prepare for the match at the C. Y. O. gymnasium are confident Rodak is in the best condition of his career.

A Statement from the Commission

THE following statement was issued yesterday by Joe Triner, chairman of the Illinois state athletic commission, in regard to the heavyweight championship wrestling match between Jim Londos and Ed [Strangler] Lewis at Wrigley field on Sept. 20:

"In view of the unprecedented interest aroused all over the United States in the Londos and Lewis championship heavyweight wrestling match, I wish to answer the wrestling fan's question: 'Will this be a contest or an exhibition?'

The Illinois state athletic commission has issued to Mr. Arch Ward, promoter of this championship match, a wrestling contest permit. Since wrestling has been reinstated by our commission, very few contest wrestling permits have been issued. The majority of the permits issued have been exhibition ones.

"We firmly believe that this match will be a test of strength and skill, and we intend to surround it with all protection humanly possible. All of our wrestling referees will be called together three days prior to this match for a general review of rules and regulations, as well as special precautionary instructions. The referee who will officiate will not be advised of his selection until the contestants are in the ring. The two judges we will select from the six that are submitted to us by the wrestling fans in the contest now being conducted by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

"This match is no different from any other championship match as far as our commission is concerned, and we would not hesitate to stop it a week, a day, an hour, or a minute before its scheduled time if there was any evidence that could be substantiated that pointed to anything but an honest contest.

"Our commission intends to protect the boxing and wrestling fans' interest at all times, and they can be assured of our vigilance and strict supervision in reference to boxing and wrestling conducted in this state.

"ILLINOIS STATE ATHLETIC COMMISSION,
"Joe Triner, Chairman."

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Mr. James Dykes, who manages the White Sox, reserved a hero seat for himself yesterday, but didn't drop into it until the ninth inning. Then he stretched out comfortably after doubling to left center with one out and driving home Luke Appling, who had walked, with the run that crushed the Tiger chasing Yankees, 6 to 5. The drive by the manager also put a crimp in the ambitions of Vernon [Lefty] Gomez, who got into the argument in the eighth.

However, the New Yorkers did manage to gain half a lap on the leaders, the interval between them now being five games.

Gomez took over the job under the impression that it would be an easy way in which to fatten an already formidable season's record. Instead of this the valiant southpaw was assessed with his fourth defeat of the year against 24 victories. It also ended his winning streak at ten games. And still another happening of unusual importance was that Joe Heving, who worked the last three innings for the Sox, was credited with the triumph, making his first of the 1934 campaign.

Tietje Is Unlucky.

Unlucky Les Tietje started for the Sox, but lacked his usual skill except in the matter of a strike out ball. At the end of six innings he quit with a score of 4 to 2 against him. But the Sox were just starting. They landed on Jimmy Deshong and Johnny Murphy in the seventh and didn't quit until they had picked up three runs good for a 5 to 4 lead. The Yanks slapped their way back into a tie off Heving in the eighth and almost smothered the latter in the ninth when he passed one and hit one with none out. He escaped from this by fanning Lazzeri and starting a double play on a tap by Selkirk.

The ancient Babe Ruth who insists this will be his final season, hung around long enough to do a bit of damage before pulling his usual fade

Talking It Over

As idle steeds they have little value except for breeding purposes. . . . There is no one who will say that John A. Heydler, president of the National league, is not a good executive. . . .

ANDY LOTSHAW.

JOHN A. HEYDLER.

But he scarcely is a personality fan. . . . Recently in Chicago he warmly grasped Babe Herman by the hand and said: "How are you, Chuck?" . . . Dr. Andy Lotshaw, trainer of the Cubs, who was chased off the Cubs' bench in Cincinnati the other day by Umpire William [One Mistake] Klem, recently received a wire advising him he had been fined $100 for speaking a naughty word in addressing Mr. Klem. . . . Dr. Lotshaw has a seven passenger auto and a liveried chauffeur, but he worried so much about the fine that Manager Grimm broke down and told him it was a rib, thus preventing a stroke of apoplexy. . . .

A sport writer who apparently had eaten too much chile con carne recently remarked that there was no reason for all-star sports events. . . . He probably hasn't heard about the thousands who were turned away from the all-star interleague games at Comiskey park in 1933 and at the Polo grounds in 1934. . . . And not a word about the 80,000 who jammed Soldiers' field to see the College All-Stars play the Bears. . . . But there must be no point to them. . . . Some of the experts say so. . . . Ed Kawal, Bears' center who played 50 of the 60 minutes against Noble Kizer's All-Americans, is only 26 years old, although premature baldness makes him look 36. . . . Paul Keester, jocky sensation of the Lincoln Fields meeting, is taking on weight so rapidly he may not be able to ride after this season. . . . "When I go above riding weight I'll turn to boxing," Keester told a group of friends at the Crete track the other day as he displayed a set of boxing gloves which he has added to his athletic equipment. . . .

Ed Lewis, who will attempt to dethrone Jim Londos as heavyweight wrestling champion Sept. 20 at Wrigley field, wears long hose with a circular piece cut out at the calf which serves as a garter. . . . The Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, director of the Catholic Youth organization, has announced plans for a national boxing tournament in Chicago next winter. . . . It will climax the annual C. Y. Schoolboy Rowe of the Detroit Tigers often breaks 80 in golf and claims his best score was 73 on a par 72 course. . . . Max Marek, former Golden Gloves champion and now a halfback at Notre Dame, recently was carted off to the jailhouse, where he was quizzed as to whether or not he had served time in the Pontiac reformatory for first degree murder. . . . The cops eventually found out they had the wrong man. . . . Two other Golden Glovers have had similar experiences. . . . A couple of alert policemen arrested Leo Rodak in Benton Harbor a month or two ago, suspecting the while that they had Dillinger. . . . Six stalwarts from the sheriff's office in South Bend grabbed Joe Louis a few minutes before he was to step into the ring at Chicago Stadium last May to fight the light heavyweight champion of Poland. . . . They later learned the man they wanted was ten years older, several inches shorter, and had no resemblance to Louis except his color. . . .

While peddling his wares among the throng at Soldiers' field the night of the All-Star football game a beer salesman's bellows were almost drowned out by the yells of fans who wanted Grange, Rosenberg, Hewitt, or others in the battle. . . . Exasperated, the vendor finally shouted: "Never mind who wants who, who the hell wants beer?" . . .

Ten Years Ago Today.—Babe Ruth's 44th home run with a mate on base gave the Yanks a 2 to 0 victory over the Red Sox. . . . Abe Goldstein retained his bantamweight title by defeating Tommy Ryan in a dull fifteen round bout at New York. . . . Eddie Loos of the South Shore club took the lead in the Illinois professional tournament with a score of 144. . . . The American polo team was picked to defeat England in the international polo matches at New York. . . . Luis Firpo was a 6 to 5 favorite to beat Harry Wills.

New Orleans Papers Drop Racing Under Huey's Law

New Orleans, La., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—For the first time since the oldest inhabitant can remember, fifty cent and dollar betters were unable to bet on horse racing in New Orleans today. Those who bet two dollars and up said that they found some places where they could risk their money, but they were few and far between. As far as the public was concerned, there was no race horse betting.

An act shoved through the special session of the legislature by Senator Huey Long and effective today, makes the distribution of racing information or, any reference to any race unlawful and punishable by a fine of from $1 to $3,000 or imprisonment of one to three years, or both.

The General News bureau, which furnishes all race track information to the book makers here, officially discontinued operations.

Some Call on Betters.

Small hand book operators who had only one telephone over which they took the entries, scratches, jockies, prices and results, received no service, and were advised to stay closed.

Places which had two or three telephones were advised that they would get a mysterious call, but that this call would be official. So, by going in back doors, or by using the telephone, one could place a bet and get the results and prices. The hand book operators who took these bets this afternoon were calling at homes and places of business and paying off.

Not one New Orleans newspaper printed the words race horse. The Times-Picayune went so far as to not print the testimony before Senator Long's committee investigating the affairs of the city of New Orleans where hand books and horse racing were mentioned.

Wonder About Outside Papers.

The Daily Racng Form, which has been published here for years, moved its offices to Houston, Tex., where it will be issued in the future.

Memphis papers reaching here late this afternoon were sold out at all newsstands. There was even a rush to meet the trains to get the entries for tomorrow and whatever results had been published. There also was a big demand for Houston papers, which contained race track information.

New Orleans is waiting to see what action Senator Long will take regarding outside newspapers bringing in race track information into New Orleans. Of course, he cannot punish the outside newspapers, but it is claimed that he can punish those who distribute those newspapers here.

New Orleans newspapers claim that news dealers, newsboys and others who hand a person a newspaper containing race track information are subject to fine and imprisonment.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 7.—Let the Giants have their old pennant, but jot it down in your book that they'd be playing in the West Dixie league by now if they had to face Lon Warneke all season. The Arkansas master of the musical saw, abetted principally by Gabby Hartnett and Kiki Cuyler, whipped the Giants, 4 to 2, today, for his third victory over the champs in thirteen days and his sixth of the year.

It was the eleventh Cub victory of the year over the champions, thus assuring them at least an even break in the 1934 series with the New Yorkers.

The game had consoling elements other than mere victory, for the setback to the Giants was charged to the great Carl Hubbell, who disappeared from the scene shortly after Gabby Hartnett had broken a scoreless tie in the fifth by knocking his 19th homer with Riggs Stephenson on base. It was the fourth time the Cubs have beaten Carl in as many starts against his wizardry.

Cuyler Drives in Two Runs.

Both of the later runs essential to victory were driven in by Kiki Cuyler, Billy Herman doing the tallying in each instance. Johnny Salveson was the pitching victim during these productive onslaughts.

Warneke was not as airtight as he was when he pitched two three hit games against the Giants in Chicago last week, but this may be attributed to the fact that most of the contest was played in a drizzle. Even so, one of the Giants' runs was made on a fluke double which Manager Grimm would have grabbed had he not slipped in the mud. The other was started around on an infield scratch and was scored on a double play.

The victory did not serve to improve greatly the status of the Cubs in the National league standings. They are eight games behind the Giants and a game and a half behind the St. Louis Cardinals, who were idle.

The Giants started out as if they were going to make more hits in the first inning off Warneke than they did in the two games Lon pitched against them in Chicago last week. Moore led off with a line single to right, and, after Critz had filed to Stephenson, Terry singled to center. One of Warneke's pitches got past Hartnett, causing Moore to imagine he could reach third, but Gabby recovered the ball and threw to English in time to sink Moore. Terry reached second on the play. Ott supplied the third out.

Stainback Gets First Cub Hit.

Stainback singled to center with one down in the second for the first Chicago hit, but it came to naught when Hartnett hit into a double play.

Only nine batsmen faced each pitcher

ROSS, M'LARNIN FIGHT PUT OFF AGAIN BY RAIN

Set Title Bout Over Until Tonight.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 7.—Barney Ross and Jimmy McLarin, contender for Barney's welterweight championship, late today had their fight set over until tomorrow night at the Long Island bowl, a second postponement in as many days. Circumstances identical to those yesterday afternoon, a blanket of mist and fog sweeping in over the island from the bay and drizzling discouragingly on would-be ticket purchasers were responsible.

Thus, McLarnin and Ross went back to their gymnasiums tonight to offset the encroachments of weight, for they must weigh in again tomorrow at 1 o'clock to satisfy the ukase of the New York athletic commissioners.

The Last Postponement.

The imbroglio, rapidly losing the head of steam built by the promoters in the interest of a New York charity and the boxers themselves, reached the on-again-off-again stage this afternoon. At 3 o'clock weather forecasters described the evening as containing "probable showers." Gray low hanging clouds bore out that prediction. But despite this, the powers elected to put on the 15 round combat regardless of weather. Two hours later, when the drizzle had arrived, dampening the enthusiasm of those who held tickets and completely quenching the desire of others to attend, the men in control reversed themselves.

For the first time, New York now will have opportunity to attend a major fight on Saturday night, a night usually avoided by promoters who dare not risk competition from Broadway.

Further postponement, unless the weather becomes utterly impossible, is unlikely. In the first place, the Jewish New Year holidays begin at sundown Sunday evening. Ross will not fight during the period and it is inconceivable that the fight would be postponed until the latter part of next week.

Barney Works Out.

It is equally absurd to think that the promoters would sacrifice the $100,000 or so now in the cash boxes in refunds and in addition pay for the preliminary expense of building up this return match between Ross and McLarnin.

Ross worked out four rounds at Stillman's gymnasium at 7 o'clock, just a stone's throw from his headquarters at the Park Central hotel. He spent two sessions shadow boxing and as many more punching the light bag and skipping the rope.

McLarnin followed the same tactics at his gymnasium, further downtown. Of course, Ross does not fear weight, since he came in yesterday on the scales at 140 pounds, seven less than the welterweight limit, except in that he might be sluggish. McLarnin, who weighed an official 145¾ pounds, not only seeks to retain proper weight but he cannot exceed 147 pounds. There is no danger, however, that he will exceed the limit.

Ross is the loser in the preliminary bout with the weather even if he retains his championship when he faces McLarnin. Three months ago McLarnin, then champion, received 40 per cent, or about $55,000, of the net receipts, while Barney was given 25 per cent. Now the situation is reversed, but by no stretch of the imagination can one figure that Barney's share will be $50,000.

Ross Needs Dry Footing.

A re-match seldom grosses as much as the original presentation. The uncertainty of the time of the bout must work to his disadvantage, too. McLarnin also is a financial loser, but his loss will be less. Sam Pian and Art Winch, Ross' managers, however, regarded the postponements as an aid to Barney's title defense.

"Ross depends on speed. McLarnin hasn't the same speed as Ross and we expect him to use his right hand striving for a knockout," Winch said tonight. "Under unfavorable weather conditions, a heavy canvas, or with uncertain footing Barney might run into trouble he otherwise could avoid. We hope he does not have to fight in a drizzle of rain for McLarnin would have better chance for victory."

This attitude undoubtedly influenced the decision to make a second postponement for, after all, a champion's managers must be considered and Barney not only is the welterweight champion, but he will still be the lightweight champion even if McLarnin stretches him face down.

Ross Doesn't Mind.

Ross had nothing to say. He apparently wasn't bothered by the long drawn-out period of waiting. He seemed confident he could beat McLarnin and admitted the suspense was as bad for Jimmy as for himself. Nevertheless, it is a fact that those who wager on such events have shortened the odds to 6 to 5 on Ross to win by a decision. Yesterday he was 7 to 5.

NORTH SHORE NET FINAL SCHEDULED FOR TOMORROW

Singles and doubles finals in the North Shore Tennis league men's tournament will be played at the Skokie Country club tomorrow afternoon. The public is invited.

Al Winston of Indian Hill, who won the singles last year and paired with Ned Brown to capture the doubles, will be hard pressed to retain his crowns. Chief obstacle in his path is José Alonso, former Spanish Davis cup team captain, who now leads the Country club of Evanston squad. Another dangerous contender is Fletcher Seymour of Exmoor.

In doubles, the teams of Alonso and Dick Sternberg and of Seymour and Stanley Jacobs threaten to depose Winston and Brown as champions. Sternberg represents the Evanston Tennis club while Jacobs hails from the Country Club of Evanston.

Londos Has a Bag of Tricks for Training

watch, Londos takes on all of his colleagues in turn. There is the lithe young Bobby Burns, the durable Hans Bauer, the 230 pound Lou Plummer, and the versatile Dick Raines, who has met up with Lewis several times.

And now, if you little men think you have had a busy day, just get along to the showers and another rubdown. Yes, you are going to have dinner, a very discreetly prepared one, to be sure, but still dinner. You will eat it and like it, and then await His Majesty's pleasure for the early evening. He is liable to take himself one of the local charges and go trotting up the neighboring lanes, or he might satisfy his craving for fish by taking to the water, first for a swim, and then for a string of bass.

Ah, Ha! Einstein!

Finally, with darkness fallen, the entire cast is assembled about the Renehan hearth playing cards or reading. The champion prefers the latter just before retiring. What is that book James is reading, you ask? No, it is not the Rover Boys in Madison Square Garden. It is "Easy Lessons in Einstein," by Edwin S. Slosson.

LEWIS STRESSES DEFENSE

An impersonation of Jim Londos by Lou Talaber distinguished the training session of Ed [Strangler] Lewis at Trafton's gymnasium yesterday afternoon and gave the several hundred spectators an idea of what Lewis would do to block the attack of the wrestling champion at Wrigley field on Sept. 20.

Talaber, former middleweight champion, used the Londos tactics and Lewis had a good workout in developing blocks and counter-attacks against arm and legs holds.

The challenger's handlers announced after the workout that Lewis' weight had been decreasing at the rate of about three pounds daily since he began his strenuous routine last Tuesday, and by the day of THE TRIBUNE's show at Wrigley field he would be down to 230 pounds.

Ed Gets Rough.

Pete Schuh was again the object of a vicious attack by Lewis yesterday after another bump by Pete's head had angered the big fellow. For at least five minutes of their workout Schuh was on the receiving end of rough treatment. Chief Trainer Talaber encouraged this, however, and instructed all the training mates to give the Strangler everything they have in the way of roughness.

Zack Malkov, who weighs about 185 pounds, gave the ringside fans a thrill as he tussled and tugged with the big fellow and then escaped from a headlock. The trick also brought him congratulations from Lewis along with an offer of a $5 bonus if he could do it again. Zack took plenty of chances thereafter, but could never rate the addition to his pay envelope.

Lewis demanded speed from all his mates yesterday and will have Talaber, Malkov, and Thor Stockholm to take care of this angle. Marin Plestina, who has been out of the city for several days, will rejoin the camp this afternoon and other big men are scheduled to join up next week so that the challenger will be able to get in a couple of hours' continuous work each afternoon.

No Rest for Late Sleepers.

The Strangler insists that each member of his retinue, including Talaber, join him in early morning road work and to this group of late sleepers a 6 o'clock call at a refined method of punishment they do not relish. To hear them tell it Lewis will have run them all into the ground long before the Wrigley field match.

Interest in the match is increasing rapidly if the attendance at Trafton's gymnasium for the training sessions is any indication. Mat fans are appearing in increasing numbers each afternoon.

The general impression among men familiar with the conditioning of athletes is that Lewis is rapidly approaching his peak. The vicious manner in which he tears into his training mates and the general irritability that he displays indicate he is ready or will be within a few days to climb into the ring for his attempt to claim the heavyweight mat toga for the seventh time in 18 years.

Sopwith's Yacht at Disadvantage, Londoners Hear

PORTSMOUTH, England, Sept. 7.—A statement appearing in a London newspaper from a correspondent at Newport that Harold S. Vanderbilt's Rainbow was nothing more or less than a racing machine with rough board partitions instead of cabins proper caused unfavorable comment in British yachting circles today. The comment is on the ground that this feature of the America's Cup defender's construction seems to be a departure from the structural conditions laid down for the competing yachts.

In support of this view, it is pointed out that while designers are allowed a weight of seven and one-half tons, distributed as seemed best over the hull, the implied agreement at least provides that both the Defender and Challenger should be properly fitted below decks. Thus one would have no advantage over the other in this respect. Endeavour is so fitted, it was pointed out.

British yachtsmen now are waiting to learn how W. Starling Burgess, designer of Rainbow, used the seven and one-half tons' latitude allowed, whether the weight saved by Rainbow's alleged meager cabins have been used elsewhere, and why up to the present there has been no information received here on this point. If no such information is received the impression will be left in Britain that Rainbow's designer "has not quite played the game."

It would be unfortunate if such an opinion were allowed to grow. A simple explanation that the sketchy cabins are not meant as a surprise device to give Rainbow an unfair advantage is all that is needed to eliminate surpicion.

British yachtsmen are not disposed to be captious, but feel that it would be a real misfortune if the splendid atmosphere of mutual good will that so far has marked everything connected with the forthcoming cup races is marred by any thought of unfairness.

On this score it is fair to say that nothing has come from T. O. M. Sopwith, owner-skipper of Endeavour, or anybody associated with him, giving the slightest hint that he had found anything to complain of.

ENDEAVOUR ON TRIAL SPIN.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—The British challenger Endeavour, with T. O. M. Sopwith at the helm, was out for a trial spin late this afternoon. Gerard P. Lambert's Vanitie kept Endeavour company.

The rain early in the day kept the cup yachts close to their moorings until well into the middle of the afternoon, when the word was passed to get under way and the two sloops were soon on their way out of the bay under a fair breeze.

Vita, the yacht which accompanied Endeavour across the Atlantic, still later in the day left for Bristol, where Rainbow, the defender, was being painted.

MAY DOEG WINS IN U. S. DOUBLES TENNIS PLAY

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 7.—(AP)—May Hope Doeg of Santa Monica, Cal., bidding for two national girls' tennis titles, today reached the finals of the doubles with her California partner, Priscilla Merwin. Tomorrow she plays in the singles final.

The Pacific coast pair conquered Ariel Stout of Seattle, Wash., and Virginia Hollinger, Dayton, O., 6-2, 6-3.

This Miss Doeg must engage in two matches tomorrow. In the singles final she meet Helen Pederson of Stamford, Conn., for the title won last year by Bonnie Miller of Los Angeles.

Then with Miss Merwin she meets the winner of the semi-final match between the New York-Michigan combination of Millicent Hirsch and Helen Grawn, and the local team, comprised of Frances Bancroft, Wilmington, Del., and Mathilda Fassitt, Philadelphia.

Davis, of Oak Park, the retiring and incoming president of the association.

Mrs. Lee W. Mida, of Lincolnshire and Miss Janet Willard of Exmoor tied with identical rounds of 43—44—87 for low gross. Mrs. Mida won the draw, and Miss Willard was awarded low net with 87—4—83 for the first flight.

MORE TEAMS FILE ENTRIES IN C. Y. O. BASEBALL EVENT

Entries received late yesterday from Louisville, Ky., and York, Neb., swelled the list of amateur baseball teams which will compete in the second national Catholic Youth organization baseball tournament to ten. Louisville will send two title winning nines into the national meet, which opens at Wrigley field Wednesday morning, while York is entering an all-star aggregation composed of the outstanding players in its section of Nebraska.

Dubuque, Ia.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Aurora, Ill.; Janesville, Wis., and Detroit, Mich., filed their entries earlier in the week, making eight out of town nines which will vie with the two semi-finalists in the Chicago C. Y. O. title chase for the 1934 national amateur crown. The entry deadline has been set for tonight. Thirteen teams in all are expected to compete at Wrigley field.

St. Elizabeth and the Bertrand club will carry the hopes of northern Kentucky to capture the Cardinal Mundelein trophy, emblematic of national supremacy in C. Y. O. baseball circles. St. Elizabeth won the western divisional championship of the Louisville parish league, while the Bertrand club won the crown in the eastern circuit. Coba City, champion of the central division, was defeated by St. Elizabeth in a playoff series, leaving the Bertrand club and St. Elizabeth as entrants in the Chicago tournament.

MALKOV, KENNEDY MEET TONIGHT AT WORLD'S FAIR

Zack Malkov will wrestle Jack Kennedy, of Arizona, in the 30 minute main bout tonight at A Century of Progress. Matchmaker Fred Kohler will meet Frankie Hart. Ralph Garibaldi and Stanley West are matched in a third bout. Mike London faces Les Fischbaugh in the fourth bout.

Rain Cancels Final Card of Indiana Fair Races

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—The final day of the Grand Circuit harness program at the Indiana state fair was canceled today because of rain.

Keith Molesworth Returns to Play in Bears' Lineup

Keith Molesworth, back field ace of the Chicago Bears, joined the squad for practice yesterday. Molesworth wasn't expected so soon, but the Baltimore baseball club permitted him to leave.

Molesworth is in perfect physical condition and may see action tomorrow against the Chicago Tigers at Normal park, 61st street and Racine avenue, in a half back position.

He has entirely recovered from an eye ailment that bothered him some this summer and is five pounds heavier than when he weighed out at the end of last season.

Chris O'Brien, Tigers' manager, signed Steve Banas, former Notre Dame full back, to play against the National league champions, although his starting back field lists four men who played at De Paul university, Flood, Jablonski, Statler, and Hartman.

Banas performed against the Bears Thursday night at Indiana Harbor, as did Hills, a giant tackle who played at Illinois and who is slated to start on the left side of the line tomorrow.

CARDINALS ALTER CARD

Charles W. Bidwill, owner of the revamped Chicago Cardinals announced last night that the opening game of the National Professional Football league between the Red Birds and Cincinnati, Sept. 23, scheduled to be played here has been transferred to Dayton, O.

The switch is due to the fact that Wrigley field, the Cardinal's home grounds, along with the larger semi-pro baseball parks will not be available on that date. The Cubs' field will not be turned over to football until after the close of the baseball season.

Despite the transferring of the opening league game with the Cincinnati eleven, Chicago professional football fans will have an opportunity of seeing the new Cardinals in action twice in non-league games.

The Red Birds are booked to tackle the Chicago Tigers, Chris O'Brien's strong aggregation, at Normal Park, Sunday, Sept. 16. Two days later they travel to Maywood to play the Maywood A. C.

Tomorrow afternoon at the Loyola stadium the Cardinal veterans led by Capt. Lou Gordon will play a regulation game against the all star collegian members of the Red Birds, including Paul Pardonner, Mike Mikulak, Bill Smith, Fred Canrinus, Pete Mehringer, and others.

The kick off will be at 2 p. m. and admission is free.

Budge Defeats Grant in Net Singles Play

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—Donald Budge, Oakland, Cal., and Bryan Grant, Atlanta, Ga., today engaged in a hard five set match in the third round of the men's national singles tennis tournament before the California star triumphed, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-8, 6-3.

Budge's steady backhand stroking enabled him to defeat the southerner, ranked No. 7 nationally. The winner's service also counted heavily in his favor, scoring several service aces. The match was halted yesterday by rain when sets were two each.

Menzel Beats Mangin.

Roderich Menzel, Czechoslovakian star, whipped Gregory Mangin, once indoor champion, 8-6, 4-6, 3-6, 8-6, 6-3. Menzel had to come from behind and won four consecutive games to make a 5-3 lead in the fourth set. They battled along until Menzel broke Mangin's service to capture the 14th game at love. Menzel then pounded along in the deciding set to finally beat his nearly spent opponent. This match also was brought forward from yesterday.

Lester Stoefen, Los Angeles, and Sidney B. Wood Jr., New York, carried through to the quarter-final round, defeating John Van Ryn, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4, and Marcel Rainville, 6-1, 6-4, 6-4, respectively.

Rain again interrupted the proceedings, this time when Fred Perry, British champion, and Edward Feibleman, former Harvard ace, were taking the count for a fourth round meeting.

Play Is Resumed.

Play continued a short time later and Frank Shields defeated Robert Bryan, Signal Mountain, Tenn., 9-7, 3-6, 2-6, 6-2, 6-2. Perry won from Feibleman, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2, and Wilmer Allison beat John McDiarmid, 3-6, 6-2, 10-8, 7-5, in the fourth round.

CHICAGO YACHT CLUB'S SLOOPS TO RACE TODAY

The third race of the Chicago Yacht club's C series for R, Eagle, and Pup class sloops is to be held today at 2:15 p. m., off Belmont harbor. Gossoon II., Mal Vail and Sterling Morton's R boat, will revive its rivalry with Gypsy, Fred Wacker's R. These champions will be the leaders among the R class, it is expected.

At the Sheridan Shore Yacht club, one-design Stars are to do battle starting at 3 p. m., off Wilmette. The winners in this fleet are more numerous. With the two champions away, Neo and Gemini, the runnersup will have a close race among themselves. Sheridan Shore yachtsmen will also compete tomorrow when the second race of the Blue series is held at 3 p. m.

The fourth and final race for the Faurot trophy, sponsored by the Chicago Yacht club, will be run off today at 3:15 p. m.

For novelty the most interesting yacht race over the week-end promises to be the open regatta for lady skippers at the Jackson Park Yacht club. Yachtsmen owners of racing and cruising windjammers are to be under the command of wives and sweethearts on their own yachts.

DUNLAP SHOOTS TRIAL ROUND OF 69 AT BROOKLINE

Brookline, Mass., Sept. 7.—(AP)—George T. Dunlap Jr. of New York, the defending titleholder, stole the show in the fourth day of practice for the national amateur golf championship, which starts at the Country club here Monday, when he toured the historic course in 69, two under par, while playing in a fivesome late today.

Prescott S. Bush, vice president of the U. S. G. A. and chairman of the championship committee conducting the tournament, announced that the draw had been made by the officials this afternoon. The draw will not be released, however, until tomorrow.

Bush explained that the draw has been made in two parts. The complete setup for first round matches, of which there will be 60 on Monday, will be revealed tomorrow. The remainder of the draw, including the names of the 68 players who drew byes as well as the open berths for each of Monday's 60 survivors, will be released Sunday afternoon.

SOLLY DUKELSKY IS STOPPED BY LOU BROUILLARD

Referee Ends Match in Seventh Round.

Lou Brouillard, Worcester, Mass., southpaw, continued his march toward a second middleweight title bout at the expense of Solly Dukelsky, of Chicago, at Mills stadium last night.

He was awarded the match on a technical knockout after 44 seconds of fighting in the seventh round. Dukelsky, who had absorbed a number of hard punches in the previous rounds without any harmful effects, was hit with a left hook to the jaw at the start of the seventh round. Solly never recovered from the blow and when he appeared helpless on the ropes the referee, Tommy Thomas, stopped the bout.

2,313 See Bout.

Brouillard, a former welterweight and middleweight champion, weighed 160¾, three-quarters of a pound more than Dukelsky. A crowd of 2,313 paid $2,826 gross to see the battle.

Haydon [Young] Stuhley, of Kewanee, Ill., scored a technical knockout victory over Frankie Misko, of Saginaw, Mich., in the sixth round of the semi-windup. Stuhley knocked Misko down in the third, floored him three times in the fifth with short rights to the jaw, and dropped him a fifth time early in the sixth.

Eddie Vik of Cicero, knocked out Jack Matthews, Chicago, in the opening round of a scheduled six rounder. Battling Gizzy, Pittsburgh, Pa., defeated Tommy Corbett, Omaha, Neb., in 3 rounds. Billy Miller, Milwaukee, Wis., stopped Jimmy King, Cleveland, O., in the fourth round.

Dukelsky Starts Strong.

When the Brouillard-Dukelsky fight got under way it appeared that Solly would make another of the good fights he has in recent months. Brouillard landed a hard low left to the stomach and was warned by the referee. Then Dukelsky opened an old cut over his opponent's left eye. This irritated Brouillard and he threw Solly to the canvas. The rough work and low blow gave Dukelsky the round.

But from then on it was all Brouillard. He slammed lefts and rights into Solly's body and then brought them up to the head. These punches weakened Dukelsky, but he was methodical and aggressive as ever and refused to back up. He landed several punishing rights to the jaw in the sixth.

Mickey Beal, Chicago 118 pound fighter, and Jimmy Fox, Indianapolis, Ind., were matched yesterday for a six rounder on the card headed by an eight round bout between Billy Celebron and Bob La Monte at Western stadium Tuesday. Bill Treest, St. Charles light heavyweight, and K. O. White meet at four rounds. Another at this distance brings together Rocky Davis and Nestor Bruggman.

ATHLETICS TAKE TWO GAMES FROM TIGERS, EACH 5-4

Jimmy Foxx Knocks His 41st Home Run.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Aided by Jimmie Foxx's 41st home run of the season and Bob Johnson's 30th, the Philadelphia Athletics defeated the league leading Tigers in both games of a double-header today. Both scores were 5 to 4.

It was the first time this season Detroit had lost both games of a bargain bill but the damage to the Tigers' pennant chances was slight. As the second place Yankees lost to Chicago, they gained only a half game, remaining five behind Detroit.

Hartnett Hits Homer to Help Cubs Win, 4-2

in the second, third and fourth innings. Then the Cubs pushed off with the aforesaid heroics. Stephenson dropped a Texas leaguer in short left for the second hit off Hubbell to start the fifth and moved up on Stainback's sacrifice. Hartnett then parked one of Hubbell's high outside pitches half way up in the lower right field stand, scoring behind Stephenson. Grimm and Jurges supplied infield outs.

With rain falling in the latter half of the fifth, Manager Terry took Hubbell out of the game for a pinch batter in a bid for a tie score. With one out, Leiber was safe on Jurges' fumble and stopped at second on Danning's single to left. The pair moved up on Verges's sacrifice. Then O'Doul batted for Hubbell and fouled to Hartnett.

Cubs Get Another Run.

The Cubs added a run off Salveson in the sixth on successive singles by Billy Herman, English, and Cuyler. Moore got credit for a double at the start of the home sixth when Grimm slipped and sat on the seat of his bloomers just as he was about to seize the ball. Critz followed with a single to right which scored Moore. Terry flied to Stephenson and Ott fanned. Jackson also whiffed.

The Giants grabbed their second run in the seventh. Leiber beat out a slow roller toward third and went to third on Danning's single past first. He scored while Danning and Vergez were going down in a double play. Salveson flied to Stainback.

Billy Herman walked to start the eighth. Hack batted for English and sacrificed. Cuyler then drove out his second run producing single, a smash to left center which again scored Billy Herman. Stephenson tapped to Salveson and Jackson threw out Stainback.

Giants' Hits Wasted.

Critz singled through the box with one out in the home eighth and stopped at second on Terry's single over second. Ott grounded out to Grimm on a close play, the Cub boss having to dive into the bag hands forward to make the putout. Jackson walked, filling the bases. Leiber popped to Billy Herman.

WEAVER VS. FITZSIMMONS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 7.—Jim Weaver and Freddy Fitzsimmons are scheduled to face each other tomorrow in the season final between the Cubs and Giants.

The Cubs will try to catch an early train for Boston after tomorrow's game. They will play a double-header against the Braves on Sunday. Monday's scheduled game having been moved up.

About an hour of sunshine right after noon teased out a fair sized ladies' day crowd to the Polo Grounds today. But the skies were heavily overcast as the game got under way. Humidity had the players as wet as though they had been playing all morning in the rain.

The game here was the only National league contest. So spaces on the scoreboard were filled in with American league games in Chicago and Detroit.

Today's victory was Warneke's twentieth of the year and his third over Hubbell this season.

Minneapolis will receive cash and in addition a pair of players, one of whom is expected to be Dutch Holland, now playing with the Toledo Mud Hens. Wright is pounding the ball at a .360 clip this season and is fourth in the league batting averages.

In the Wake of the News

EARLIER CHICAGO.

DEAR WAKE: In the days of the other World's Fair, in September, 1893, a great football game was played at night in the old Live Stock pavilion at the Fair grounds between the Chicago Athletic association team, captained by Lawrence Heyworth, and the West Point cadets.

The Live Stock pavilion, a great oval shaped building, had a dirt floor and no roof, consisting of a complete oval of arches and a second row superimposed on the heavier set of arches. The electric lights were terrible, being a faint red and hardly visible when the players started kicking up the dust.

Harry Cornish, trainer and athletic director, played quarter back for the C. A. A., with Heyworth one of the backs. Near the end of the game, when the ball was fumbled near the Army goal, a West Pointer named Duncan picked up the loose oval and in the darkened shadows of the field ran the entire length of the gridiron for a touchdown and victory. Any one who remembers this game will have to admit he is no spring chicken.

In 1891 the Briggs house was located at the northwest corner of Randolph and Wells. Directly opposite was located the furniture and office fixture concern known as Alexander H. Revell & Co. Between Randolph and Washington on Wells street the pedestrian passed the offices occupied by the Chicago Times, Mail, Freie Presse, Staats Zeitung, and Abendpost, newspapers, and by other concerns more or less connected with the printing and publishing trade.

Immediately south of Washington, on the east side of Wells, still stands the building which contained offices of the Arbeiter Zeitung. There, it was claimed, was hatched the conspiracy which culminated in the Haymarket affair, where Spies was arrested, and where, the story goes, great quantities of bombs and infernal machines were found.

Back in the old days, when the Olympic was a 10-20-30 house, George Thatcher told the story to his audiences which has been going the rounds ever since. He visited, according to his yarn, the Kankakee insane asylum. Upon his departure he saw a wild-eyed inmate following him. George began to run. So did the inmate. Faster and faster they went, with all the embellishments of terror added by Thatcher in telling his tale. Finally he fell exhausted, whereupon the wild-eyed inmate pounced upon him, saying: "Tag, you're it."

Tête-à-Tête.

We did not seek for it was fate
That I picked your cheek.
Remember that evening where we met upon the stairs?
It was our week in June,
A dream it seemed, ended too soon.
We bartered thoughts, and secrets behind our eyes
That once dwelt in solitude, came forth in freshened nude and dreams were realized.
A sort of heaviness was lifted and 'round us feelings of freedom sifted;
And rock roads of morn which seemed
we had to climb
Turned to pebbled paths at twilight we did find.
Then far off things returned and the gray of yesterday
Faded away into the open blue.
And we together melted a friendship
new.
For flesh is only Spring to Autumn
And love relives the years
When the sun dial wends a new found friend
And undertakings two are tied together through
Our week in June—you understanding me—my understanding you.

CUYLER REPLACES OTT ON BIG SIX BATTING ROSTER

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Kiki Cuyler of Chicago's Cubs slipped into the Big Six yesterday in place of Mel Ott of the Giants, while Lou Gehrig moved up to threaten Paul Waner's hold on the lead. Ott was the only Big Six member who failed to hit and he dropped well behind Cuyler, who lifted his average a point to .341 with two hits in four times up. Gehrig had two hits, including his 43d homer, in two official times up, hoisting his mark two points to .365 and trailing the idle Waner by just one. Heinie Manush registered the day's big rise when he hit five times in ten attempts in a double-header and added three points to his mark. The standing:

PATRONI SHOOTS 69; TAKES LEAD AT GLENS FALLS

Glens Falls, N. Y., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Duplicating his 69 of the previous day, Jack Patroni, New Rochelle, today paced a field of 111 through the second round of the sixth annual Glens Falls open golf tournament.

Patroni nosed out Ky Laffoon, Denver, and Willie Macfarlane, former national open champion, by a single stroke for the lead at 36 holes. His total of 138 was four under par.

Laffoon, who shared the lead at the end of the first round yesterday with Clarence Clark of Bloomfield, N. J., at 68, had to bag a birdie two on the home green for a par 71 to tie for second place with Macfarlane, who added a 69 to his 70 of yesterday.

Clark required a 73 today for a total 141, good for a tie with H. G. Picard of Charleston, S. C., in eighth place. Picard had rounds of 72 and 69.

American Giants to Play in Negro World Series Today

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—The American Giants of Chicago were here today awaiting the opening of the world series of colored baseball tomorrow. Opponents of the American Giants are the Philadelphia Stars, winners of the second half championship of the Negro National league. The Chicago team took the first half title.

Sox Defeat Yankees, 6-5, in 9th Inning

out. The Babe singled in the fourth to help hurry Tietje's dismissal. The younger Lou Gehrig was a bit more boisterous in his activities. He produced the first of the four runs off Tietje by hammering homer No. 42 into the seats. Later he drew three passes and beat out one bunt, but only one of the free tickets grew into a run.

The Sox started off with a one run lead in the first inning because of a charitable urge on the part of Deshong. Swanson led off with a bunt which wasn't handled speedily enough to keep him from beating it out for a hit. Conlan sacrificed and Simmons popped to Gehrig. Then Deshong began to give out presents. He walked Bonura and Appling, filling the bases. Dykes also was awarded free passage, forcing Swanson to score. The gayety was halted when Hopkins bounced to Rolfe.

Tietje's one run lead was short lived. He was an excellent performer in the first inning when he fanned two men, Crosetti and Ruth, but he didn't display the same skill in the second when pitching to Gehrig. It was here that the burly Yankee rang up home run No. 43, which drifted into the right field seats.

Ruth Starts Trouble.

Ruth lined a single to center to open the fourth and this brought on a two run blast. Being slightly fearful of Gehrig's power, Tietje walked the big fellow. Chapman fanned and when Lazzeri flied deep to Conlan, it appeared as if nothing much would happen. But Selkirk drew a pass filling the bags and Jorgens stepped in with a single to right, scoring Ruth and Gehrig. Another run scored in the fifth on a single by Rolfe, a pass to Gehrig and a single by Chapman.

After their profitable first inning the Sox had to wait quite a while before encountering anything that resembled a chance to score. They got one man to base in the second on a single by Shea and one in the fourth on a single by Bonura, who was nipped trying to stretch the drive into a double. Then in the fifth they really had a pair of runners on base, but Deshong did not need much time to clean up this situation. With one out Swanson survived on a fumble by Crosetti and Conlan walked. A fly by Simmons and one by Bonura stopped the rally.

Sox Regain Lead.

The Sox burned up much time and energy in their half of the sixth, but all they had to show for it at the finish was a lone run. Appling led off with a single to left for the fourth hit off De Shong. Dykes walked. Hopkins sent a fly to center and Appling scooted to third after the catch. Shea also filed to center and Appling scored.

Conlan singled to center to start the rumpus that netted three runs and put the Sox in front by 5 to 4 in the seventh. Simmons broke out of his slump long enough to assist with a single on which Conlan took third. A pass to Bonura loaded the bases and there was no further need of De Shong's service. Murphy walked into the vacancy and Appling bit the right field wall safely, but enjoyed only a single because of Simmons' slow start from second. Conlan scored on the hit. Dykes bounced into a double play on which Simmons scored. Bonura went home on a single past third by Hopkins.

The Sox held their slim lead only until the Yanks could take a few swipes at Heving in the eighth. Having invited trouble by walking Selkirk, Jorgens looked at a third strike. Saltzgaver batted for Murphy and responded with a single to center. Selkirk taking third. Crosetti also fanned, but Rolfe spanked a single to right to score Selkirk with the tying run.

Earnshaw Seeks Yank Victory and $500 Bonus Today

George Earnshaw will start for the Sox against the Yankees in the final of the series today. The big boy hopes to collect another $500, his third under the bonus system which rewards him for every victory over 10. The Yank starter probably will be Johnny Broaca.

Although Al Simmons contributed a valuable hit yesterday, his batting slump still is going strong. He now has made two hits in his last 23 times at bat.

Italian-Americans will turn out today to honor Zeke Bonura. They are going to present him with a Studebaker automobile and various other things.

The Sox announced the purchase yesterday of Pitcher John Michaels from the Rochester, N. Y., farm of the Cardinals' chain store system. He's a left hander who has won 16 while losing 8 this season. Michaels had a trial with the Boston Red Sox.

Rip Radcliffe, the outfielder purchased by the Sox from Louisville, will report on the 15th and probably will be moved into right field immediately.

153 STATEVILLE FOOTBALL STARS BEGIN PRACTICE

Joliet, Ill., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—One hundred and fifty-three candidates reported to Stateville football coaches today. With 16 letter men back the "Transgressors" expect to have a strong team with which to face elevens from Springfield, Chicago, and other Illinois cities.

The "Transgressors" would like to play the Sing Sing Blacksheep, but there is a little matter of statutes which would prevent the Illinois convicts from making a road trip. If the Sing Sings can come here, it is all right with Warden Frank D. Whipp.

At the insistence of younger candidates, a three year rule is to be adopted. Otherwise some players would remain on the team until old age forced them to retire. James Slocum, Chicago con man, a brilliant broken field runner, and Edward Jaeson, Negro, who played with a west coast pro team until he took up manslaughter at Chicago, are the two back field stars back from the 1933 squad.

EARLE COMBS TO LEAVE HOSPITAL IN A FEW DAYS

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Earle Combs, veteran outfielder of the New York Yankees, who has been in St. John's hospital here for two months, may be released next week.

Combs suffered a skull fracture and a broken collar bone when he ran against the center field wall at Sportsman's park while chasing a fly ball. In a critical condition for some time following the accident, he rallied, and his condition is now such that hospital attachés say he may be able to leave the hospital Monday or Tuesday for his home at Richmond, Ky.

Combs recently predicted he would be able to play next season.

Walter Johnson Lifts Suspension of Hildebrand

Cleveland, O., Sept. 7.—(AP)—The indefinite suspension of Pitcher Oral Hildebrand of the Cleveland Indians was lifted today after he had conferred with Manager Walter Johnson. Hildebrand was suspended two days ago when he and Johnson engaged in an argument when the pitcher said a leg injury had not healed sufficiently to permit him to work.

44 Softball Teams Start Tourney Today

The first annual national tournament, under the auspices of the Amateur Softball Association of America, will start today at Lincoln park. Teams representing 25 states and Canada will seek the title. Play will continue until Monday, when the finals will be held in the men's and women's divisions.

Eighteen games will be played today, starting at 12:45 o'clock, on four diamonds of the north side park. Second round and quarter-final round contests will be held Sunday morning starting at 10 o'clock. The semi-finals are scheduled Monday morning and the finals in the afternoon. Forty-four teams are in the field.

KEESTER WINS 3 MORE; IN MONEY IN LAST 13 RACES

Continues Brilliant Riding at Lincoln Fields.

BY FRENCH LANE.

In his last thirteen rides at Lincoln Fields Jocky Paul Keester has not been out of the money.

He thrilled a big week day crowd again yesterday when he galloped home on three winners, was second twice and third in his only other effort. He had ridden in seven races the day before with three winners, two seconds and two thirds.

When he rushed Interior up from behind to win the last race yesterday it was his 14th victory since the Lincoln Fields season opened last Monday. In addition to these victories he has finished second seven times, third on five other trips around the track and has been out of the money in seven other engagements.

May Overtake Taylor.

This is the most sensational riding in many seasons in America. With nearly four months of 1934 still to go Keester, in his present form, can easily finish on top of the American jocky list for the year. Dublin Taylor, the present leader, tops Keester by less than 30 winning rides. Keester has gained steadily on Taylor during the last three weeks.

The track was so heavy and holding and the fields were so small that yesterday's program could muster but little interest except when Jocky Keester climbed into the saddle to do some riding. He gave his backers a flying start when he galloped Kwamudi up from behind to win the decision by a neck in the first race from the long shot, Carnelian. A bit of sleepy riding on the part of Jocky V. Gruber, who was on Carnelian, made possible Keester's victory. Kwamudi, hailing from Tom Taggart's French Lick Springs stable, paid off at nearly 3 to 1.

Keester didn't ride in the second race, but in the third he finished third on Grey Pal. He had this son of Prince Pal in the heavier part of the track most of the way and didn't appear to be able to get him out into better footing.

Keester Backers Profit.

In the fourth race Keester finished second on the favorite, Cloido. Polvos Pride, owned by W. J. Potter Jr. of Mobile, jumped into an early lead to make the pace for the entire trip. The fifth race developed into one of those Keester joy rides. He was in the saddle on Noelwood and the son of Noel raced far out in front all the way and finally won by four lengths.

Keester was second in the sixth race on the stoutly backed Noah's Pride. Pre-War, a son of Man o' War, won the race, with a $39.66 tag on the two dollar mutuel tickets.

In the last race Keester won on Interior, owned by Mrs. Tom Marshall of Chicago.

Delay Clash of 2 Year Olds.

The battle of the western 2 year old leaders, Advantage from Ald. Coughlin's barn of Chicago and Debs Delight from the stable of Charles T. Fisher of Detroit, has been delayed for at least a week.

They were to come together in the Balmoral purse this afternoon, but because the track has been muddy and holding all week both colts missed important workouts. Their trainers hesitated about putting them in the overnight entries.

"Don't think for a minute that I am worried about Advantage being able to beat this upstart from Detroit," Ald. Coughlin said yesterday. "To me Advantage shapes up as the best thing of the whole season."

CLOSED BANKS TURNING ASSETS OVER TO THE RFC

Get Quick Loans; Tie Up Final Payments.

The future course of state bank receiverships in Illinois is pointed unmistakably toward eventual control of practically all remaining assets by the federal government through the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Assets of $28,881,487 book value have been pledged with the RFC for sixty-six completed loans and twenty-four more are expected to be closed in the next two weeks by W. L. O'Connell, receiver for most of the closed state banks. Many millions more will be put up as collateral for the steadily increasing stream of advances being sought to quiet depositors clamoring for payment.

More and more the tendency on the receiver's part is to toss an increasing amount of remaining assets—possibly all of them—on the counter and ask for an offer from the RFC. This agency, it is shown, has displayed little tendency to be overly generous or a rash spendthrift, insofar as its valuation of these assets is concerned.

Loan to Be Paid First.

It does convert slow and frozen holdings into dividend cash in the few weeks or months necessary to put through the papers. At the same time, it locks up the pledged securities and, through a lien on the remainder, cuts off any further dividends until the loan and interest are paid off. It also was expected to reduce receivership expenses.

For the most part the receiverships will be "naked trusts," with assets held in Washington. They will take offers on holdings and for settlement of notes and transmit them to the RFC for approval before any deal may be closed. The only exception to such procedure will be on unpledged collateral.

In the unpledged collateral exists the one loophole through which grasping attorneys and receivers may operate. Receipts from these holdings may be used for receivership expenses, but may not go for dividend payments until the RFC obligation has been satisfied.

Indicates What Will Be Paid.

The receiver's appraisal of the pledged assets, together with the amount of the loans granted, will furnish depositors a rough estimate of what they may expect to realize on their frozen cash. Book values of closed bank holdings are generally conceded to be something of a joke, but how much they are inflated has been an unanswered question.

The RFC has been willing to pay just 36 cents on the dollar for the assets in the 90 Illinois applications for which figures are available at O'Connell's office. It has approved, or is to approve, loans for $10,397,668 on assets carried on closed bank books at $28,881,487. The receiver, however, estimates these same assets as worth 68.4 cents on the dollar, or $19,735,321.

Somewhere between these two valuations is the amount that depositors may expect to obtain out of the money they still have tied up. Even if the receiver's valuation is correct, deductions must be made for interest payments and other expenses.

Less Liberal in Cook County.

In the twenty Cook county cases the RFC has been even less liberal. Its approvals amount to $4,652,360 on book value assets of $15,188,989—30.6 cents on the dollar. The O'Connell approval is $9,917,429, or 65.3 cents on the dollar.

To date closed state banks in Cook county have paid approximately 15 cents on the dollar on deposit liabilities of 150 millions. Some 183 millions are still carried on the books as assets against deposit liabilities of 123 millions (June 30 figures) and loans of 9 millions.

If the liquidation could obtain at the RFC rate of 30.6 per cent 56 millions would be realized. After payment of present loans this would net 47 million for depositors, or 36.7 cents on each dollar now outstanding.

Other Net 86 Cents on Dollar.

Taking the receiver's estimate would net 110 millions, or slightly more than 86 cents on the dollar. However, interest and other expense will gnaw big holes in present appraisals, and any expectation of such a return is believed beyond reason.

Remaining assets are no better than those already offered to the RFC Many of them are much worse—what receivers like to call "cats and dogs." Observers hold that depositors will be fortunate to benefit appreciably more than the rate of RFC loan write downs to date.

Added to the dividends already paid this should bring eventual repayment totals to about 70 millions, or 46 per cent on the 150 millions on deposit when the banks failed.

The accompanying table gives the figures in RFC loans to Cook county's closed state banks and those contemplated.

Borrower, Not Bank, Tight, Jones Admits

BY HOWARD WOOD.

For months on end the New Dealers and the bankers have been engaged in an argument which will go down in history with the time honored debate over which came first—the chicken or the egg.

JESSE H. JONES.

The New Dealers have insisted that the bankers could make more sound loans if they would and that the bankers have refused to make perfectly good loans just to put the monkey wrench in the New Dealers' program for business recovery.

The bankers have insisted with equal vehemence that they are making every sound loan that they get a chance to make and that the failure of bank loans to increase has been due not to the reluctance of bankers to lend but t.. the unwillingness of good borrowers to apply for loans. You can lead a good customer to the bank but you can't make him borrow if he doesn't want to.

One of the orators on the New Deal side of this debate was Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance corporation. Last February 11, an address before the New York State Bankers association, Mr. Jones said:

"If the banker fails to grasp his opportunity and to meet his responsibility there can be but one alternative —government lending. Now that the President and congress have acted on our money there is no longer any valid reason for hesitation and the government should not be forced to become the banker for every deserving borrower in the United States."

Now Chairman Jones has changed his mind. According to a dispatch from THE TRIBUNE'S Washington bureau published on this page yesterday morning Mr. Jones has come entirely around to the bankers' side of the argument.

The difficulty, now says Mr. Jones, is not so much a reluctance of bankers to make loans to finance business and industry as a lack of demand for "good" loans by potential borrowers.

Now that Mr. Jones has answered the question for the administration the work of Prof. Jacob Viner's group of collegiate bank loan investigators is superfluous. Their job was to discover—at $11.40 per day per investigator—why banks weren't lending more money. Mr. Jones has given them their answer.

Velocity of Money Hinges On Several Factors.

Prof. Garfield V. Cox of the University of Chicago in a recent lecture before a class of bank clerks at the local chapter of the American Institute of Banking made some remarks on the subject of the velocity of money during inflation which greatly impressed his listeners.

By "velocity of money" the professor was referring to the turnover or rate of speed at which money changes hands. In times of prosperity money changes hands more rapidly than in times of depression because people spend it faster. Likewise do they spend it faster when frightened by drastic inflation. At present the velocity of money is about 60 per cent of the rate at which money was moving in 1926, which is regarded as a "normal" year.

Prof. Cox told his audience that he happened to be in Germany during the period when the printing presses were running full tilt and the German money was being further debased each day—in fact, each hour.

With prices of goods being marked up every few minutes the German citizen rushed to spend his money as soon as he got it. The professor said that he frequently saw men running from their places of employment to stores in order to buy something before their pay became worthless.

Here was a case where the velocity of money could actually be measured in miles per hour.

10,750 PHONES ADDED IN AUGUST BY BELL SYSTEM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 7.—An increase of 10,750 telephones in service during August was reported yesterday by the Bell system. A loss of 20,750 was recorded in August, last year, and a loss of 33,500 in July, this year.

Further gains are expected in the remaining four months of the year, contingent, of course, upon general business conditions. This is based on normal trends, fall being considered the best season of the year from the standpoint of telephone station expansion.

It was reported that a sizable gain is expected for 1934, with a net increase of 160,000 to July 31. Net losses of 630,000 and 1,657,000 stations were recorded in 1933 and 1932, respectively.

U.S. Asks Quiz on Crash in Silver Stocks

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 7.—Wall street ears today were straining to get the facts behind the sensational and apparently inspired drive against the so-called gold and silver stocks late yesterday in what is reported to be a vicious pool war between speculating factions.

When questioned today in Washington Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the securities and exchange commission, said that the break in United States Smelting and Refining stock and a possible pool manipulation had been drawn to the attention of the commission. How extensive the repercussions from the reported pool fight may be was indicated in the chairman's statement that the New York Stock exchange has been asked for a report on the matter and in a preliminary reply has stated that no short selling accompanied yesterday's break.

Commission Now Lacks Power.

The reason the stock exchange has been asked for a report by the commission lies in the fact that the latter will have no power to investigate alleged pools until Oct. 1.

Continued pounding of the stock today, sending it down 6¼ points at one time on a total volume of 33,700 shares, was also "authoritatively reported" in the financial community as coming from interests close to a Boston group. The stock closed 4 points lower. On the previous day the total volume was 29,500 shares on a drop of 14½ points.

The negative effect of such a break was charged with a fair volume of selling by frightened investors whose holdings were comparatively small and who feared any battle with the speculative titans.

In the grapevine of gossip, whispered over telephones and by word of mouth in the Wall street district, several versions of what happened were circulated today.

May Reveal Manipulation.

These reports, if true, not only may bare startling facts about pool manipulation in defiance of the law, it was asserted, but may stretch into high offices both in the New York financial community and in some political circles in Washington.

One version of what caused a 14 point break in shares of the United States Smelting and Refining company, which has been a leader of almost all gold and silver stocks to new high market levels in recent months, was that a powerful Boston group—said to be in touch with those who are familiar with the company's affairs—effected a market coup against the pool in the gold stocks. The drive against the stock was concentrated in the last quarter hour of an otherwise dull trading day, and it caught flat-footed those who were responsible for making the market.

Rumor Politicians Involved.

It is the understanding that the pool in the stock has been managed by one of the more successful pool managers, who has engineered other successful operations in the past, but so far has, either because of influence or because of his anonymous position, escaped the searchlight of the senate investigation and the newly created securities and exchange commission.

This operator, according to Wall street's gossip today, has had affiliated with him in this particular operation some important politicians in Washington.

How high in political circles the investigation, which probably will be started by the proper authorities, will go Wall street could only guess, but in some quarters gossip had it that it will go to the top of an executive division.

BRITISH LABOR O. K.'S SOCIALIZATION PLAN FOR STEEL INDUSTRY

WEYMOUTH, England, Sept. 7.—(AP)—The British trades union congress today unanimously adopted a report approving a scheme for the socialization of the British iron and steel industry.

By this plan an act of parliament would set up a British iron and steel corporation, to take over all enterprises manufacturing iron and steel products, from pig iron to finished articles.

This corporation would be a public body, "working solely in the public interest," with powers including the keeping of a balance between the different sections of production, and generally "to do anything considered necessary for the efficient operation and adequate development of the industry."

COMMODITY PRICES ADVANCE AGAIN TO YEAR'S HIGHEST LEVEL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 7.—Wholesale commodity prices during the week ended Sept. 1 advanced to the highest level of the year, Commissioner Lubin of the bureau of labor statistics, announced today. Recording the fifth consecutive weekly advance, the bureau's index, based on 1926 averages, rose to 77.5 from 76.9 the preceding week. This compared with 71.0 on Jan. 6, the low point of the year, and 69.7 a year ago.

"The current rise was confined to farm products, foods, textile products, chemicals, and drugs, and miscellaneous commodities," Lubin said. "The level of all commodities other than farm products and foods showed no increase. Three of the ten major groups covered by the bureau showed minor decreases and two remained unchanged.

"Farm products, with a general rise of 2.4 per cent, reached a new high for the year and the highest point since December, 1930, when the index was 75.2. Among the farm products showing marked rises were barley, corn, oats, live stock, and hay. Live stock increased over 11 per cent during the week. Foods advanced by 1.5 per cent, also reaching a new high for the year, due to advances in the prices of cereal products, dried fruits, meats, lard, and vegetable oils."

DOLLAR STEADY, BUT MORE GOLD IS SENT ABROAD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 7.—The dollar held steady today in terms of the franc, or well above the gold export point. However, approximately $2,000,000 in gold was shipped from New York for Belgium and about $4,000,000 was scheduled to leave for France. Presumably these shipments are against sales of francs made here earlier in the week when the dollar was below the gold export point.

With the franc unchanged at 6.68 cents, the dollar held at 58.65 based on the old par of the franc, or 99.30 cents, figured on the new par. The dollar gained against the pound, however, which closed at $5, off ¼ cent on the day. Most other currencies showed little change.

The price of gold in London advanced 1½ pence to 140 shillings 9½ pence a fine ounce [equivalent to $35.22]. Bars valued at $1,210,605 were sold.

INCOME IN JULY OF PULLMAN CO. UNDER YEAR AGO

The Pullman company, sleeping car company affiliate of Pullman, Inc., yesterday reported net income after taxes of $112,180 for July, compared with $120,943 for July last year. Gross for the month totaled $3,710,106, against $3,356,102 a year ago.

For the first seven months of the year there was a deficit of $60,142 after taxes, compared with a deficit of $1,594,735 in the corresponding period last year. Gross for the period was $25,356,502, against $21,190,304 a year ago.

Reserve Board Tries to Push Direct Loans

Washington, D. C., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Vigorous efforts to expand federal reserve loans to industry were planned today by the executive committee of the twelve reserve institutions in conference with members of the federal reserve board.

J. J. Thomas, acting governor of the board, said a program had been drawn up for meetings of commercial bankers at reserve centers throughout the country to speed the lending of approximately $280,000,000 authorized at the last session of congress. The loans may be for five years.

Coincidentally, the treasury announced that examiners of the national banking system, the federal reserve board and reserve banks, the Reconstruction corporation and the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation would meet in Washington Monday and Tuesday to consider development of uniformity in methods of examination by the various agencies.

Consider Other Loans.

Among the subjects to be considered will be the attitude to be taken toward home modernization loans and the obligations of the various governmental agencies which are finding an increasingly large place in bank portfolios.

J. F. T. O'Connor, controler of the currency, recently issued an order to national bank examiners that it was unnecessary to classify insured home modernization loans according to the categories in which ordinary real estate loans are placed. This and other phases of examining scope and technique will be discussed.

The examiners will be addressed by Thomas, O'Connor, Secretary Morgenthau, Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC.; Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the FDIC, and Francis M. Law of Houston, Tex., president of the American Bankers' association.

Says Work Is Speeded.

Although actual industrial loans of reserve bank funds so far have been relatively negligible, Thomas said reports received from various reserve bank governors attending the sessions today and yesterday indicated the procedure was being speeded.

In many instances, he said, the fact that reserve bank money was available for periods as long as five years had induced institutions to accept such loans for their own portfolios.

Actual cash paid out in industrial advances to date amounts to only $922,000, but the banks have approved $5,030,700 loans direct to industrial enterprises and have made commitments of $1,367,500 to commercial banks for re-lending. Industrial committees of the various reserve banks have recommended a total of $9,906,085 of direct loans.

Willys-Overland Receivers to Sell Canadian Plant

Toledo, O., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—Permission to sell the plant and equipment of Willys-Overland, Ltd., Toronto, to the Canadian Bank of Commerce was granted receivers of the Willys-Overland company by the United States District court here today. Willys-Overland is to be released from liability on a note for $500,000 it had guaranteed for the dominion subsidiary and will receive $25,000 in cash. The Acme Gear and Drill company of Toronto will take over the plant.

Weir Asserts Steel Letdown Temporary; Predicts Upturn

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 7.—(AP)—E. T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel corporation, said today he is confident the current decline in steel operation is "temporary" and that business ultimately will improve.

Returning to his task of guiding the destinies of the $150,000,000 independent concern after a month's vacation in Bermuda, the 59 year old steel man declared:

"When I went away in July business was slowing down and I hoped upon returning to find a pickup. Instead, I find operations have slipped back even further.

Blames Labor Unrest.

"But I am not discouraged. I interpret the condition to be temporary, due to a lack of confidence caused in a great measure by labor unrest. I believe that ultimately business will improve."

He pointed to the fact Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer, has announced he is spending "many millions" on new finishing mills and said that "We, too, have called for bids for a $12,000,000 expansion in Michigan."

"I think we are doing this for the same reason Ford is doing it," he added. "Irrespective of any administration, in the long run these operations must continue. Our 123,000,000 peoples' needs must be supplied. All this loose talk about 'revolution' and 'upheavals' if this or that isn't done is the bunk."

Opposes Cutting Hours, Pay.

Weir said his company does not favor reducing the working hours and income of its employes and that National Steel will continue as at present.

He added that he believes a "final court interpretation" of section 7A of the National Recovery act would "go a long way toward restoring confidence and business." His concern last spring defied the old labor board's interpretation of this disputed section and is defendant now in a suit brought by the government which may bring a definite ruling in October.

CHAIN STORES AUGUST SALES AT HIGH LEVEL

Spiegel, May, Stern Sets Record.

In July the company reported sales of $15,890,560, an increase of 16.4 per cent over July, 1933, and June sales showed a gain of 19.6 per cent over a year ago. For the seven months ended Aug. 31 the sales totaled $129,612,867, an increase of $32,169,403, or 33.01 per cent, over the $97,443,464 reported for the corresponding period of last year.

Walgreen Gains 6.4 Per Cent.

Walgreen company sales of $4,486,306 in August were 6.4 per cent above those of August, 1933, when the total was $4,216,887. In July the sales amounted to $4,440,318, a gain of 6.2 per cent over a year ago. For the first eight months of this year the total was $34,953,137, a rise of $5,152,115, or 17.8 per cent over the $29,801,022 reported for the corresponding period of 1933. These figures do not include stores operated at A Century of Progress. The number of units in operation as of Aug. 31 was 482, compared with 468 a year ago.

Spiegel, May, Stern company reported the largest August sales in the history of the company and announced the declaration of two quarterly dividends of $1.62½ each to reduce accumulations on the 6½ per cent cumulative preferred stock. The dividends are payable Oct. 5 to stock of record Sept. 20.

Total sales for the month amounted to $1,577,692, an increase of 134.8 per cent over the $671,895 reported for the corresponding month of last year. In addition to being the best for that month, it was the nineteenth consecutive month in which net sales showed an increase over a year ago. For the first eight months sales totaled $13,724,055, an increase of 140.9 per cent over the $5,695,660 in the corresponding period of 1933.

S. H. Kress & Co. reported a total of $5,574,040 in sales for August, an increase of 2.9 per cent over $5,416,329 for August, 1933. HOLLYWOOD AT FAIR BANKRUPT, SAY CREDITORS

The Illinois Hollywood corporation, owner of the Hollywood concession at the World's Fair, was forced into involuntary bankruptcy yesterday on the petition of four creditors. Included in the latter was Arthur Lake, screen player, who stated his unpaid salary arrears amounted to $1,071. Other parties to the bill are Edna Sinclair, another west coast actor, the Fort Dearborn Photo company of Chicago, and David Schwartz, a local show director. The claims aggregate $2,453. No estimate of liabilities or assets was contained in the petition.

Federal Judge John P. Barnes authorized A. J. Fitzgerald, receiver for the Dutch Village at A Century of Progress, to solicit bids for an auction in liquidation and submit recommendations for disposal to the court.

Hotel Churchill, Inc., 1255 North State street, was named in a petition for reorganization under section 77B of the amended bankruptcy law. Assets were estimated at $815,000, including the value of the building put at $750,000. Liabilities of $945,000 consist mainly of funded debt, according to the petition filed on behalf of creditors.

FORD'S CHICAGO PLANT HOLDS TO CAPACITY BASIS

The Chicago plant of the Ford Motor company will continue operations at capacity through September to keep pace with orders, the company announced yesterday. Employment will remain at 3,000 workmen on a full schedule of five days a week. This reverses the usual trend.

Official new passenger car registrations announced yesterday for the first eight months of the year in Cook county showed Ford leading low priced automobiles with sales of 12,041, a gain of 118 per cent over the 5,511 units a year ago.

NRA APPROVES $2,113,159 AUTO CODE BUDGET

Washington, D. C., Sept. 7.—(AP)—The NRA announced today that it had approved a budget of $2,113,159 for code administration for the motor retailing trade, provided "that no part of any assessment levied hereunder shall be passed on to the consumer."

The announcement said approval of the budget is subject to the further provisos that previous conditions made known by the division of research and planning be adhered to, and that collections and expenditures amount to only eleven-twelfths of the budget.

COMMUNICATION BOARD SELECTS DIVISION HEADS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 7.—The federal communications commission today named directors of its three major divisions as follows: John Killeen of New York, director of the broadcasting division; Robert B. Bartley of Texas, director of telegraph, and A. G. Patterson of Alabama, director of telephone.

Mr. Killeen was contact man between the General Electric company and its holding companies for 15 years. From 1924 to 1933 he was publisher of a weekly newspaper devoted to the discussion of state and national subjects.

Mr. Bartley was placed in charge of the telegraph division as a result of his experiences in investigating the utilities holding companies as a member of the staf of a house committee. He was statistician for Dr. Walter M. W. Splawn during the extensive study of the ownership and control of the utilities.

Mr. Patterson's appointment also was partly as a reward for services performed for congressional committees. His latest work was as chief investigator for the senate committee investigating ocean and air mail contracts. However, he served for eight years, 1920 to 1928, as president of the Alabama public utilities commission which, according to estimates here, became one of the outstanding regulatory bodies in the United States.

SCHACHT TO GIVE OUT "NEW PLAN" NEXT TUESDAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Sept. 7.—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, economic dictator of Germany, announces that he will proclaim his "new plan" to the world next Tuesday. The plan, which deals with import and distribution of raw materials, is based on the principle that Germany shall import only so much raw material as she can pay for.

The real aim of the plan is to place a weapon in Schacht's hands which will enable him to force barter agreements with other countries while supplying Germany with raw materials.

The first step was taken today when decrees were issued placing the entire trade and industry of Germany under Schacht's thumb. In addition to control of the departments already supervising raw materials, including textiles, rubber, basic metals, and tobacco, 14 new control departments were established.

TRADE LEADERS URGE EASING OF U. S. RAIL RULE

Criticize Past Acts of Government.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 7.—(AP)—The Chamber of Commerce of the United States today came to the aid of the nation's railroads, sharply criticizing present and past federal treatment of the carriers, and calling for a hands-off policy by the government on railroad management.

H. I. HARRIMAN. [Harris & Erwing Photo.]

Henry I. Harriman, president of the chamber, asserted in a statement that the interstate commerce commission had so restricted rail earnings that the carriers were in critical financial need.

The pending application of the roads for a $170,000,000 rate increase, he said, emphasizes "the stake of American business in the national transportation policies now under discussion."

Says Public Will Pay.

"Whether or not the increase is granted," he said, "the American public will in either case pay a penalty, largely due to shortcomings in the government's past treatment of the railroads. If granted, the public will pay directly in the increased rates. If refused, they will pay in further depression of this major industry, with decreases in earnings, employment, and quality of service."

Harriman spoke at a time when both the carriers and administration officials were whipping into definite shape proposals to be presented to the next congress.

Joseph B. Eastman, federal coördinator of transportation, worked today on plans that, if adopted, might make wide changes in the present transportation set-up and the effort for rehabilitation of the carriers. Eastman, holding opposite views from those of Harriman, is a proponent of more rather than less government regulation.

Wants Federal Control.

He has already placed before congress proposals that the ICC take over control of all forms of transportation, including rail, highway, and air.

He also presented a plan for direct government control of the railroads, and another involving government ownership. The time is not ripe for such ownership at present, he holds.

"As a cardinal principle, the government never should, under the guise of regulation, invade the proper field of railroad management," Harriman said. "Since the war there have been many departures from that principle, adversely affecting railroad revenues, facilities, and operating costs.

"In the first place, the regulating authorities failed to carry out revenue features of the transportation act intended to improve the carriers' financial stability. To be sure, after investigation, they determined 5 per cent as a fair return, but subsequently they so restricted rates that railroad earnings never attained that figure."

Returns Below Needs.

In fact, he declared, the return to the railroads as a whole for the period from 1923 to 1929, when trafic volume was relatively high, was in the aggregate a billion dollars short of the amount which the I. C. C. determined as needed to maintain them on a sound financial basis.

"In addition," he continued, "the government during the last four years has repeatedly called on the railroads to disregard their own interest and the shippers' interest by making special contributions to the public welfare, notably the continuation of improvement work to assist in maintaining industrial activity and employment, the maintenance of wage rates much longer than to most industries."

As a permanent policy of railroad regulation, he said, the chamber advocated the following:

"The railroads should be freed from government interference with the proper functions of management, including responsibility for operating costs.

Asks Reasonable Profits.

"The interstate commerce commission should give them opportunity to earn cost of service plus a reasonable return such that in time of business activity they will be able to reduce indebtedness and build up adequate reserves.

"Rate policies, including the long and short haul clause, should permit greater flexibility in rates to meet requirements of both shippers and carriers.

"Competing forms of transportation should be reasonably regulated to eliminate cut-throat competition and to enable each type of transportation to perform the services for which it is best fitted.

"Voluntary consolidation subject to commission approval, delayed many years by failure of the commission to take preliminary steps required by law, should be encouraged where justified through economic efficiency."

GOLD AND SILVER SHARES' BREAK UPSETS MARKET

U. S. Smelting Sinks Four Points More.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 7.—Fresh weakness in gold and silver stocks bore the share list to still lower levels today. Heavy selling broke out anew in United States Smelting around the noon hour and the white metals group leader which had shown signs of bracing up after its sensational tumble in yesterday's performance went down another 6 points on a turnover of more than 33,000 shares, but recovered 2 points before the close. Homestake Mining dropped 15 points on the first sale in several days, and Alaska Juneau, which was riding the crest of a fresh wave of popularity earlier in the week, pierced its 1934 low on a fractional decline.

Other metals were weak and inclined to give way easily. Howe Sound dropped another point to finish five below its Wednesday peak and American Smelting followed the group leader down a couple of points. McIntyre, however, recovered its balance after an early afternoon retreat and managed to edge fractionally higher at the close, as did Cerro de Pasco, which had as little resistance as any when the big storm was on yesterday.

Traders Ignore Pool Rumor.

Reports that the selling attack on "big" smelting was a pool engineered affair and that an investigation of the affair was in prospect had little effect on dealings in the shares one way or the other so far as surface indications showed.

As in the preceding session, volume picked up as the selling gathered momentum, and virtually all departments of the list made for lower ground. Losses generally ranged from a fraction to around 3 points.

Speculators were particularly bearish on alcohol stocks, and such issues as United States Industrial Alcohol, Schenley, National Distillers, and Commercial Alcohol were sold down 1 to more than 2 points. Some of the sugars which were in such high favor for a while after the new tariff treaty with Cuba was signed broke sharply. American Sugar, for one, sagged to 66¼, a loss of nearly 3 points on the day. Along last week the stock was selling around 72.

Early Rail Gains Lost.

The rails put up something of a front for a while, but early gains running to around a point were gradually rubbed out, and the group as a whole finished from a fraction to a point lower. Union Pacific managed to retain a fraction of its newly won ground, and New York Central succeeded in rounding out the session unchanged.

A few of the oils were dumped for a loss of a point or so, including Seaboard, Texas, and Houston. As usual, however, activity in this sector was secondary to that in other quarters.

The utilities were spotty most of the time, but the noes had it on the final roundup. Farm implement and mail order shares followed the trend.

There was little in the front page news to influence the course of the market. The textile strike and talk that it may develop into a general tieup of industry continued to be a matter of major concern, but so far as the dispatches revealed the situation was little changed from that of yesterday. Week-end trade reviews were generally hopeful, as is their bent. Money, as usual, was easy and plentiful—for those of a mind to speculate.

SECURITIES LAW HOLDS PROBLEM FOR EXCHANGES

What to Do if Firms Don't Register Stocks?

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 7.—Though it now appears that the vast majority of companies whose shares are listed on the New York Stock exchange will have applied for temporary registration under the new securities and exchange act, it seems equally certain, exchange authorities admit, that a fairly substantial number will be found still reticent to act when Sept. 13 has rolled around.

Several reasons have been put forth to explain the laggardly action of corporations falling under the new order, but these are not all satisfying to people who are familiar with the situation. Extended vacations of corporation officials is set forth as one logical reason for the delay. Support for this belief is found in a degree by the speeding up of applications that has followed the passing of the summer-end holiday.

Want to Know Rules.

But there are people in the street who have other ideas about the matter. Among this element the basic reason for hesitation is declared to be an indisposition on the part of corporation officials to allow themselves to be placed "on the spot," to use the parlance of the day.

Briefly, these officials are declared to be averse to applying for temporary registration in advance of the publication by the securities and exchange commission of the rules and regulations which will govern trading. Such rules are in process of promulgation and, as Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the commission, declared the other day, are designed chiefly to eliminate "manipulation." Corporation officials, however, or at least a goodly number of them, are said to be determined to await their actual publication rather than find themselves forced to withdraw from registration afterward.

Problem for Stock Exchange.

The situation admittedly is one which raises serious questions for the stock exchange itself. What action will the latter institution take, it is asked, in the instance of corporations which do not register in the allotted time? Should the exchange move to strike from its list shares of corporations which fail to register, will it be subject to suit by the corporation or its stockholders?

Against this it is argued that the law, and so far as securities and stock exchanges are concerned that includes the securities and exchange act of 1934, supersedes all existing laws of private institutions governing operations of the sort.

Up to last night only 502 of the 1,412 issues had applied for registration under the act. Several additional applications have been received, it was said, but some of them were incorrectly filled out and a check-up will be necessary to determine just what percentage of the total is still missing.

STEEL WORKERS FAVOR UNION IN PLANT ELECTION

Huntington, W. Va., Sept. 7.—[Special.]—In the government controlled election among employés of the Huntington Steel company today, the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers won the right to represent the workers in matters of collective bargaining. The union received 237 votes, the company union got 134 and 36 votes were either given for individuals, challenged or spoiled.

The election was the first direct test between an "outside" union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and an "inside" union. As a result the "outside" union will represent all employés under the majority clause laid down by the national labor relations board.

The union has petitioned for an election at the Portsmouth plant of the Wheeling Steel corporation and a hearing was held on Aug. 20, although no decision has been announced yet. At the hearing counsel for the steel company indicated that the constitutionality of the labor relations board would be attacked in the courts.

EASTERN BUYING BOOSTS WHEAT ANOTHER CENT

September Barley Soars Five Cents.

Early weakness in wheat which carried prices about a cent under the previous close was routed in the final hour as a wave of eastern buying flooded into the pit. The market rallied quickly and closed at a net gain of about a cent.

Corn was neglected, although it, too, showed an upturn for the day, while oats encountered a good demand following initial profit taking and closed fractionally higher. The volume in all pits was light except near the close.

Intermittent profit taking appeared throughout the session, but this was absorbed by steady investment and mill buying, a considerable part of the former reflecting reinstatement of long holdings previously liquidated.

September Barley Up 5 Cents.

September barley provided a feature near the close by soaring 5 cents, its maximum allowable limit, while more deferred deliveries rose only 2 to 2¼ cents.

At the close wheat was ¾ cent to 1 cent higher net. Corn was unchanged to ¾ cent improved and oats gained ¼ cent to ⅝ cent. Rye lost ⅛ cent to ¾ cent as the result of selling pressure, said to be a hedging operation for a million bushels to be imported from Poland.

Winnipeg again absorbed hedging pressure in excellent fashion and pushed ½ cent to ⅞ cent higher. Liverpool closed ¼ cent to ⅜ cent above Thursday, Rotterdam was ⅝ cent lower to 1 cent higher and Buenos Aires gained a small fraction.

Cash Markets Slow at Start.

Cash markets were ignored in early trading despite sustained strength which has characterized their trend recently. The premium on hard wheat here moved ¼ cent to ½ cent more above the September future. Number one hard sold at a premium of 7½ cents and number two at 7 cents to 7¼ cents while that on number two red wheat was 1½ cents. A car of number one northern, one of the few cars of spring wheat to reach this market recently, sold at a premium of 10 cents.

Marked reflection of drouth damage was contained in a report that a moderate sized cargo of wheat was being loaded at Buffalo for shipment to Duluth. This is presumably durum wheat and intended for northwestern mills. A movement of this character, at a time when the harvest is normally at its peak and supplies are plentiful, is highly unusual.

Import Rumors Groundless.

Rumors early in the day of importations of wheat from Argentina proved groundless. The United Kingdom bought large quantities of that country's wheat over night and this apparently caused the import rumors.

A steadily strengthening situation in cash wheat, liberal depletion of red wheat stocks here and continued strength in hard wheat, are stimulating sentiment for higher prices, although it is believed unlikely any great improvement will occur until after publication of the United States and Canadian government crop reports early next week. The market has advanced more than five cents this week, which probably has weakened the price situation slightly and time may be needed to consolidate the gains.

PRICES OF COTTON FUTURES DECLINE 2 TO 8 POINTS

Cotton trade yesterday was not large with a fair amount of evening up on both sides for the coming government report. Pressure from the south which was hedging against purchases in the interior, and better crop comments from Texas and Oklahoma had some effect, and while prices held within narrow limits the close was about the bottom with net losses of 2 to 8 points in the various markets.

The government report will be issued at 11 a. m. Chicago time today with the trade looking for a yield of around 9,025,000 bales, compared with 9,165,000 bales a month ago. Chicago will be the only American cotton market open after the report is issued. New Orleans and New York close at 11 a. m. Chicago time on Saturdays. Spot cotton was unchanged to 5 points lower with New Orleans and Galveston 13.30 cents and New York and Houston 13.35 cents per pound. Prices follow:

LARD FUTURES LESS ACTIVE, BUT UNDERTONE IS FIRM

Trade in provision futures yesterday was less active than recently, but the market showed a firm undertone. The trade has reports of a good domestic demand for cash lard and also strong intimations some export business was under way. Despite free profit taking by longs lard prices held within narrow limits with cash interests absorbing the offerings, removing hedges against shipping sales. Lard closed unchanged from the previous day and bellies were unchanged to 5 cents lower.

Cash lard was quoted at $9.50, loose $9.60, and leaf at $10.50, while bellies were $13.92. Average price of hogs at Chicago yesterday of around $9.25, which includes the processing tax of $2.25 per 100 pounds, was somewhat below the cash lard quotation. The latter includes the processing tax of $2.47 per 100 pounds. Prices follow:

WHEAT DEMAND NOW INDICATED BY PREMIUMS

The cash wheat situation has now become the major influence. Large premiums that spot wheat is bringing over futures prices are proof of the extent of consumer demand. Futures have always followed cash prices and there is no reason to doubt that they will not catch up with this year's parade. One reason for the lagging tendency is the lack of confidence which dominates speculative minds, but should confidence be even partially restored a revolutionary change is not unlikely.

Brokerage houses are placing increasing emphasis on the lard market. Cash interests have sold liberal amounts and are now buying in their hedges. It was reported yesterday that several large orders entered the lard pit from British sources.

Minneapolis reported yesterday the government was buying wheat, oats, rye, barley, and flax for use as seed directly from the trading tables there, paying a premium of 3 to 5 cents over the December futures for oats. About a million bushels were said to have been bought in this way.

The perennial chinch bug again made his appearance yesterday, this time in a Decatur, Ill., wire to James E. Bennett & Co.

It was reported farmers filling silos were working with their heads covered with cheese cloth, as each stalk was covered with thousands of bugs. Around the ensilage cutter the bugs made a blanket a half inch thick, while the sides of the silos were covered. This kind of silage, according to the University of Illinois, will not harm live stock but will be poor in quality.

Apparently the Agricultural Adjustment administration's plan to guarantee farmers $8 a ton on corn fodder or stover, which heretofore has had no commercial value, is not considered profiteering in Washington, D. C., but the feeder who must pay this price thinks differently, comments Bartlett Frazier company.

Flour output by Minneapolis mills for the week ended Sept. 1 totaled 131,917 barrels, which is 43 per cent of capacity.

Broomhall, international crop authority, says it is now confirmed that yields of wheat in Russia this year are irregular. The middle Volga and eastern regions have large crops but harvesting is progressing so slowly and carelessly that enormous losses are being experienced.

PRICES OF HOGS AND FRESH PORK DECLINE AGAIN

Market Sinks for Nine Consecutive Days.

Hogs and fresh pork prices receded further yesterday, but the decline in the latter was milder than it has been any time this week. The movement of supplies into the leading slaughtering points dropped off as a result of the setback in the hog market since the middle of last week, with yesterday's aggregate receipts slightly below the extremely light supplies of a week ago.

The run at Chicago yesterday at 14,000 compared with 14,284 the previous Friday. Only 51,000 arrived at the eleven leading markets, this being about as low as the Friday supply has ever been at this time of the year. A year ago there were 115,000 commercial hogs at the eleven markets.

All Interests Buy Slowly.

All interests bought hogs slowly at 10 to 25 cents decline, the underweights under 170 pounds showing the sharpest reductions, with the close on pigs and lightest hogs mostly 25 cents lower. The trend of the hog market has been lower for the last nine days, and yesterday's closing quotations revealed losses of 55 to 60 cents compared with the high spot of the year established Wednesday of last week.

Packers lowered the live costs of their top grades of hogs to $9.70 on yesterday's break, including the $2.25 tax to the federal government, which left $7.45 as the price farmers obtained for their stock. Of the $9.25 average that packers paid, tax included, farmers got $7.00. Yesterday's market touched the lowest price levels since Aug. 23.

Few Cattle Arrive.

Hardly enough commercial cattle remained on the market yesterday to establish a fair list of quotations after the government owned stock had been deducted from the receipts.

The steer contingent consisted of odds and ends selling mostly below the $8.00 line. No load lots sold above $8.15, although odd head of good kinds ranged up to $9.25. Sellers cleared the yards of an accumulation of cows at barely steady rates, selling most of the fair to good grassy kinds at $3.00 to $3.75 and some corn fed cows at $4.00 and above.

Lamb prices advanced 25 cents to the highest point since Monday of last week. Selected natives ranged up to $7.25, while packers bought freely of the good grades around $7.00. Buck lambs sold at the usual $1.00 discount from the top ewe and wether lambs or mostly around $6.00. Feeders were unchanged, with the top classes from the western supply at $6.00. Top grades of slaughter lambs from the range supply cashed at $7.00.

Why work in air that's Drier than the Sahara?

It's a fact that desert air registers an average relative humidity of about 23, while most offices record the dangerous Winter reading of about 15.
